U.S. Speeds Warplanes To Bases in Pacific; Japanese Warn Britain

Officials Express Growing Concern Over Situation In the Far East

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Swift reinforcement of American air defenses in the Pacific was reported to be under way yesterday as Government officials here viewed the Far Eastern situation with growing concern.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, was said to have told a secret session of the Senate Military Affairs Committee that fighting planes of the latest type were being rushed to mid-Pacific bases.

Some committee members said that he described the situation in the Far East as "serious" and assured them that the War Department had no intention of stripping the Army of war planes to quicken deliveries to Great Britain.

British Want Bombers

These sources said Marshall had told them that the British were no longer anxious about pursuit plane deliveries, that they felt they could keep control of the air over their homeland in daylight hours. The chief present needs of the British are for long-range bombers, one member said Marshall testified.

Several of the group declared that the Chief of Staff had said the Army was transferring some of its warplanes to the Navy for use in the Pacific fleet, but aviation circles here doubted if this were true. It was pointed out that Army planes could not be used aboard Navy aircraft carriers as special carriages and arresting gear are required for carrier operations.

News that the Army was rushing plane reinforcements to Hawaii was followed by unconfirmed reports that similar steps were being taken to augment the air defenses of the Philippines.

Liner Becomes Transport

Word of the Army's action followed by a day House approval of a bill authorizing the Navy to develop bases at Guam and Samoa, in the Far Pacific.

Meanwhile, the Navy Department announced that it was adding the historic liner George Washington to its transport fleet.

Part of the "ghost ship" fleet at Solomons Island, Md., for the last 10 years, the former North German Lloyd vessel will give the Navy a total of 15 troop transports. Until the emergency, only two were in service.

In and after the World War, the George Washington made 18 round trips across the Atlantic, carrying 48,000 American soldiers to France and bringing 39,000 back.

The vessel carried President Wilson and members of the Peace Conference delegation to France.

Wheel Strike Shuts Down 2 Auto Plants

By the Associated Press

Automotive divisions of the Packard Motor Car Co. will close down this morning, officials announced last night at Detroit because of a shortage of wheels resulting from a strike at the Lansing, Mich., plant of the Motor Wheel Corporation. The closing will make 7,500 men idle.

At Lansing, Mich., the Fisher Body and Oldsmobile plants closed down suddenly last night, making 4,700 men idle in addition to 2,500 already off work because of the unrelated Motor Wheel strike.

At the Fisher Body plant of General Motors Corporation, the management said a "slow down" had forced orders to stop work and the Oldsmobile division of G. M. shut down for lack of materials.

The Motor Wheel Corporation has $1,400,000 in defense orders, 2,500 men have been idle.

Both the management and the C. I. O. United Auto Workers local said that the Fisher plant would reopen this morning. The U. A. W.-C. I. O. has a contract at Fisher Body.

Matsuoka Tells British to Curb Activity or Face 'Countermeasures'

By the United Press

Tokyo (Friday), Feb. 21.—Foreign Minister Matsuoka has warned British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden that a continuation of British military moves in southeast Asia may compel this country to take "countermeasures," the newspaper Asahi said today.

In his long note to the British foreign secretary early this week, Asahi said, Matsuoka gave a complete explanation of the Japanese viewpoint toward recent moves in the Pacific Ocean area, and reiterated this country's peaceful intensions and readiness to settle all conflicts by mediation and negotiation.

Japan is ready to assist in mediation of any conflict anywhere, Matsuoka asserted, according to the newspaper.

Urges "Prudent Attitude"

The foreign minister emphasized, however, that if Britain continues to engage in "various operations" including "elaborate military moves," on the supposition that "a grave situation is inevitable in the Pacific Ocean and the China Sea area, then Japan naturally will be compelled to take countermeasures."

The Japanese government strongly desires that Britain assume a "prudent attitude," Asahi quoted Matsuoka as asserting, adding that the foreign minister's message to Eden "clarifies Japan's peaceful intentions."

Asahi said Matsuoka is expected soon to appear in Parliament and explain the circumstances which caused him to order last Tuesday's mediation declaration and his subsequent note to Eden so that the Japanese people may be acquainted with the Government's plans and its readiness to act decisively for peace and stability with all the power at its command.

(London revealed Wednesday that the British foreign office had received a note from Japan explaining that nation's attitude toward events in the Pacific and its readiness to act as mediator in any world conflict. Britain is consulting the United States before replying, it was said.)

Ardently Desire Peace.

The Domei news agency said Matsuoka told Japanese newspapermen last night that he had not made any specific proposal to Britain to mediate the European war but had merely restated Japan's advocacy of mediatory measures to ease the entire world situation. Japan's most ardent desire is for world peace, Matsuoka said.

The government's attitude toward war-like developments in Washington, London, Singapore and Melbourne continued noticeably restrained today but newspapers and the public were increasingly restive and feared that Britain and the United States were planning the use of force to prevent success of Japan's efforts to form an east Asian economic bloc.

Indicative of general feeling Asahi said yesterday that the United States is increasingly active in French Indo-China and is working with Britain in an effort to establish a "defense line" in that country against Japan's economic advance before the Indo-China—Thailand peace conference is concluded.

Postoffice Seizes 15 Tons OfPropaganda

Bulk of 75,000 Pieces Confiscated Is From Russia and Germany

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

More than 75,000 pieces of foreign propaganda mail, weighing in excess of 15 tons, have been confiscated by postal authorities in the last two months, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker disclosed last night.

He stated that most of the material seized came from Germany and Russia by way of the Pacific. Some was sent from Japan, he said, and "small amounts" from England and Italy.

The propaganda mail was confiscated on the ground that it was "nonmailable," in that it emanated from agents of foreign countries living abroad who have not registered as such with the State Department.

Expected to Register

Walker, who made the disclosure in a letter to Chairman McKellar, of the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads, warned that he expected foreign agents to register as soon as they learn why the propaganda they sent was declared unmailable. Once registered, he added, the agents will thus be complying with the Foreign Agents Registration Act, "whereupon the material in question will again be mailable."

Commenting on the anticipated future flow of propaganda mail, Walker said he believed that the policy of disclosure and exposure of foreign activities rather than attempting to suppress them was "entirely sound." The remedy against future flow, he intimated, lay in

Private Critically Wounded in Target Pit at Fort Belvoir

A Fort Belvoir Army private was reported in a "critical condition" in the post hospital last night after being struck by rifle bullet splinters Wednesday during target practice.

The injured man is John J. Lombardo, 26, of Pittsburgh, who is attached to the Fifth Engineers.

Lombardo is said by post officers to have been injured while working in the target range pits. The injury, they said, was caused by splinters from a bullet which ricocheted.

Aid Bill's Pilots Reject A.E.F. Ban

Senate Is Told The Amendment Would Weaken U. S. Foreign Policy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Senate managers of the lend-lease bill last night tentatively rejected a proposed declaration against use of troops abroad and other proposed major modifying changes in the aid-Britain measure.

A strategy conference on the measure considered the Ellender amendment containing the troop ban, but decided acceptance of the change would give a "false impression" of the bill's contents.

The amendment, regarded as strongest in voting power of pending compromise efforts, says no "additional powers" are conferred on the President to use land or naval forces outside of Western Hemisphere or territorial limits.

Believe It Is "Meaningless"

The Administration has repeatedly said it contemplates no use of troops overseas. Leaders were said to have opposed any legislative stipulation to this effect for two reasons:

First, the President's constitutional powers as commander-in-chief of the armed forces would render the amendment "meaningless."

Second, it would psychologically weaken this Government's foreign policy position both in the Far East and in Europe.

Confident of from 71 to 74 votes out of 96 for the bill on final passage, Administration strategists are reliably understood to have taken the position that further modifying changes not only would weaken the bill but would not add materially to the majority for the measure as now drafted.

Reynolds Opposes Bill

These developments meanwhile marked the Senate's fourth day of debate on the bill:

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, making the only speech of the day on the measure, announced he would vote against it. Reynolds said he was "convinced that its passage may lead us directly toward, and to a declaration of war."

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, disclosed opponents of the bill will finish their scheduled speeches next Tuesday, after Majority Leader Barkley complained that opponents, in delaying their speeches, were creating a Senate "hiatus" on the measure.

Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, criticized Britain for "driving a hard bargain" on United States Caribbean bases, citing newspaper reports of difficulties on locating base sites.

British Reported Landing Off Dardanelles as Germans Bridge Danube to Bulgaria

Troops Will Enter Bulgaria in 10 Days, British Sources At Sofia Expect

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Feb. 20.—German army engineers have begun erecting pontoon bridges across the Danube River, and according to reports circulating in both Belgrade and Sofia tonight, Rumania and Bulgaria have been linked in at least three places.

It is understood that one of these bridges crosses the river at a point between Turnu Magurele and Nikopol, and another between Giurgiu and Rustchuk. Danubian traffic along a front of about 60 miles between these ports has apparently been suspended.

Information from Sofia states that a few hundred Nazi engineering troops walked across the bridges to Bulgaria and supervised their firm anchorage. The pontoons were then tested for strength with tanks and heavy trucks.

Late tonight there was no indication that the German army was actually entering Bulgaria, but rumors coming from all quarters make this affair extremely imminent. British sources at Sofia believe the actual entry will come in the next ten days.

"Tourist" Traffic Increases

Large supplies of food have been stored at nine strategic points in Bulgaria, according to an unconfirmed report which claimed that such stores must be completed by Tuesday. Heavy new infiltration by young German male tourists has apparently been accelerated during the last 24 hours. The bridges newly repaired on the Struma Valley Road to Greece are said to be undergoing stiff tests. Further civil mobilization measures for the Bulgarian population are anticipated.

Nervousness would seem to be deliberately instigated, at least to some degree, by the Germans, who all day long were circulating reports in Sofia that Yugoslavia has finally begun to mobilize and that four military classes had been called up. These reports entirely lack confirmation so far.

Germany is now clearly making great preparations to help out her battered Italian ally. Reports to the Yugoslav frontier say that 14 trainloads of material entered Italy this morning from the Reich, passing from the three big Austrian bases of Graz, Klagenfurt and Villach, through Tarvisio and Udine to Trieste.

Turks May Pass British Fleet Through Straits to Nazi Flank

By the United Press

Istanbul, Feb. 20.—A Turkish foreign office source intimated tonight that Turkey's new non-aggression accord with Bulgaria would be repudiated if German armed forces were permitted to use Bulgarian territory as a base for attacking Greece.

If Adolf Hitler attempted to strike across Bulgaria against Greece, it was suggested in British quarters, Turkey might declare war under her alliance with Britain and Greece.

In such an event, it was said, the Turks probably would confine themselves to defensive warfare, for which their army is best adapted, but would permit British warships to pass through the Dardanelles.

British warships moving through the Dardanelles would be able to bombard Germany's supply lines and the Black Sea ports and naval bases of Rumania and Bulgaria. Meanwhile, according to the suggestion of British quarters in Istanbul, British troops would establish bases in Turkey.

Guarding the Straits

By Leon Kay
United Press Staff Writer

Belgrade, Feb. 20.—British forces intended to resist any attack through Bulgaria on Greece's Aegean seaport of Salonika or the Dardanelles were reported tonight to have occupied and to be hastily fortifying the strategic Greek island of Lemnos in the upper Aegean.

Germany's huge army in Rumania is testing pontoon bridges on the Danube between Rumania and Bulgaria, according to reports reaching Belgrade tonight, and marching troops as well as heavily-loaded lorries are said to have entered Bulgaria at Ruschuk, Mikopol and Vidin.

The British were said to be moving swiftly to establish themselves in strongholds around Greece, including the fortification of Lemnos as a strong naval and air base, before the Germans can strike across Bulgaria and down upon Greece.

Near Dardanelles

The rocky, 175-mile-square island which is only 40 miles from the entrance to the Dardanelles and 38 miles from the tip of the Salonika Peninsula, is being hastily converted into a strong naval and air base, according to usually well-informed British quarters here.

From Lemnos the British armed forces would be in a choice position to hit back at any German attack either on Salonika or the Dardanelles.

Salonika is only 120 miles from Lemnos, from which British bombers easily could fly about 80 miles northward to the Bulgarian frontier at its closest point or less than 300 miles to Ploesti in the heart of the German-dominated oil fields of Rumania.

(An Athens dispatch Thursday said that many "newly arrived" British Hurricane fighting planes—each mounting four machine guns on each wing—were staging an aerial circus over Athens and that the Greeks had been greatly impressed by the display of new British aid.)

Balkan quarters contended that the Dardanelles seemed secure inasmuch as the Turks—and Russia also—were presumed to have been

Berlin Reports 16 British Ships Hit in 48 Hours

One Is a Destroyer; 12 Merchant Vessels Believed to Have Sunk

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Feb. 20.—Fifteen merchant ships in the service of Britain and a British destroyer have shuddered to the crash of torpedoes and bombs within the last 48 hours, according to a compilation tonight of German reports, and 12 of the merchant ships are known or believed to have been lost.

The 15 merchant ships totaled about 65,000 tons.

This surge of activity in the counterblockade of Britain was marked by the fact that none of the reports came from submarines. And surface raiding was represented only by the report of one of Germany's fleet of mosquito torpedoboats which dashed into the fogbound southern reaches of the North Sea.

There, the high command said, the crew of this fast little craft torpedoed two merchant ships, verified their destruction and escaped.

As for the bombed ships, the Germans said they had to rely on what could be immediately observed by the attacking planes. Thus the reports on them varied

British Cross Key River In Somaliland

Surmount Obstacle To Control of Italian Area; Bengasi Raided

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Feb. 20.—After several days' hard fighting British troops yesterday crossed the Juba River, drove off Italian counterattacks and began to move forward on the northeast side of the big stream, according to today's official communique.

Thus the biggest obstacle to domination of southern Italian Somaliland has been removed, for the Italians had retained bridgeheads and staged a desperate defense.

German warplanes raided Bengasi twice yesterday, and in the fighting raging over and around this captured Libyan seaport the Nazi machines shot down two Hurricanes (British fighter planes), lost a Heinkel bomber and had a Junkers bomber badly damaged.

The first raid was shortly after dawn, antiaircraft fire bringing down the Heinkel. The second attack, coming in the afternoon by Junkers dive-bombers escorted by Messerschmitt fighters, was intercepted by Royal Air Force fighters, which damaged the Junkers. The British loss occurred when a forma-

'Already in War—Everybody Knows It,' Miss Thompson Says

DOROTHY THOMPSON (RIGHT) WITH MRS. ROOSEVELT

Dorothy Thompson, noted news commentator, told a large Town Hall audience last night that the United States "already is in the war—everybody knows it."

She said that Hitler was out to smash the pluto-democratic world, and that he had "declared war against us."

"A great power has set out to change the political and economic system of the globe," Miss Thompson said, "We're on that globe, and therefore we are in the war."

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt introduced Miss Thompson to the audience, which was so much larger than usual that the meeting was held in Constitution Hall. The First Lady praised Miss Thompson as a "very charming person" who made people think.

"We know she will tell us what she believes," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "We know that if she changes her mind or finds something new, she will say so. We know that she will do that whether it hurts her or not. For that reason we trust her."

Later on Mrs. Roosevelt, as chairman of the Town Hall panel, read and submitted question that were sent up to the stage by members of the audience.

Miss Thompson at the outset told how the Anglo-Saxon tradition had

To Meet Emergency

Hopkins Named to New 9-Man Board on Industrial Planning

Harry L. Hopkins, former Secretary of Commerce and close Presidential adviser, was named yesterday to a nine-man board that will advise the Office of Production Management on industrial planning during the defense emergency and on post-war readjustments, it was announced yesterday.

The group will be known as the Production Planning Board and will function in an advisory capacity to John D. Biggers, OPM director of production.

At the same time, Sidney Hillman, associate director general of OPM, announced that he had appointed former Gov. M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana as special adviser for agricultural and labor matters. Townsend was his State's chief executive from 1937 until January of this year. For the four preceeding years he was Lieutenant Governor and State commissioner of agriculture.

Members of the Production Planning Board include Admiral William H. Standley, retired, former chief of naval operations, and Maj. Gen. James Henry Burns, formerly attached to the office of the Assistant Secretary of War.

Chairman of the board is Samuel Richard Fuller, president of the North American Rayon Corporation. Labor representatives are George W. Meany, A. F. of L. secretary-treasurer, and James B. Carey, secretary of the C. I. O.

Trial Within A Trial

A.M.A. Fights Move to Air Its Ouster of Group Health Doctors

By Gerald G. Gross.
Post Staff Writer

The prospect of a trial within a trial was injected yesterday in District Court by the Federal Government, which is prosecuting organized medicine on antitrust charges, bringing the twelfth day of the case to a shouting climax.

After listening to impassioned arguments by counsel for both sides, Justice James M. Proctor postponed until this morning his decision as to whether to admit into evidence proceedings of the District Medical Society's "expulsion trial" of two members who had joined Group Health Association.

"It was a farce, shocking, a travesty of justice," John Henry Lewin, of the prosecution, cried at the court in describing the trial of Dr. Mario Scandiffio and Dr. Allen Lee.

"It would not be fair to read those proceedings to a jury!" exclaimed William E. Leahy, for the defense.

The Government argued that the four-volume trial transcript constituted not only fair, but extremely valuable, evidence in its case. The defense retorted that it would prove Dr. Lee subsequently resigned from the G. H. A. staff "because they wouldn't let him practice medicine the way he wanted to."

The expulsion trial was held in four sittings—on December 6, 10,

Nazis Make Laval's Return Price of Amity

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Feb. 20.—Friends of former Vice Premier Pierra Laval said today a proposal for reaching a French-German understanding without restoring Laval to power in the Vichy government had been rejected by Otto Abetz, Adolf Hitler's Ambassador in Paris.

These sources asserted the suggestion was laid before Abetz in Paris by the present Vice Premier, Admiral Darlan. Abetz, they added, replied that Laval's return with "full powers" in the French government was a necessary preliminary to any agreement between the two nations.

Darlan returned to Vichy from Paris today and went immediately to the official residence of Chief of State Petain for a two-hour conference. He was said officially to "have had a purely informative visit" in Paris with the German Ambassador, labor union leaders and others, presumably including Abetz and Count Fernand de Brinon, the Vichy government's representative in the German-occupied city.

Relations between France and Germany appeared to be right back at the impasse that resulted in December from Petain's sudden removal from office of Laval—a leading proponent of broad collboration with the Nazis.

Laval was reported standing firmly on his demand for full power in the government and was represented as feeling that further discussions with Darlan were useless until that demand was met. His stand apparently was not changed by the recent resignations of several cabinet ministers to whom he objected.

Transportation authorities asserted today that Germany had requisitioned $320,000,000 worth of the rolling stock of French railways —every third freight car in France. Of the remainder, only one quarter are in the unoccupied zone—60,000 cars to serve two-fifths of the nation.

tion of Messerschmitts caught three isolated Hurricanes and shot down two. One pilot escaped.

The day previous, however, the Australian air force shot down three Junkers, only one of which was claimed in the first announcement.

The South African air force continued to support troops operating in the Juba region, and other squadrons bombed the Yavello area of southern Abyssinia, where the British have launched a determined offensive. A smashing raid by the South African air force on an airdrome at Asmara, capital of Eritrea, destroyed two Fiat fighters, two Caproni and two Savoia bombers, and left three other Fiats pouring out smoke.

Flying through storm areas British planes blasted trucks and repair shops at Dessie, Abyssinia, and troop transports on roads to the northeast. The fighters rained incendiary bombs on columns crawling snake-like along the mountain trails.

British Effort Repulsed

By the Associated Press

Rome, Feb. 20.—A British motorized column plunged deep into the Libyan desert in a surprise effort to wrest the Cufra oases from the Italians but its attacks were repulsed, the Italian high command reported today.

Cufra lies on a caravan route some 500 miles south of Bengasi, on the Mediterranean shore, the last main Italian port captured by the British. Free French forces from the Chad territory have operated in the vicinity of Cufra in previous raids.

It consists of a group of watered "islands" in the desert, notable as the headquarters of the Senussi brotherhood, but so deep in the desert as to possess little apparent military value.

Italians said the British column tried two raids in two days.

German bombers again were reported harassing the British along the Mediterranean coast. Axis dispatches said that a number of ships, two of them of 8,000 tons, had been hit by bombs from Stukas at Bengasi. British land forces also were said to have been bombed and machine gunned.

Italian dispatches from Ethiopia said the African native army being formed to resist British attacks had gained strength with a ceremonial enrollment and demonstration of loyalty to Italy on the Plain of Murcus, some 150 miles southwest of Addis Ababa.

Eden, Gen. Dill Reach Egypt on Secret Mission

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 20.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Gen. Sir John Dill, chief of the Imperial General Staff, were disclosed tonight to be in Egypt on a visit deemed highly significant in view of the uncertain attitude of Turkey and Greece toward the threat of Nazi invasion.

Although the pledges made to Britain by her allies, the Greeks and Turks, had caused no expressions of concern by the British government, neutral diplomatic sources said, there has been a feeling in London that a show of arms by the Germans in Bulgaria might force the Greeks into peace negotiations with Italy.

Such a move by the Germans, it was added, certainly would lead the Turks to believe that their national cause would best be served by "watchful waiting" on their defensive lines in Thrace.

It is to gather together the strings of British diplomacy in the Balkans and Middle East, it is felt here, that Eden has been sent to Cairo.

Gen. Dill, neutral sources say, probably will assure both the Turks and Greeks that Britain's military resources, far from being exhausted by the Libyan campaign, are strong enough to open and maintain a new front in the Balkans.

Eden hopes to see some centers of Libya which the British have occupied, the informant added.

Japanese Reported Hesitating Over Drive in South Pacific

By Douglas Robertson.

Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, Feb. 20.—The arrival of "several detachments of fully and completely armed" Australian troops at Singapore is considered in some quarters here to have given pause to Japanese plans for a concentrated, lightning drive on Singapore, Malaya and the Dutch East Indies, although Japanese naval squadrons continue patrolling waters in the vicinity of French Indo-China and the shores of Thailand.

Reliable reports received here declare that Tokyo politicians, and especially businessmen controlling the Japanese export and import trades, are definitely opposed to any further warlike efforts. They are said to be more than willing to accept the losses caused in the China incident in an attempt to regain the industrial prosperity which prevailed in Japan during and following the first World War.

However, the Japanese army clique is utterly opposed to such a policy, and is reported to be insisting on an intensive southward advance as soon as European developments afford Japan the greatest chances of success.

At the same time the Japanese army, is remaining as alert as possible to troubles from Russia, should the Soviet seize an opportunity to attack Japan when the latter is engaged in southern expansion.

It is reported here that Russia is bargaining closely with the Japanese ambassador in Moscow, not giving up a single inch, although semiofficial Japanese reports declare the conferences are "progressing favorably." Apparently the future diplomatic and military moves of both sides hinged upon the reported spring offensive against Britain by Germany, Japan wishing to conclude a Russo-Japanese pact so as to be able to utilize to the fullest any German attack against Britain, and the Soviet desiring to let the matter hang fire until the final outcome of such an attack if launched, should be decided.

It is understood here the Soviets are demanding three points regarding conclusion of a Russo-Japanese pact:

1—Reversion of southern Sakhalien to Russia, but with Japan retaining her concessions, such as coal, oil, fisheries, lumber and mines.

2—Japanese fishery concessions as outlined in the Treaty of Portsmouth to be halved.

3—Russia to resume control of the Chinese Eastern Railway, connecting Manchouli, Harbin and Pogranitchnayu and Harbin and Hsinking.

The third item is considered of utmost importance, because should Japan give up this important railway artery numerous Japanese garrisons along the Manchukuo-Siberian border would be cut off or at least seriously embarrassed in case of declared or undeclared hostilities with Russia.

Shanghai (Friday), Feb. 21 (INS).—Heavy Japanese troop transport movements from Japan and Formosa south toward Hainan Island and north Indo-China were reported but unconfirmed here today as all the major powers interested in the Far East stepped up their military preparations.

Rumors pervading the exposive Far Eastern atmosphere said ships, laden with Japanese troops, were steaming toward the Gulf of Tonkin to reinforce Hainan and the Japanese garrisons in French Indo-China.

It was believed in Shanghai that such movements, if carried out, might be Japan's answer to the reinforcements of men and material Britain has recently landed at Singapore and deployed throughout the Malayan Peninsula.

A sea captain, who arrived in Shanghai from Singapore Thursday, asserted that at least 30,000 British Empire troops, including Australians and Indian regiments, have been put ashore at Singapore in recent days, together with considerable arms and mechanical transport equipment.

This sea captain, who asked that his name be withheld, related that Britain's biggest and costliest liners —including the Queen Mary, the Queen Elizabeth and the Mauretania —have been used in reinforcing Singapore, and the French liner Ile de France has been taken into British custody there.

He related further how the 34,000-ton French liner was brought into Singapore in the final days of last summer's battle for France. The captain and crew twice tried unsuccessfully to scuttle the luxury vessel.

Except for 147 anti-British "recalcitrants," the crew is still aboard the French liner, he said.

Chinese sources at Chungking, meanwhile, estimated that fully half of the Japanese air force is now stationed in or near north Indo-China at the bases acquired from the French. They said a powerful Japanese army garrison has been established at the Indo-China city of Haiphong in addition to which four Japanese divisions, comprising about 60,000 men, have been massed in South China not far from the fortified British Crown Colony of Hongkong. Japanese warships also are concentrated in Tonkin Gulf.

A Chungking military spokesman, however, expressed belief that Japan has not yet assembled forces sufficient for any attacks on Singapore or the Dutch East Indies that might hope to succeed.

Therefore, reinforcements must be rushed from Formosa and even Japan itself to the south, said the Chinese spokesman, adding, however, that Japan still must keep 36 or 37 divisions, totalling 540,000 to 555,000 troops, tied up in various parts of South China.

There was no definite indication in Shanghai that Japan has as yet begun any large-scale movement that might menace Hongkong.

The influential Chungking newspaper, Ta Kung Pao, suggested that direct American intervention in China itself would be the most effective method of curbing Japan. The paper criticized as "ill advised" American attention to Singapore and the Malayan Peninsula, declaring that in China alone can Japan be beaten.

200 U. S.-Built Bombers Winging Way to Singapore

New York, Feb. 20.—American-built Lockheed and Consolidated bombing planes, about 200 in number, built for the British Royal Air Force, are being flown across the Pacific Ocean from San Diego, San Pedro, and several other California ports to Singapore, British base in Asia now facing the menace of attack by Japan.

The flight of the bombing planes, confirmed by authoritative sources in the United States Navy and the British missions here, was disclosed at the same time today that it became known 70 Curtiss P-40 pursuit planes, latest and fastest standard American Army Air Corps fighters, were on their way by sea to Nationalist China, and 12 former United States Navy pilots, all retired from active duty, had landed in the Dutch East Indies to act as flying instructors.

The Consolidated and Lockheed bombers are winging their way to the Far East, it was learned, with American civilian pilots at their controls until they reach Hawaii. The British garrisons at Singapore and the Malayan Peninsula, already have scores of American-built Lockheeds, as well as Australian-built Wirraways, a North American plane type converted into a dive bomber.

British Fliers Battle Nazis In Snowstorm

Copyright by New York Times

London (Friday), Feb. 21.—A spectacular dog fight occurred in a snowstorm high over the south coast of England yesterday afternoon when a patrol of British Spitfire fighter planes intercepted a German formation.

People in a number of towns heard the sound of machine-gun and cannon fire, and many of them saw two defending aircraft come spinning from the clouds in flames. Both British pilots were seen to have made parachute leaps—one leaving his plane at 20,000 feet, is believed to have been blown by the wind clear across the Channel. There was no mention of the other, nor any evidence that the Germans had casualties.

The air ministry announced successful attacks on a German naval base at Brest and docks at Calais by bombers of the coastal command Wednesday night. There were no British losses, it was said. Daylight sweeps along the French coast continued yesterday, under improving weather conditions that by last nightfall offered a cold northwest wind, choppy seas and a starlit sky.

London Gets 2d Warning

There were three alert signals in London during the night.

German bombers renewed their attacks on south Wales last night. An attack which lasted several hours on one town saw showers of fire bombs, some of which were of explosive type, and many heavy bombs were dropped, despite intense antiaircraft fire. Considerable damage was done to commercial premises and houses, and there were a number of casualties.

Twenty-four hours earlier Swansea received a blasting, its shopping center and residential neighborhoods taking the brunt of the assault. Casualties were said yesterday to be still mounting.

While that attack was unfolding bombs struck a London County Council Hospital, killing several patients. An explosive scored a direct hit on an occupied wing, sending it crashing to the ground.

East Anglia Suffers Most

German raiders were reported over the Thames yesterday, as well as over the northeast, east and south parts of Britain. East Anglia, however, got the worst bombing when three towns were visited by single German planes that dropped bombs and swooped low, machine-gunning the streets.

It was announced yesterday that Southwark Cathedral has been damaged by bombs. Harvard Chapel, part of the cathedral restored in 1907 in memory of John Harvard, who was baptized and married there, has lost its center panel but none of its glass, which is the only example of ancient work in the cathedral.

The east wall of the cathedral has been cracked and all the stained glass windows on the south side have been shattered. Southwark has attracted attention for its association with writers and theater people since the days of Chaucer and, later, Shakespeare.

given German assurances that Turkish territory would not be involved in a Nazi push through the Balkans.

The only Greek island previously reported to have been occupied by the British was Crete, taken over at the start of the Greek-Italian war last October and converted into a strong naval and air base controlling the approaches to the Greek archipeligo.

Presumably planes and perhaps empire troops released from the North African front by the shattering of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's Fascist army of Libya are being shuttled across the Mediterranean to Lemnos.

Little Activity in Albania

Athens, Feb. 20 (AP).—Little activity was reported today from the Greek-Italian warfront in Albania except for artillery dueling and consolidation of minor Greek gains in central sectors.

The Greeks organized new advance positions there, it was said, and mopped up nests of Italian resistance which remained after last week's offensive. (Despite this thrust, the Albanian front has not changed materially for weeks.)

Greek artillerymen were credited in one front report with capsizing boats in which Italian units were retreating across an unidentified river. Scores dumped from boats by the shellfire were said to have been drowned.

Style-Conscious Paris Shrugs Off Nazi Rationing of Clothes

By Preston Grover

Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris (Via Berlin), Feb. 13 (Delayed).—A German rationing system was imposed upon Paris as a clothes distributing center today and the reaction among the individualistic French may be described as one of incredulity.

At first at least, both merchants and customers were disposed to take the system with a grain of salt.

Exempt from the regulations are 35 of the exclusive designers of Paris. They may sell as many 1,000-franc high-couture frocks to a customer as she wants. So Paris still can hold on to its reputation as a fashion center.

But the 150-point annual ration card issued to each person bears down heavily on the small copying houses and stores dealing in cheaper clothing. A woolen dress would take 50 of these points, leaving 100 points for stockings, underwear, suit, coat and all the rest.

Persons who know the disposition of the populace predicted there would be far more leaks in the system than ever were found in Germany.

Without a special permit a person could not even buy a spool of thread in Berlin, insofar as this reporter could determine through weeks of experiment while stationed in the German capital.

But on the first day, at least, there was more frolicsome French fooling about rationing in Paris than strict obedience. That is a characteristic contrast between serious, obedient Germans and liberty-loving Frenchmen.

Many stores stood flat by the regulations and closed their doors to make inventory.

But on the Boulevard Des Capucines, where are some of the best stores in Paris—although not the most exclusive—many stores were selling freely whatever was asked.

"The regulations," said one merchant, "didn't really go into effect today."

One tailor, asked about the prospect of getting a suit of clothes, blithely offered to take the order, "now or later."

"If a man needs a suit," he said, "he needs a suit and there are ways."

Announcement of the clothes rationing did, however, precipitate a buying boom. The rationing affects not only the French population but soldiers of the German occupying army as well.

German buying of the past several months already has reduced stocks of many goods to low levels, and some stores have imposed restrictions of their own on the amount that may be sold to one customer.

Restrictions on shoe purchases went into effect long ago. It takes a special permit from the City Hall to get a pair, and it requires weeks to get the permit. The process involves an inspection of the shoes the would-be buyer has at home.

have been shipped to Italy recently and much of this is being used to manufacture submarines and smaller surface vessels for the Nazis, to be used in the Mediterranean, while some is being turned into tanks at four large Italian factories. One of these is at Genoa, which led the Italians to believe this was one reason for the British naval attack on that port.

Belgrade, Feb. 20 (AP).—Rumania has called nearly a million Army reservists to active service effective March 15, diplomats both here and in Bulgaria were informed today, presumably to relieve the large German forces now standing at her frontier with Russia.

Two possible explanations were offered here.

The first was that the Nazis, while fearing no Soviet thrust, are assigning the Rumanians to quietly occupy that flank while the Germans hit to the south at Greece to reach the Mediterranean.

Urgency Is Apparent

The second, and more generally accepted, was that the Germans are getting ready to give away still more of Rumania's territory to the Soviet and figure that it would be easier to do that with Rumanian soldiers on the frontier than in the presence along that frontier of Nazi troops who have been formally pledged to defend it.

That the call-up held a certain urgency was illustrated by the fact that most of those summoned are peasants who ordinarily ought to be in their fields.

Turkish Press Reassuring

The long discussion of the new Turkish-Bulgarian nonaggression agreement continued during the day, the officially controlled Turkish press taking the line that it would impede, rather than aid any German scheme of getting at Greece.

The pact, said the newspaper, Vakit, in fact was insurance against Bulgaria's entrance into the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo arrangement— and "it would not be easy for Germany to come to fight in Greece against a Greek-Turkish army unless the way had been thoroughly prepared, as in Rumania. This declaration (the Turkish-Bulgarian arrangement) makes the preparation more difficult."

The newspaper, Tan, remarked that both Germany and Britain had exaggerated the effect of the declaration—the British by interpreting it as an outright wall against further Nazi penetration of the Balkans, and the Germans by calling it a political defeat for England.

"This declaration," the newspaper elucidated, "was made simply to reassure Bulgaria that our preparations in Thrace (on the frontier) are not of an offensive nature. Bulgaria indicates her unwillingness to allow German soldiers to pass through her territory . . ."

Said the newspaper Ikilan:

"Although we have made this declaration with Bulgaria, our doors are closed to Germany and we shall keep our obligations with Greece and Britain."

In Bulgaria, the army took control of bakeries and bakers throughout the country, presumably to assure an adequate bread supply to the additional troops called up recently. The bakeries will continue to serve the civilian population, but under army direction.

The following tabulation of German claims is made up from the regular communique of the high command, reciting actions yesterday, and reports given out with "informed" but unofficial stamp up to mid-evening, covering operations today:

Today

A 12,000-ton armed merchant ship "heavily hit with bombs" about 310 miles west of the Hebrides; ship halted and "total loss is assumed."

Two cargo vessels of 6,000 and 3,000 tons bombed off the mouth of the Humber, east of England; one is believed lost and possibly both.

Two armed freighters totaling 9,000 tons bombed at noon northwest of Ireland; they "will never reach home ports."

Two cargo ships, 2,000 and 1,500 tons, dive-bombed in convoy southeast of Harwich; the larger was heavily damaged and listed, and the smaller was holed and fell out of convoy; both "assumed lost."

Yesterday

British destroyer set afire near Harwich.

Two armed merchantmen, totaling 10,000 tons, torpedoed by speedboat.

Four merchantmen, totaling at least 6,000 tons, bombed in convoys north of the Hebrides and off the English east and southeast coasts.

Two merchantmen, totaling 16,000 tons, directly hit in air raid on British-occupied Bengasi, Libya.

Aid Asked to Replace Greek Crop Losses

Fewer than 25 per cent of the Greek farmers will be able to plant spring wheat crops as a result of the war, Mrs. Truxton Beale, chairman of the District committee for the Greek War Relief Association, said yesterday in calling for increased relief help. Headquarters of the local committee is at the Mayflower.

British, Nazis Each Lose Ship In Sea Battles

London, Feb. 20 (INS).—The admiralty tonight announced the sinking of the 5,051-ton British armed auxiliary ship Crispin, but claimed the British submarine Sea Lion had sunk a 1,500-ton Norwegian ship under German control.

That loss of life was incurred with destruction of the Crispin was manifested by the admiralty's announcement that "the next of kin of the casualties have been informed." The admiralty did not give details of the sinking.

The Sea Lion caught the Nazi-controlled Norwegian ship off Norway and sank her with gunfire, instead of torpedoes.

The British U-boat waited 15 minutes while the ship's crew took to lifeboats and then sent the vessel down with shellfire.

U. S. to Cut Defense Site Agents' Fees

By the Associated Press

The War Department yesterday slashed the fees of an agent retained to acquire the site for a $16,000,000 ordnance plant in Iowa and took steps to revise downward other commissions paid in connection with land purchases.

Undersecretary Robert P. Patterson named a committee of War and Justice Department officials to undertake revision of the agreements.

At a conference with the new group, A. J. Cockerell, Burlington, Iowa, agreed to accept 3½ instead of 6½ per cent for all expenses in connection with the acquisition of a 20,000-acre site for the Iowa ordnance plant, a shell-loading establishment at Burlington.

Among other agents' agreements under study was a contract for a 50,000-acre ordnance proving ground near Madison, Ind., for which the Justice Department last month halted acceptance of all land titles, contending that the commissions were "exorbitant."

Coincident with yesterday's action, it was disclosed that the War Department was facing deficits both for lands already bought and those in process of acquisition.

Officials indicated that when the pressure for speed on the arms program was somewhat relaxed, it was planned to abolish entirely the retention of agents for land purchases.

The action on fees followed a House Military Committee inquiry into the award of War Department construction contracts and criticism by some committee members of the selection of sites for arms plants and training camps. Earlier this month the War Department put a Justice Department official, John J. O'Brien, in charge of the real estate branch of the quartermaster's construction division, which is immediately concerned with the land purchases.

The Burlington project involved a contemplated outlay for the site of some $3,500,000.

Cockerell received a contract for a 5 per cent commission as agent plus 1½ per cent for title services. By the revision, he agreed to accept an overall payment of 3½ per cent.

The group named to revise the fee contracts included Douglas I. McKay and Robert Fabian, of the Quartermaster General's staff, and Ewing Wright, special assistant to the Attorney General.

Officials said that although Congress placed a limit of 6 per cent on the fees fixed in contracts negotiated for construction, there was no legal limit on commissions paid for land purchases. Patterson indicated, however, that an attempt would be made to limit all fees to 3½ per cent.

Extension Sought For Program of 'Normal Granary'

By the Associated Press

The Administration, officials said yesterday, soon will ask Congress to extend the life of the Agriculture Department's "ever normal granary" program and to authorize an additional $500,000,000 to finance Federal crop storage and price-pegging operations.

The life of the Commodity Credit Corporation, agency which advances loans to farmers on crop surpluses, expires June 30.

Agriculture Department officials said that unless the corporation was given an extension, the Government would be without the financial power to continue the present program of pegging prices of such commodities as wheat, corn, cotton and several other farm products at prices above levels which would prevail under normal operation of the economic laws of supply and demand.

The corporation already has approximately $1,300,000,000 tied up in loans to growers on surplus farm commodities and in crops taken over under foreclosure of past-due loans. Its lending power is limited to $1,500,000,000.

Soviet Is Trading Front for Axis, Dies Declares

By the Associated Press

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, announced yesterday that the House Committee on Un-American Activities was preparing a paper showing that Russia "is using its favorable position" to act as a "trading front" for Germany, and possibly other Axis powers.

"Russia is in a more favorable position, compared with Germany and the other Axis powers, to trade with us," Dies said. "Transfers of funds and the purchase of supplies—that's the picture of Russia."

The Texan, who collapsed from nervous exhaustion last week just after the House recreated the committee for about 15 months and gave it $150,000, said he planned to return to work next week.

One of the first things he hoped the committee would do, he said, would be to segregate by States and industries 500,000 names of persons who belong to organizations "which are fronts for subversive elements."

"Then," he said, "it will be up to the national defense chieftains to take steps to get rid of them."

United Effort Vital to U. S., Knox Declares

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Secretary of the Navy Knox asserted tonight that "a nation indivisible demands that all our people put their shoulders to the wheel in time of stress and coordinate the forces of national defense."

He stated, in a prepared radio address, that "the continuation of those democratic institutions for which our forefathers fought are in danger, just as they were in Colonial days, when people of different tastes, different backgrounds, different aims, united behind George Washington to drive out aggressors and mold a united people."

Knox spoke over the National Broadcasting Company's blue network on a program of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"When we consider that today we can travel to Europe or to Asia in less time than it took Washington to travel from Philadelphia to Boston to assume command of the Continental Army," he said, "we get some conception of the problem that faces us when madmen set out to conquer all Christendom."

In this age of speed, the Secretary added, "there must be advanced bases for our fleet, strategically located far from home, so that an enemy or enemies may be met and turned back before ever gaining foothold in the New World."

". . . The nations that are so heroically resisting the usurper deserve everything of material aid that we are able to give them," Knox said. "They have become as much a part of our system of defense as the the American Navy and Army."

Cities Urged To Prepare For Air Raids

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Feb. 20.—Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York proposed today, particularly to mayors of East and West Coast cities, that they take up the immediate problem of preparing for the possibility of bombing attacks.

Declaring that he was a realist, not an alarmist, the mayor said:

"I will grant that there are 97 per cent probabilities that we may not be attacked, but neither the United States Government nor any mayor can take that 3 per cent chance."

Speaking at a Midwest regional meeting of the United States Conference of Mayors, of which he is president, LaGuardia asserted if there is an invasion, the civilian populations will be in the front line trenches, subject first to incendiary bomb attacks.

From a study made of firefighting under war conditions, he said, each city must have available about $43,000,000 worth of supplementary portable pumping engines and other equipment for each present fire company.

In New York City that would require an expenditure of about $16,000,000, in Boston $2,000,000, in Baltimore $2,500,000, Pittsburgh $1,500,000 and Philadelphia $3,000,000.

The mayor suggested that the Federal Government place an immediate order for this equipment.

LaGuardia called on the mayors to develop streamlined and coordinated defense organizations in direct contact with military officials "in order to know exactly what they are doing and exactly where the antiaircraft batteries would be located and exactly how we have to care for the injured and exactly where everyone must be mobilized and cared for."

Stanley Lewis, mayor of Ottawa and president of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, reported that most Canadian cities have instituted wide air raid precautions, even to the appointment of raid wardens and medical officers.

Hillman Calls Antistrike Laws Harmful

By John B. Oakes

Post Staff Writer

Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, told the House Judiciary Committee yesterday that antistrike legislation at the present time not only was unnecessary but might actually be harmful to the cause of national defense.

Stating the case with more emphasis than OPM Director William S. Knudsen, when the latter testified Wednesday, Hillman asserted that "nothing ought to be done legislatively at this time."

If mediation procedure should prove necessary, Hillman suggested that it be established by executive order rather than by legislation. But he insisted that "voluntary cooperation" between management and labor had succeeded remarkably well and gave every indication of continuing to do so.

Hillman, in charge of labor relations in the defense program, minimized the current strike situation, citing figures to prove that "strikes are the rare excepiton in defense industry." Adverse weather conditions, he noted, "have affected national defense much more than strikes."

As if to underline his contention that publicity was an effective weapon in settling difficult labor disputes, Hillman revealed the terms proposed by OPM for settlement of the Allis-Chalmers strike in Milwaukee, which has been tying up defense production nearly a month.

The proposal, offered to both sides Saturday, provides that disputes over disciplinary action by the company—or failure to take such action—be submitted to a referee. But despite persistent questioning of committee members, Hillman refused to state more than that the suggested agreement would mean "neither closed nor open shop; not a closed shop nor a device for a closed shop."

A touch of drama was lent to the hearing in respect to the unauthorized strike of nearly 1,000 employes of the American Steel & Wire Co.'s zinc plant at Donora, Pa. At the opening of the afternoon session, Hillman informed the committee that Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, had telegraphed the strikers ordering them to return to work. In midafternoon, Hillman suddenly interrupted his testimony to say he had just been informed by a newspaperman that the strikers had gone back to their jobs.

[The Associated Press last night reported a "partial" resumption of operations in the plant with about 200 workers having returned.—Editor's Note.]

Pointing out that this was an example of the voluntary cooperation offered by "responsible labor leaders," Hillman smilingly observed that "it almost looks as though the whole thing were staged—but it's just a day's work."

Hillman informed the committee that "every responsible labor leader in this country is, day by day, doing everything possible to further the defense effort and to avoid interruption of production."

Noting that 40 per cent fewer man-days of idleness caused by strikes were lost in the last half of 1940 than in the corresponding period of 1939, Hillman declared that this is "the first time in our industrial history" that employment has increased sharply without an increase in the number of strikes.

Less than half as many persons were involved in strikes last year as in the preparedness year 1916, or even the war years 1917 and 1918, he said.

"Given human nature sa it is, this record is almost a perfect record to those of us acquainted with labor relations," he observed. "It's better than the totalitarian governments can show."

Asked about the high initiation fees charged by some unions—notably in the building industry—Hillman commented: "Even in that field, I think we're getting sufficient cooperation to rectify things that are not right—I hope so, anyway."

Committee members fired questions at Hillman regarding his part in inserting a labor-policy clause in competitive bid contracts such as the Ford Motor Co. recently refused to accept.

"I suggested that the War Department effectuate this policy and that it be written into the contract," Hillman said, adding with a smile that "you're giving me entirely too much credit for the situation."

Hillman, a dollar-a-year man, told the committee his salary was still being paid by the union which he heads, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, though he is on leave of absence.

"No matter how low the cost of living is in Washington, I couldn't live on a dollar a year," he wryly commented.

Drive Speeded In Ford Plants, A.F.L. Is Told

By Fred L. Strozier

Associated Press Staff Writer

Miami, Fla., Feb. 20.—The American Federation of Labor today put its resources behind a drive among the more than 100,000 workers in the Ford Motor Co. amid predictions it would provide a showdown with the rival C. I. O.

William Green, president of the federation, carefully withheld the number of organizers on the campaign—one of the biggest in A. F. L. history—and the number of members already signed in Ford plants. He said only that a "great many had joined."

"We don't want to give information to the enemy—the C. I. O.," he said, but he did predict success for the campaign—"in a reasonable time, probably within six months."

The federation's plan to step directly into the Ford organizing job—apart from the A. F. L.'s United Automobile Workers' campaigns in other plants—was discussed at the final midwinter sessions of the executive council.

The meeting adjourned on a gloomy note, however, because of a threat that more than 200,000 machinists would leave the federation as the result of a jurisdictional dispute with the carpenters' union.

The Association of Machinists, said their president, Harry W. Brown, have quit paying dues to the A. F. of L. Green said suspension would follow automatically in three months, unless the dispute is settled.

In announcing the Ford organization plan, Green said the federation first would work on the Rouge plant at Dearborn, with 60,000 or more members; the Lincoln plant in Detroit, and the Kansas City plant. In all three, he said, unions are now working.

He decried "loud campaigning, denunciation and recrimination" of the C. I. O.'s drive on Ford employes, and denied a C. I. O. charge that the federation was working with Ford's personnel director, Harry Bennett.

U.S. Bonds Sold After March 1 To Be Taxed

Post Staff Writer

All baby bonds sold after March 1 will be subject to Federal taxes, the Treasury announced yesterday.

Acting 24 hours after President Roosevelt signed the new defense financing law, the Treasury used its day-old powers to revoke tax exemption from future sales of United States Savings bonds.

At the same time, Secretary Morgenthau revealed that he will lose no time in replacing outstanding Treasury bonds, notes and bills that are free from taxes with taxable securities.

Campaign Mapped

Plans to sell small savings stamps, certificates and bonds to investors of modest means had not "jelled enough yet" to be announced, Morgenthau said, but he had already prepared for a campaign to sell large quantities of these national defense securities to the general public.

The Treasury has already asked Congress for a campaign fund of $3,000,000 to pay the expenses of educating the public to buy the savings securities.

The new defense issues will be similar to the present baby bonds, will bear a comparable rate of interest and maturity date, but will differ by being subject to taxation.

Individuals are now limited to buying $10,000 worth of the baby bonds per year apiece and the prospects are that, using authority in the new law, this ceiling will be drastically lowered, perhaps to $3,000 per person per year.

Refinancing Speeded

The Treasury's refinancing to replace tax-free with taxable securities will get underway on Tuesday, Morgenthau said, unless grave international events delay it.

On that day the Treasury will refund securities totaling $1,222,000,000. This operation provides for exchanging new taxable securities to replace 3⅜ per cent bonds totaling $545,000,000, issued March 16, 1931, and to replace 1½ per cent notes totaling $677,000,000, issued March 16, 1936. Both securities are due March 15.

In addition, Morgenthau said that beginning March 1 he will borrow $200,000,000 a week by use of taxable 91-day Treasury bills. Formerly the Treasury has been borrowing only $100,000,000 weekly in this manner, thus the doubling of the amount will bring in $100,000,000 in cash each week for 13 weeks (91 days), when the amount would have to be stepped up to $300,000,000 in order to bring in the same amount of new money each week.

Sales To Be Pushed

Sale of the new defense savings bonds will be pushed vigorously "but there will be no flag waving," Morgenthau promised.

The need for vigor is occasioned by the fact that the Treasury has to raise $12,000,000,000 of new money between now and July, 1942, for the domestic rearmament program and Government expenses. An additional sum will have to be raised when aid to Britain under the lend-lease bill gets under way.

Morgenthau predicted that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would borrow $500,000,000 from the public in March or April, using $300,000,000 of the proceeds to reimburse the Treasury for capital investments in the corporation and keeping $200,000,000 to finance the Corporation's own cash needs.

Sales of baby bonds up to January 31 totaled $4,328,056,850, maturity value.

The bonds run for five years and are sold on a discount basis in amounts at maturity of $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000.

Senate Group Named To Plan Peace Budget

A special Senate committee of three, headed by Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, was created yesterday to study the Federal Government's fiscal set-up with a view to formulating a plan for an "automatically balanced budget in times of peace."

Other members, named by Vice President Wallace under terms of a resolution by Tydings proposing the inquiry, are Thomas (Democrat), Utah, and Holman (Republican), Oregon. Tydings said the committee, which will have $10,000 for the study, would begin its studies promptly.

Germans Blamed For 8 Irish Ship Attacks, Loss of 4

Dublin, Feb. 20 (AP).—Prime Minister Eamon De Valera told the Dail (parliament) today that since the war began aircraft bearing Nazi insignia attacked eight Irish ships and sank four of them with a loss of 20 lives.

Four of the attacks were made within 30 miles of the Irish coast, he said, adding that in two cases the ships were machine-gunned as well as bombed.

Five other Irish ships were lost, three by mines and two by unknown causes. The aggregate tonnage of the nine ships was 14,205.

De Valera said that in one case four machine-gun attacks were made on the ship after the order to take to the boats had been given.

Defense to Be Geologists' Topic

Plans for the cooperation of State and Federal geologists in investigation of sources of war materials will be discussed today at the annual meeting of the Association of American State Geologists in the Geological Survey offices, North Interior Department Building.

Ways and means by which the facilities and personnel of the State geological departments may be worked into the national defense picture was forecast as a discussion highlight.

During the afternoon, officers will be elected to succeed R. A. Smith, of Lansing, Mich., as president; Dr. Raymond C. Moore, of Lawrence, Kan., vice president, and Dr. Paul H. Price, of Morgantown, W. Va., secretary.

Nazis Make Laval's Return Price of Amity

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Feb. 20.—Friends of former Vice Premier Pierra Laval said today a proposal for reaching a French-German understanding without restoring Laval to power in the Vichy government had been rejected by Otto Abetz, Adolf Hitler's Ambassador in Paris.

These sources asserted the suggestion was laid before Abetz in Paris by the present Vice Premier, Admiral Darlan. Abetz, they added, replied that Laval's return with "full powers" in the French government was a necessary preliminary to any agreement between the two nations.

Darlan returned to Vichy from Paris today and went immediately to the official residence of Chief of State Petain for a two-hour conference. He was said officially to "have had a purely informative visit" in Paris with the German Ambassador, labor union leaders and others, presumably including Abetz and Count Fernand de Brinon, the Vichy government's representative in the German-occupied city.

Relations between France and Germany appeared to be right back at the impasse that resulted in December from Petain's sudden removal from office of Laval—a leading proponent of broad collboration with the Nazis.

Laval was reported standing firmly on his demand for full power in the government and was represented as feeling that further discussions with Darlan were useless until that demand was met. His stand apparently was not changed by the recent resignations of several cabinet ministers to whom he objected.

Transportation authorities asserted today that Germany had requisitioned $320,000,000 worth of the rolling stock of French railways—every third freight car in France. Of the remainder, only one quarter are in the unoccupied zone—60,000 cars to serve two-fifths of the nation.

British Advance In Somaliland

tion of Messerschmitts caught three isolated Hurricanes and shot down two. One pilot escaped.

The day previous, however, the Australian air force shot down three Junkers, only one of which was claimed in the first announcement.

The South African air force continued to support troops operating in the Juba region, and other squadrons bombed the Yavello area of southern Abyssinia, where the British have launched a determined offensive. A smashing raid by the South African air force on an airdrome at Asmara, capital of Eritrea, destroyed two Fiat fighters, two Caproni and two Savoia bombers, and left three other Fiats pouring out smoke.

Flying through storm areas British planes blasted trucks and repair shops at Dessie, Abyssinia, and troop transports on roads to the northeast. The fighters rained incendiary bombs on columns crawling snake-like along the mountain trails.

British Effort Repulsed

By the Associated Press

Rome, Feb. 20.—A British motorized column plunged deep into the Libyan desert in a surprise effort to wrest the Cufra oases from the Italians but its attacks were repulsed, the Italian high command reported today.

Cufra lies on a caravan route some 500 miles south of Bengasi, on the Mediterranean shore, the last main Italian port captured by the British. Free French forces from the Chad territory have operated in the vicinity of Cufra in previous raids.

It consists of a group of watered "islands" in the desert, notable as the headquarters of the Senussi brotherhood, but so deep in the desert as to possess little apparent military value.

Italians said the British column tried two raids in two days.

German bombers again were reported harassing the British along the Mediterranean coast. Axis dispatches said that a number of ships, two of them of 8,000 tons, had been hit by bombs from Stukas at Bengasi. British land forces also were said to have been bombed and machine gunned.

Italian dispatches from Ethiopia said the African native army being formed to resist British attacks had gained strength with a ceremonial enrollment and demonstration of loyalty to Italy on the Plain of Mureus, some 150 miles southwest of Addis Ababa.

Eden, Gen. Dill Reach Egypt on Secret Mission

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 20.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Gen. Sir John Dill, chief of the Imperial General Staff, were disclosed tonight to be in Egypt on a visit deemed highly significant in view of the uncertain attitude of Turkey and Greece toward the threat of Nazi invasion.

Although the pledges made to Britain by her allies, the Greeks and Turks, had caused no expressions of concern by the British government, neutral diplomatic sources said, there has been a feeling in London that a show of arms by the Germans in Bulgaria might force the Greeks into peace negotiations with Italy.

Such a move by the Germans, it was added, certainly would lead the Turks to believe that their national cause would best be served by "watchful waiting" on their defensive lines in Thrace.

It is to gather together the strings of British diplomacy in the Balkans and Middle East, it is felt here, that Eden has been sent to Cairo.

Gen. Dill, neutral sources say, probably will assure both the Turks and Greeks that Britain's military resources, far from being exhausted by the Libyan campaign, are strong enough to open and maintain a new front in the Balkans.

Eden hopes to see some centers of Libya which the British have occupied, the informant added.

Japanese Reported Hesitating Over Drive in South Pacific

By Douglas Robertson.

Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, Feb. 20.—The arrival of "several detachments of fully and completely armed" Australian troops at Singapore is considered in some quarters here to have given pause to Japanese plans for a concentrated, lightning drive on Singapore, Malaya and the Dutch East Indies, although Japanese naval squadrons continue patrolling waters in the vicinity of French Indo-China and the shores of Thailand.

Reliable reports received here declare that Tokyo politicians, and especially businessmen controlling the Japanese export and import trades, are definitely opposed to any further warlike efforts. They are said to be more than willing to accept the losses caused in the China incident in an attempt to regain the industrial prosperity which prevailed in Japan during and following the first World War.

However, the Japanese army clique is utterly opposed to such a policy, and is reported to be insisting on an intensive southward advance as soon as European developments afford Japan the greatest chances of success.

At the same time the Japanese army, is remaining as alert as possible to troubles from Russia, should the Soviet seize an opportunity to attack Japan when the latter is engaged in southern expansion.

It is reported here that Russia is bargaining closely with the Japanese ambassador in Moscow, not giving up a single inch, although semiofficial Japanese reports declare the conferences are "progressing favorably." Apparently the future diplomatic and military moves of both sides hinged upon the reported spring offensive against Britain by Germany, Japan wishing to conclude a Russo-Japanese pact so as to be able to utilize to the fullest any German attack against Britain, and the Soviet desiring to let the matter hang fire until the final outcome of such an attack if launched, should be decided.

It is understood here the Soviets are demanding three points regarding conclusion of a Russo-Japanese pact:

1—Reversion of southern Sakhalien to Russia, but with Japan retaining her concessions, such as coal, oil, fisheries, lumber and mines.

2—Japanese fishery concessions as outlined in the Treaty of Portsmouth to be halved.

3—Russia to resume control of the Chinese Eastern Railway, connecting Manchouli, Harbin and Pogranitchnayu and Harbin and Hsinking.

The third item is considered of utmost importance, because should Japan give up this important railway artery numerous Japanese garrisons along the Manchukuo-Siberian border would be cut off or at least seriously embarrassed in case of declared or undeclared hostilities with Russia.

Shanghai (Friday), Feb. 21 (INS).—Heavy Japanese troop transport movements from Japan and Formosa south toward Hainan Island and north Indo-China were reported but unconfirmed here today as all the major powers interested in the Far East stepped up their military preparations.

Rumors pervading the exposive Far Eastern atmosphere said ships, laden with Japanese troops, were steaming toward the Gulf of Tonkin to reinforce Hainan and the Japanese garrisons in French Indo-China.

It was believed in Shanghai that such movements, if carried out, might be Japan's answer to the reinforcements of men and material Britain has recently landed at Singapore and deployed throughout the Malayan Peninsula.

A sea captain, who arrived in Shanghai from Singapore Thursday, asserted that at least 30,000 British Empire troops, including Australians and Indian regiments, have been put ashore at Singapore in recent days, together with considerable arms and mechanical transport equipment.

This sea captain, who asked that his name be withheld, related that Britain's biggest and costliest liners —including the Queen Mary, the Queen Elizabeth and the Mauretania —have been used in reinforcing Singapore, and the French liner Ile de France has been taken into British custody there.

He related further how the 34,000-ton French liner was brought into Singapore in the final days of last summer's battle for France. The captain and crew twice tried unsuccessfully to scuttle the luxury vessel.

Except for 147 anti-British "recalcitrants," the crew is still aboard the French liner, he said.

Chinese sources at Chungking, meanwhile, estimated that fully half of the Japanese air force is now stationed in or near north Indo-China at the bases acquired from the French. They said a powerful Japanese army garrison has been established at the Indo-China city of Haiphong in addition to which four Japanese divisions, comprising about 60,000 men, have been massed in South China not far from the fortified British Crown Colony of Hongkong. Japanese warships also are concentrated in Tonkin Gulf.

A Chungking military spokesman, however, expressed belief that Japan has not yet assembled forces sufficient for any attacks on Singapore or the Dutch East Indies that might hope to succeed.

Therefore, reinforcements must be rushed from Formosa and even Japan itself to the south, said the Chinese spokesman, adding, however, that Japan still must keep 36 or 37 divisions, totalling 540,000 to 555,000 troops, tied up in various parts of South China.

There was no definite indication in Shanghai that Japan has as yet begun any large-scale movement that might menace Hongkong.

The influential Chungking newspaper, Ta Kung Pao, suggested that direct American intervention in China itself would be the most effective method of curbing Japan. The paper criticized as "ill advised" American attention to Singapore and the Malayan Peninsula, declaring that in China alone can Japan be beaten.

200 U. S.-Built Bombers Winging Way to Singapore

New York, Feb. 20.—American-built Lockheed and Consolidated bombing planes, about 200 in number, built for the British Royal Air Force, are being flown across the Pacific Ocean from San Diego, San Pedro, and several other California ports to Singapore, British base in Asia now facing the menace of attack by Japan.

The flight of the bombing planes, confirmed by authoritative sources in the United States Navy and the British missions here, was disclosed at the same time today that it became known 70 Curtiss P-40 pursuit planes, latest and fastest standard American Army Air Corps fighters, were on their way by sea to Nationalist China, and 12 former United States Navy pilots, all retired from active duty, had landed in the Dutch East Indies to act as flying instructors.

The Consolidated and Lockheed bombers are winging their way to the Far East, it was learned, with American civilian pilots at their controls until they reach Hawaii. The British garrisons at Singapore and the Malayan Peninsula, already have scores of American-built Lockheeds, as well as Australian-built Wirraways, a North American plane type converted into a dive bomber.

British Fliers Battle Nazis In Snowstorm

Copyright by New York Times

London (Friday), Feb. 21.—A spectacular dog fight occurred in a snowstorm high over the south coast of England yesterday afternoon when a patrol of British Spitfire fighter planes intercepted a German formation.

People in a number of towns heard the sound of machine-gun and cannon fire, and many of them saw two defending aircraft come spinning from the clouds in flames. Both British pilots were seen to have made parachute leaps—one leaving his plane at 20,000 feet, is believed to have been blown by the wind clear across the Channel. There was no mention of the other, nor any evidence that the Germans had casualties.

The air ministry announced successful attacks on a German naval base at Brest and docks at Calais by bombers of the coastal command Wednesday night. There were no British losses, it was said. Daylight sweeps along the French coast continued yesterday, under improving weather conditions that by last nightfall offered a cold northwest wind, choppy seas and a starlit sky.

London Gets 2d Warning

There were three alert signals in London during the night.

German bombers renewed their attacks on south Wales last night. An attack which lasted several hours on one town saw showers of fire bombs, some of which were of explosive type, and many heavy bombs were dropped, despite intense antiaircraft fire. Considerable damage was done to commercial premises and houses, and there were a number of casualties.

Twenty-four hours earlier Swansea received a blasting, its shopping center and residential neighborhoods taking the brunt of the assault. Casualties were said yesterday to be still mounting.

While that attack was unfolding bombs struck a London County Council Hospital, killing several patients. An explosive scored a direct hit on an occupied wing, sending it crashing to the ground.

East Anglia Suffers Most

German raiders were reported over the Thames yesterday, as well as over the northeast, east and south parts of Britain. East Anglia, however, got the worst bombing when three towns were visited by single German planes that dropped bombs and swooped low, machine-gunning the streets.

It was announced yesterday that Southwark Cathedral has been damaged by bombs. Harvard Chapel, part of the cathedral restored in 1907 in memory of John Harvard, who was baptized and married there, has lost its center panel but none of its glass, which is the only example of ancient work in the cathedral.

The east wall of the cathedral has been cracked and all the stained glass windows on the south side have been shattered. Southwark has attracted attention for its association with writers and theater people since the days of Chaucer and, later, Shakespeare.

given German assurances that Turkish territory would not be involved in a Nazi push through the Balkans.

The only Greek island previously reported to have been occupied by the British was Crete, taken over at the start of the Greek-Italian war last October and converted into a strong naval and air base controlling the approaches to the Greek archipeligo.

Presumably planes and perhaps empire troops released from the North African front by the shattering of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's Fascist army of Libya are being shuttled across the Mediterranean to Lemnos.

Little Activity in Albania

Athens, Feb. 20 (AP).—Little activity was reported today from the Greek-Italian warfront in Albania except for artillery dueling and consolidation of minor Greek gains in central sectors.

The Greeks organized new advance positions there, it was said, and mopped up nests of Italian resistance which remained after last week's offensive. (Despite this thrust, the Albanian front has not changed materially for weeks.)

Greek artillerymen were credited in one front report with capsizing boats in which Italian units were retreating across an unidentified river. Scores dumped from boats by the shellfire were said to have been drowned.

Style-Conscious Paris Shrugs Off Nazi Rationing of Clothes

By Preston Grover

Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris (Via Berlin), Feb. 13 (Delayed).—A German rationing system was imposed upon Paris as a clothes distributing center today and the reaction among the individualistic French may be described as one of incredulity.

At first at least, both merchants and customers were disposed to take the system with a grain of salt.

Exempt from the regulations are 35 of the exclusive designers of Paris. They may sell as many 1,000-franc high-couture frocks to a customer as she wants. So Paris still can hold on to its reputation as a fashion center.

But the 150-point annual ration card issued to each person bears down heavily on the small copying houses and stores dealing in cheaper clothing. A woolen dress would take 50 of these points, leaving 100 points for stockings, underwear, suit, coat and all the rest.

Persons who know the disposition of the populace predicted there would be far more leaks in the system than ever were found in Germany.

Without a special permit a person could not even buy a spool of thread in Berlin, insofar as this reporter could determine through weeks of experiment while stationed in the German capital.

But on the first day, at least, there was more frolicsome French fooling about rationing in Paris than strict obedience. That is a characteristic contrast between serious, obedient Germans and liberty-loving Frenchmen.

Many stores stood flat by the regulations and closed their doors to make inventory.

But on the Boulevard Des Capucines, where are some of the best stores in Paris—although not the most exclusive—many stores were selling freely whatever was asked.

"The regulations," said one merchant, "didn't really go into effect today."

One tailor, asked about the prospect of getting a suit of clothes, blithely offered to take the order, "now or later."

"If a man needs a suit," he said, "he needs a suit and there are ways."

Announcement of the clothes rationing did, however, precipitate a buying boom. The rationing affects not only the French population but soldiers of the German occupying army as well.

German buying of the past several months already has reduced stocks of many goods to low levels, and some stores have imposed restrictions of their own on the amount that may be sold to one customer.

Restrictions on shoe purchases went into effect long ago. It takes a special permit from the City Hall to get a pair, and it requires weeks to get the permit. The process involves an inspection of the shoes the would-be buyer has at home.

have been shipped to Italy recently and much of this is being used to manufacture submarines and smaller surface vessels for the Nazis, to be used in the Mediterranean, while some is being turned into tanks at four large Italian factories. One of these is at Genoa, which led the Italians to believe this was one reason for the British naval attack on that port.

Belgrade, Feb. 20 (AP).—Rumania has called nearly a million Army reservists to active service effective March 15, diplomats both here and in Bulgaria were informed today, presumably to relieve the large German forces now standing at her frontier with Russia.

Two possible explanations were offered here.

The first was that the Nazis, while fearing no Soviet thrust, are assigning the Rumanians to quietly occupy that flank while the Germans hit to the south at Greece to reach the Mediterranean.

Urgency Is Apparent

The second, and more generally accepted, was that the Germans are getting ready to give away still more of Rumania's territory to the Soviet and figure that it would be easier to do that with Rumanian soldiers on the frontier than in the presence along that frontier of Nazi troops who have been formally pledged to defend it.

That the call-up held a certain urgency was illustrated by the fact that most of those summoned are peasants who ordinarily ought to be in their fields.

Turkish Press Reassuring

The long discussion of the new Turkish-Bulgarian nonaggression agreement continued during the day, the officially controlled Turkish press taking the line that it would impede, rather than aid any German scheme of getting at Greece.

The pact, said the newspaper, Vakit, in fact was insurance against Bulgaria's entrance into the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo arrangement— and "it would not be easy for Germany to come to fight in Greece against a Greek-Turkish army unless the way had been thoroughly prepared, as in Rumania. This declaration (the Turkish-Bulgarian arrangement) makes the preparation more difficult."

The newspaper, Tan, remarked that both Germany and Britain had exaggerated the effect of the declaration—the British by interpreting it as an outright wall against further Nazi penetration of the Balkans, and the Germans by calling it a political defeat for England.

"This declaration," the newspaper elucidated, "was made simply to reassure Bulgaria that our preparations in Thrace (on the frontier) are not of an offensive nature. Bulgaria indicates her unwillingness to allow German soldiers to pass through her territory . . ."

Said the newspaper Ikilan:

"Although we have made this declaration with Bulgaria, our doors are closed to Germany and we shall keep our obligations with Greece and Britain."

In Bulgaria, the army took control of bakeries and bakers throughout the country, presumably to assure an adequate bread supply to the additional troops called up recently. The bakeries will continue to serve the civilian population, but under army direction.

Three-Power Pact Rumored

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Entirely unconfirmed rumors tonight said Germany, Russia and Bulgaria were negotiating a mutual assistance pact.

British, Nazis Each Lose Ship In Sea Battles

London, Feb. 20 (INS).—The admiralty tonight announced the sinking of the 5,051-ton British armed auxiliary ship Crispin, but claimed the British submarine Sea Lion had sunk a 1,500-ton Norwegian ship under German control.

That loss of life was incurred with destruction of the Crispin was manifested by the admiralty's announcement that "the next of kin of the casualties have been informed." The admiralty did not give details of the sinking.

The Sea Lion caught the Nazi-controlled Norwegian ship off Norway and sank her with gunfire, instead of torpedoes.

The British U-boat waited 15 minutes while the ship's crew took to lifeboats and then sent the vessel down with shellfire.

from "total loss is assumed" to "believed lost."

The following tabulation of German claims is made up from the regular communique of the high command, reciting actions yesterday, and reports given out with "informed" but unofficial stamp up to mid-evening, covering operations today:

Today

A 12,000-ton armed merchant ship "heavily hit with bombs" about 310 miles west of the Hebrides; ship halted and "total loss is assumed."

Two cargo vessels of 6,000 and 3,000 tons bombed off the mouth of the Humber, east of England; one is believed lost and possibly both.

Two armed freighters totaling 9,000 tons bombed at noon northwest of Ireland; they "will never reach home ports."

Two cargo ships, 2,000 and 1,500 tons, dive-bombed in convoy southeast of Harwich; the larger was heavily damaged and listed, and the smaller was holed and fell out of convoy; both "assumed lost."

Yesterday

British destroyer set afire near Harwich.

Two armed merchantmen, totaling 10,000 tons, torpedoed by speedboat.

Four merchantmen, totaling at least 6,000 tons, bombed in convoys north of the Hebrides and off the English east and southeast coasts.

Two merchantmen, totaling 16,000 tons, directly hit in air raid on British-occupied Bengasi, Libya.

U. S. to Cut Defense Site Agents' Fees

By the Associated Press

The War Department yesterday slashed the fees of an agent retained to acquire the site for a $16,000,000 ordnance plant in Iowa and took steps to revise downward other commissions paid in connection with land purchases.

Undersecretary Robert P. Patterson named a committee of War and Justice Department officials to undertake revision of the agreements.

At a conference with the new group, A. J. Cockerell, Burlington, Iowa, agreed to accept 3½ instead of 6½ per cent for all expenses in connection with the acquisition of a 20,000-acre site for the Iowa ordnance plant, a shell-loading establishment at Burlington.

Among other agents' agreements under study was a contract for a 50,000-acre ordnance proving ground near Madison, Ind., for which the Justice Department last month halted acceptance of all land titles, contending that the commissions were "exorbitant."

Coincident with yesterday's action, it was disclosed that the War Department was facing deficits both for lands already bought and those in process of acquisition.

Officials indicated that when the pressure for speed on the arms program was somewhat relaxed, it was planned to abolish entirely the retention of agents for land purchases.

The action on fees followed a House Millitary Committee inquiry into the award of War Department construction contracts and criticism by some committee members of the selection of sites for arms plants and training camps. Earlier this month the War Department put a Justice Department official, John J. O'Brien, in charge of the real estate branch of the quartermaster's construction division, which is immediately concerned with the land purchases.

The Burlington project involved a contemplated outlay for the site of some $3,500,000.

Cockerell received a contract for a 5 per cent commission as agent plus 1½ per cent for title services. By the revision, he agreed to accept an overall payment of 3½ per cent.

The group named to revise the fee contracts included Douglas I. McKay and Robert Fabian, of the Quartermaster General's staff, and Ewing Wright, special assistant to the Attorney General.

Officials said that although Congress placed a limit of 6 per cent on the fees fixed in contracts negotiated for construction, there was no legal limit on commissions paid for land purchases. Patterson indicated, however, that an attempt would be made to limit all fees to 3½ per cent.

Extension Sought For Program of 'Normal Granary'

By the Associated Press

The Administration, officials said yesterday, soon will ask Congress to extend the life of the Agriculture Department's "ever normal granary" program and to authorize an additional $500,000,000 to finance Federal crop storage and price-pegging operations.

The life of the Commodity Credit Corporation, agency which advances loans to farmers on crop surpluses, expires June 30.

Agriculture Department officials said that unless the corporation was given an extension, the Government would be without the financial power to continue the present program of pegging prices of such commodities as wheat, corn, cotton and several other farm products at prices above levels which would prevail under normal operation of the economic laws of supply and demand.

The corporation already has approximately $1,300,000,000 tied up in loans to growers on surplus farm commodities and in crops taken over under foreclosure of past-due loans. Its lending power is limited to $1,500,000,000.

Soviet Is Trading Front for Axis, Dies Declares

By the Associated Press

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, announced yesterday that the House Committee on Un-American Activities was preparing a paper showing that Russia "is using its favorable position" to act as a "trading front" for Germany, and possibly other Axis powers.

"Russia is in a more favorable position, compared with Germany and the other Axis powers, to trade with us," Dies said. "Transfers of funds and the purchase of supplies—that's the picture of Russia."

The Texan, who collapsed from nervous exhaustion last week just after the House recreated the committee for about 15 months and gave it $150,000, said he planned to return to work next week.

One of the first things he hoped the committee would do, he said, would be to segregate by States and industries 500,000 names of persons who belong to organizations "which are fronts for subversive elements."

"Then," he said, "it will be up to the national defense chieftains to take steps to get rid of them."

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Secretary of the Navy Knox asserted tonight that "a nation indivisible demands that all our people put their shoulders to the wheel in time of stress and coordinate the forces of national defense."

He stated, in a prepared radio address, that "the continuation of those democratic institutions for which our forefathers fought are in danger, just as they were in Colonial days, when people of different tastes, different backgrounds, different aims, united behind George Washington to drive out aggressors and mold a united people."

Knox spoke over the National Broadcasting Company's blue network on a program of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"When we consider that today we can travel to Europe or to Asia in less time than it took Washington to travel from Philadelphia to Boston to assume command of the Continental Army," he said, "we get some conception of the problem that faces us when madmen set out to conquer all Christendom."

In this age of speed, the Secretary added, "there must be advanced bases for our fleet, strategically located far from home, so that an enemy or enemies may be met and turned back before ever gaining foothold in the New World."

". . . The nations that are so heroically resisting the usurper deserve everything of material aid that we are able to give them," Knox said. "They have become as much a part of our system of defense as the the American Navy and Army."

Cities Urged To Prepare For Air Raids

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Feb. 20.—Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York proposed today, particularly to mayors of East and West Coast cities, that they take up the immediate problem of preparing for the possibility of bombing attacks.

Declaring that he was a realist, not an alarmist, the mayor said:

"I will grant that there are 97 per cent probabilities that we may not be attacked, but neither the United States Government nor any mayor can take that 3 per cent chance."

Speaking at a Midwest regional meeting of the United States Conference of Mayors, of which he is president, LaGuardia asserted if there is an invasion, the civilian populations will be in the front line trenches, subject first to incendiary bomb attacks.

From a study made of firefighting under war conditions, he said, each city must have available about $43,000,000 worth of supplementary portable pumping engines and other equipment for each present fire company.

In New York City that would require an expenditure of about $16,000,000, in Boston $2,000,000, in Baltimore $2,500,000, Pittsburgh $1,500,000 and Philadelphia $3,000,000.

The mayor suggested that the Federal Government place an immediate order for this equipment.

LaGuardia called on the mayors to develop streamlined and coordinated defense organizations in direct contact with military officials "in order to know exactly what they are doing and exactly where the antiaircraft batteries would be located and exactly how we have to care for the injured and exactly where everyone must be mobilized and cared for."

Stanley Lewis, mayor of Ottawa and president of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, reported that most Canadian cities have instituted wide air raid precautions, even to the appointment of raid wardens' and medical officers.

Hillman Calls Antistrike Laws Harmful

By John B. Oakes

Post Staff Writer

Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, told the House Judiciary Committee yesterday that antistrike legislation at the present time not only was unnecessary but might actually be harmful to the cause of national defense.

Stating the case with more emphasis than OPM Director William S. Knudsen, when the latter testified Wednesday, Hillman asserted that "nothing ought to be done legislatively at this time."

If mediation procedure should prove necessary, Hillman suggested that it be established by executive order rather than by legislation. But he insisted that "voluntary cooperation" between management and labor had succeeded remarkably well and gave every indication of continuing to do so.

Hillman, in charge of labor relations in the defense program, minimized the current strike situation, citing figures to prove that "strikes are the rare excepiton in defense industry." Adverse weather conditions, he noted, "have affected national defense much more than strikes."

As if to underline his contention that publicity was an effective weapon in settling difficult labor disputes, Hillman revealed the terms proposed by OPM for settlement of the Allis-Chalmers strike in Milwaukee, which has been tying up defense production nearly a month.

The proposal, offered to both sides Saturday, provides that disputes over disciplinary action by the company—or failure to take such action—be submitted to a referee. But despite persistent questioning of committee members, Hillman refused to state more than that the suggested agreement would mean "neither closed nor open shop; not a closed shop nor a device for a closed shop."

A touch of drama was lent to the hearing in respect to the unauthorized strike of nearly 1,000 employes of the American Steel & Wire Co.'s zinc plant at Donora, Pa. At the opening of the afternoon session, Hillman informed the committee that Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, had telegraphed the strikers ordering them to return to work. In midafternoon, Hillman suddenly interrupted his testimony to say he had just been informed by a newspaperman that the strikers had gone back to their jobs.

[The Associated Press last night reported a "partial" resumption of operations in the plant with about 200 workers having returned.—Editor's Note.]

Pointing out that this was an example of the voluntary cooperation offered by "responsible labor leaders," Hillman smilingly observed that "it almost looks as though the whole thing were staged—but it's just a day's work."

Hillman informed the committee that "every responsible labor leader in this country is, day by day, doing everything possible to further the defense effort and to avoid interruption of production."

Noting that 40 per cent fewer man-days of idleness caused by strikes were lost in the last half of 1940 than in the corresponding period of 1939, Hillman declared that this is "the first time in our industrial history" that employment has increased sharply without an increase in the number of strikes.

Less than half as many persons were involved in strikes last year as in the preparedness year 1916, or even the war years 1917 and 1918, he said.

"Given human nature sa it is, this record is almost a perfect record to those of us acquainted with labor relations," he observed. "It's better than the totalitarian governments can show."

Asked about the high initiation fees charged by some unions—notably in the building industry—Hillman commented: "Even in that field, I think we're getting sufficient cooperation to rectify things that are not right—I hope so, anyway."

Committee members fired questions at Hillman regarding his part in inserting a labor-policy clause in competitive bid contracts such as the Ford Motor Co, recently refused to accept.

"I suggested that the War Department effectuate this policy and that it be written into the contract," Hillman said, adding with a smile that "you're giving me entirely too much credit for the situation."

Hillman, a dollar-a-year man, told the committee his salary was still being paid by the union which he heads, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, though he is on leave of absence.

"No matter how low the cost of living is in Washington, I couldn't live on a dollar a year," he wryly commented.

Associated Press Staff Writer

Miami, Fla., Feb. 20.—The American Federation of Labor today put its resources behind a drive among the more than 100,000 workers in the Ford Motor Co. amid predictions it would provide a showdown with the rival C. I. O.

William Green, president of the federation, carefully withheld the number of organizers on the campaign—one of the biggest in A. F. L. history—and the number of members already signed in Ford plants. He said only that a "great many had joined."

"We don't want to give information to the enemy—the C. I. O.," he said, but he did predict success for the campaign—"in a reasonable time, probably within six months."

The federation's plan to step directly into the Ford organizing job—apart from the A. F. L.'s United Automobile Workers' campaigns in other plants—was discussed at the final midwinter sessions of the executive council.

The meeting adjourned on a gloomy note, however, because of a threat that more than 200,000 machinists would leave the federation as the result of a jurisdictional dispute with the carpenters' union.

The Association of Machinists, said their president, Harry W. Brown, have quit paying dues to the A. F. of L. Green said suspension would follow automatically in three months, unless the dispute is settled.

In announcing the Ford organization plan, Green said the federation first would work on the Rouge plant at Dearborn, with 60,000 or more members; the Lincoln plant in Detroit, and the Kansas City plant. In all three, he said, unions are now working.

He decried "loud campaigning, denunciation and recrimination" of the C. I. O.'s drive on Ford employes, and denied a C. I. O. charge that the federation was working with Ford's personnel director, Harry Bennett.

U.S. Bonds Sold After March 1 To Be Taxed

By George Bookman

Post Staff Writer

All baby bonds sold after March 1 will be subject to Federal taxes, the Treasury announced yesterday.

Acting 24 hours after President Roosevelt signed the new defense financing law, the Treasury used its day-old powers to revoke tax exemption from future sales of United States Savings bonds.

At the same time, Secretary Morgenthau revealed that he will lose no time in replacing outstanding Treasury bonds, notes and bills that are free from taxes with taxable securities.

Campaign Mapped

Plans to sell small savings stamps, certificates and bonds to investors of modest means had not "jelled enough yet" to be announced, Morgenthau said, but he had already prepared for a campaign to sell large quantities of these national defense securities to the general public.

The Treasury has already asked Congress for a campaign fund of $3,000,000 to pay the expenses of educating the public to buy the savings securities.

The new defense issues will be similar to the present baby bonds, will bear a comparable rate of interest and maturity date, but will differ by being subject to taxation.

Individuals are now limited to buying $10,000 worth of the baby bonds per year apiece and the prospects are that, using authority in the new law, this ceiling will be drastically lowered, perhaps to $3,000 per person per year.

Refinancing Speeded

The Treasury's refinancing to replace tax-free with taxable securities will get underway on Tuesday, Morgenthau said, unless grave international events delay it.

On that day the Treasury will refund securities totaling $1,222,000,000. This operation provides for exchanging new taxable securities to replace 3⅜ per cent bonds totaling $543,000,000, issued March 16, 1931, and to replace 1½ per cent notes totaling $677,000,000, issued March 16, 1936. Both securities are due March 15.

In addition, Morgenthau said that beginning March 1 he will borrow $200,000,000 a week by use of taxable 91-day Treasury bills. Formerly the Treasury has been borrowing only $100,000,000 weekly in this manner, thus the doubling of the amount will bring in $100,000,000 in cash each week for 13 weeks (91 days), when the amount would have to be stepped up to $300,000,000 in order to bring in the same amount of new money each week.

Sales To Be Pushed

Sale of the new defense savings bonds will be pushed vigorously "but there will be no flag waving," Morgenthau promised.

The need for vigor is occasioned by the fact that the Treasury has to raise $12,000,000,000 of new money between now and July, 1942, for the domestic rearmament program and Government expenses. An additional sum will have to be raised when aid to Britain under the lend-lease bill gets under way.

Morgenthau predicted that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would borrow $500,000,000 from the public in March or April, using $300,000,000 of the proceeds to reimburse the Treasury for capital investments in the corporation and keeping $200,000,000 to finance the Corporation's own cash needs.

Sales of baby bonds up to January 31 totaled $4,328,056,850, maturity value.

The bonds run for five years and are sold on a discount basis in amounts at maturity of $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000.

Senate Group Named To Plan Peace Budget

A special Senate committee of three, headed by Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, was created yesterday to study the Federal Government's fiscal set-up with a view to formulating a plan for an "automatically balanced budget in times of peace."

Other members, named by Vice President Wallace under terms of a resolution by Tydings proposing the inquiry, are Thomas (Democrat), Utah, and Holman (Republican), Oregon. Tydings said the committee, which will have $10,000 for the study, would begin its studies promptly.

Germans Blamed For 8 Irish Ship Attacks, Loss of 4

Dublin, Feb. 20 (AP).—Prime Minister Eamon De Valera told the Dail (parliament) today that since the war began aircraft bearing Nazi insignia attacked eight Irish ships and sank four of them with a loss of 20 lives.

Four of the attacks were made within 30 miles of the Irish coast, he said, adding that in two cases the ships were machine-gunned as well as bombed.

Five other Irish ships were lost, three by mines and two by unknown causes. The aggregate tonnage of the nine ships was 14,205.

De Valera said that in one case four machine-gun attacks were made on the ship after the order to take to the boats had been given.

Defense to Be Geologists' Topic

Plans for the cooperation of State and Federal geologists in investigation of sources of war materials will be discussed today at the annual meeting of the Association of American State Geologists in the Geological Survey offices, North Interior Department Building.

Ways and means by which the facilities and personnel of the State geological departments may be worked into the national defense picture was forecast as a discussion highlight.

During the afternoon, officers will be elected to succeed R. A. Smith, of Lansing, Mich., as president; Dr. Raymond C. Moore, of Lawrence, Kan., vice president, and Dr. Paul H. Price, of Morgantown, W. Va., secretary.

Senators Hit, Defend Aid Bill on Radio

By the United Press

Five leading opponents of the Administration's British aid bill went before the Nation's vast radio audience last night to deliver an all-out attack on the measure. At the same time, Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, spoke for the bill on the air.

Speaking on different fronts, three Democratic and two Republican Senators warned that the measure is "purely and simply a war bill" and called upon the people to lift their voices against it.

Senators Robert A. Taft (Republican), Ohio, and David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee spoke from here over a National Broadcasting Co. network; Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), Missouri, spoke over the Columbia Broadcasting System. Senators Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, and Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, addressed a joint rally of the America First Committee and the Keep America Out of War Committee in New York.

They emphasized these common points:

That the lend-lease bill is a misnomer;" that it should be called a "war bill."

Dictatorship Predicted

That passage of the measure will plunge the United States into war and create a dictatorship in this country.

That it would give President Roosevelt unprecedented powers to carry the United States into war.

That it would strip the Nation of its defenses and bring war to our shores.

Here are some of the highlights of each speaker's remarks:

Wheeler—"H. R. 1776 (the lend-lease bill) has been described as a step towards war. It is. But it is more—authorizes intervention. It means war—and war means dictatorship for the duration of the conflict—and later, peacetime dictatorship. It authorizes the President to commit acts of war . . . I hate Hitlerism . . . I am intensely sympathetic with the cause of England . . . my loyalty is to the United States . . . I am selfishly American . . ."

Nye—"If we permit this co-called lend-lease bill to become the law of the land we shall find ourselves almost overnight in war. Under the bill the United States is being asked to do for England many, many times more than England's dominions are being asked to do for England.

"Appeasers of Britain"

"The only navy in the world that has ever been a threat to any liberty or any policy pursued in the Western Hemisphere is the navy which we are now caused to believe is our first line of defense. We never, never have been dependent upon the British navy. This bill grants very definite powers to the President of the United States, powers in excess of powers ever granted to a President even when our country was at war."

Taft—"Appeasement means the yielding to demands, with the hope that such yielding will prevent further aggression. Germany has made no demands on the United States; has made no attack on the United States. The American appeasers are those who vainly strive to satisfy Britain with money and materials, in the hope that they may avoid the sending of men. Unless we are prepared to declare war ourselves, we should not pass this bill in its present form."

Clark—"This is not a defense measure. It is a bill for bringing us certainly to the brink of war; possibly in the sole discretion of one man for putting us into war. To win a dictated peace Britain must obviously invade the continent and this, equally obviously, cannot be done by her own man power. We would have to supply the man power, our young men, the heart and hope of America, would have to be sent to the shambles, and there would be no Dunkerque for us. We would be too far from home."

Senator Pepper said over the Columbia System that the "English-speaking world now stands with its back to the wall against a hostile non-English speaking world."

"We are no match in a land-war for our enemies," he continued. "The geographical distribution of the English-speaking peoples is such that the only way the enemy can reach us is by obtaining mastery of the sea.

"The lend-lease bill contemplates the preservation of the most strategic frontiers of the English-speaking world by the maintenance of the British nation and the British navy."

BAREFOOT PEDESTRIAN—One Los Angeles pedestrian got discouraged yesterday when a new downpour after a week of rain sent water running ankle-deep through downtown streets. She removed her shoes, tucked them under her arm and set off at a fast pace

Well-Armed Octopus Named For President

Smithsonian Institution yesterday informed the President that it had named a rare type octopus after him, to be known hereafter as "octopus Roosevelti."

The particular octopus was discovered off desolate James Island during the President's trip to the Galapagos Islands in 1938, when he was accompanied by a party of scientists.

"Octopus Roosevelti," the mollusk experts determined, is rather small for an eight-armed fellow. The male is about 2 feet long; the female, 7 inches. The species is now part of the collection at National Museum.

Aid Bill Pilots Reject Ban On New A.E.F.

Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, and Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, joined the round-robin discussion. Barkley denied it was ever intended that Britain would pay for private sites of the bases or give free her crown lands. He said the base program is proceeding undelayed.

Springs a Surprise

As Reynolds took the Senate floor in unexpected opposition to the bill, his colleague Senator Bailey, who spoke for passage Wednesday, called at the White House with Gov. Broughton, of North Carolina. Broughton told the President North Carolina was overwhelmingly for the bill.

Reynolds' stand against the bill surprised even his fellow opponents, since he voted in favor of reporting the bill out of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Reynolds said he considered the country "perilously, dangerously close to war." He said it was a disputed point whether the bill would take the country closer to war but "insofar as I am concerned, I am not willing to take the chance of moving my country closer to a war which is not ours. Therefore, I am going to vote against this bill."

Won't Vote for War

He added that "if after the passage of this bill the time arrives to take the last final step—I mean a declaration of war by this body—I want to serve notice now that I shall never cast my vote to send American manhood across any ocean to fight in any way for the preservation of any foreign nation."

Bailey, North Carolina's senior Senator, had said Wednesday that he favored intervention in behalf of Britain, and if that meant war "I am ready."

Reynolds said that "instead of going across the Atlantic to destroy naziism and fascism there, I say that we should make destruction of naziism and fascism right here in our own midst, whose members and agents are working night and day with the sole objective of destroying this country.

"Before we enter this war, that is to say, according to some, before we pass this bill, we should be careful of every step . . .

Calls It Subterfuge

"In conclusion, I want to state that I am not opposed to giving aid to England as is provided under existing statutes. However, I am bitterly opposed to any subterfuge or the circumventing of the present statutes by any type of legislation such as this which we are now called upon to vote on."

Earlier, Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, previously uncommitted on the bill, said that "whether or not we like all of its provisions . . . this bill, as a practical matter, is the one channel now available for providing the aid to Britain that is needed to gain time for our national defense program." In a statement to constituents, Burton said he thought the present bill "went too far" and hoped it would be made "more clearly a bill for aid to Britain 'short of war.'"

Reynolds, expected to speak for five hours, spoke only two; Barkley remarked that he "had an attack of brevity." No other opposition speakers were prepared to go on. The majority leader again called on the Senate for "cooperation" to speed passage, and urged opposition Senators to have their speeches ready.

Schedule of Speakers

In reply, Senator Taft announced a schedule of speakers through Tuesday of next week. Those taking the floor against the bill today and tomorrow include Senators Gillette, of Iowa, and Bulow, of South Dakota (Democrats), and Brooks, of Illinois; Shipstead, of Minnesota, and Taft (Republicans). In the first two days of next week, speakers will be Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho; Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Senators Tobey, of New Hampshire; Danaher, of Connecticut, and Johnson, of California (Republicans).

Senator Bone opened discussion of the destroyer trade for Caribbean bases by quoting from a story by Thomas F. Stokes, Scripps-Howard writer, and asking if it were true that "swamp lands" were being offered the Navy for bases in exchange for the 90 destroyers.

"Of course Britain is in a hell of a shape, but she won't yield up her crown lands," said Bone.

"Why can't the British government be as generous as this government, which is preparing to give away its shirt? Certainly Britain, in her death grapple with Germany, should be prepared to give us decent lands."

Bone said "this is a poor time for Great Britain to drive a hard bargain" and the United States should get more than "a huge expense account" for the traded ships.

Barkley replied that contracts already have been let for work on four satisfactory base sites, and four others are under consideration. He He said the land must be obtained from private citizens, that it never was proposed that England contribute the land.

Managers of the bill conferred on amendment strategy in the Senate secretary's office immediately following Senate recess. Participating in the conference were Barkley, Chairman George, of the Foreign Relations Committee; Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Senator Connally, of Texas.

however, that Packard's national defense work would not be affected, that 520 men in the company's marine engine division working on Government orders would continue work and that construction would be unimpeded on three new Packard plants for production of Rolls-Royce aircraft engines.

The Lansing strike started February when 2,500 workers walked out in a dispute over a union shop between the management and the United Automobile Workers Union (A. F. L.). National defense work was involved.

Members of the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers walked out at the Willard Storage Battery Co., Cleveland, because, union officials said, the management had not replied satisfactorily to demands for health protection measures. The plant, employing about 700, has subcontracts for militar airplane and truck batteries. A company spokesman predicted a settlement within 48 hours.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers (C. I. O.) called a strike at the Troy (N. Y.) plant of Cluett, Peabody & Co., which has a $228,000 contract for Army shirts. The plant employs 3,800. Union officials said there were "a number of grievances" and that 1,000 had walked out.

Members of the aircraft division of the United Automobile Workers of America (C. I. O.) went on strike at the B. H. Aircraft Co., filing subcontracts for several larger companies having defense contracts.

Fred Yakel, union organizer, said more than 100 of the firm's 158 workers had walked out. Officials of the firm said that only 50 had stopped work.

The new disputes cropped up during a day marked also by these other developments bearing on labor and defense:

The Office of Production Management dispatched Thomas F. Burns, its senior labor adviser, to inquire into reasons for the collapse of negotiations to end the strike at the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co.'s Milwaukee plant. C. I. O. Union officials withdrew from the negotiations Wednesday.

Defense officials thought they had arranged for reopening of the plant when they proposed Saturday that a referee hear all disciplinary questions. However, a hitch developed, the five-week-old strike, affecting 9,000 workers, has halted work on $45,000,000 of Army and Navy orders, principally for machinery.

Partial operations were resumed during the day at the Donura, Pa., zinc works of the American Steel & Wire Co. About 200 C. I. O. members quit work there Wednesday as a result of a dispute over wage adjustments for some men. The C. I. O. said the strike was unauthorized and ordered the men back to work. The company, employing about 900, has orders for gun shells.

Defense officials continued to be faced with the threat of a strike at the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Lackawanna, N. Y., plant, employing 14,000.

The C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee denounced as a "lockout" the company's action in giving notices of "indefinite suspension" to some 300 to 350 employes of the coke-oven department. The situation was laid before union members at a meeting last night.

Striking members of a C. I. O. union at Carteret, N. J., voted last night to return to their jobs at the Foster-Wheeler Corporation plant after receiving terms of a new work contract.

The men will return to work at 6:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Settlement of a ten-day-old C. I. O. strike at two Cincinnati plants of the William Powell Valve Co., holders of subcontracts for Navy Department work, was announced tonight.

Business Ousting Anti-U. S. Agents, Says Rockefeller

Copyright by New York Times

A number of American business firms conducting operations in Latin America have cleared up situations arising out of their unwitting employment of agents who are engaged in or contributing to anti-American activities in that area, Nelson A. Rockefeller, coordinator of commerce and cultural relations between the American republics, announced Wednesday.

"The Government is confident," Rockefeller said "of receiving the cooperation of American business towards the following objectives:

"(1) The replacement of agents or employes of a United States company or its affiliates in the other, American republics wherever such agents or employes are identified as contributing to or participating in anti-American activities.

"(2) The handling of advertising by companies of the United States in such a manner that the revenue derived from such advertising is not used to foster anti-American propaganda in those republics."

Nazi Raiders Seize 60 Million Eggs

Berlin, Feb. 20 (AP).—Back from surface raids in distant seas, German naval Lieut. Jochen Brennecke told foreign correspondents today that "our most exciting capture was 60,000,000 eggs, on their way to London."

"It was beautiful!" he said. "Fantastic records for omelet consumption were set up there on the high seas."

Brennecke, youthful but ferociously bearded, declared that a ship which uses its radio anywhere in the presence of a German surface raider invites instant destruction. On the other hand, he added, crewmen and passengers who submit to capture are in for some weeks of adventure, risks and food which sometimes is less than it should be. But, he declared, they need have no fear of brutal treatment.

'Already in War—Everybody Knows It,' Miss Thompson Says

Influenced the world, giving it the words "freedom," "parliament," "congress," "suffrage," and "rule of the people." It also had given the world the word "gentleman," a word, she said, that describes personal and social behavior—a man of honor.

"The Germanic world of Hitler," she said, "thinks that man is determined by his blood—that is to say, by his animal and biological nature.

"The English-speaking world holds the idea that man is determined by his speech, by his mind and by his soul; that men think as they speak and speak as they think, and the English language, instead of being the great separator of men has been the great uniter of men . . ."

"The triumph of the English-speaking world does not lie in its racial supremacy, or in its power to subject other races to it. It lies in its incomparable power to assimilate other nations and races to itself. The United States of America, 130,000,000 free citizens in a union of free States, is composed of millions who once spoke Italian, or German, or Magyar, or almost any other language.

"Yet we all speak English today, and it is this hospitable nature of the English tongue which has made it at once the language with the largest vocabulary on earth and the language with the simplest grammar, and thus the language easiest to learn by ear."

Looking beyond the war, Miss Thompson envisioned a United States of Europe, a single army and navy to act as "a police force for civiliation," and a supreme court for western civilization. The United States, she said, could join such a federation.

She saw all this as a carrying forward of the American Revolution.

"For 20 years," Miss Thompson said, "we have systematically allowed the world to go to hell, washing our hands in a whole series of Pontius Pilate gestures. Now it will go the whole way unless we really have vision. But we don't have to invent a new vision, we only have to extend the one we have.

"We must lift the banner for federation, the motto 'E Pluribus Unum' and the peace cry for the United States of Europe, not a master race, but a United States in which there is freedom and equality for all--for the least as well as the greatest."

"For Common Defense"

It could not be expected that Europe would slavishly follow our own constutional system, she said, but added:

"We must come out for the federal principle rather than for a slavish copy. There well might be a federation for common defense, with a single army and navy, and, horrifying as it may seem to your ears, I believe that the whole English-speaking world, including ourselves, could join such a federation whose army and navy would be a police for civilization.

"For, believe me, we have got to do away with large-scale war between major nations. This war probably came as late as it is possible to have a war unless you want to destroy civilization altogether. For within a foreseeable time we shall solve the secret of atomic energy, and when we do any berserk nation may have the power literally to destroy whole civilizations with artificial earthquakes."

Miss Thompson said that those Congressmen who talk of tieing the United States to the British lion's tail have a "warped vision." The British lion, she said, is tied to the tail of the United States. The center of power and the leadership of the Anglo-Saxon world, she said, has passed to the first rebel the United States.

"As far as I know," Miss Thompson continued, "this is the first time in history when a nation like our own has been offered the chance to have the leadership of a fourth part of the globe for the asking. We don't need to fight a war of conquest to get it—we just need to take it and defend it. In this sense precisely, Britain is fighting our war. She will emerge from it weaker and we shall be the winners—the winners of a colossal responsibility and a colossal opportunity."

Representative Karl E. Mundt (Republican), of South Dakota, a member of the panel, said that Miss Thompson's grand scheme would get the United States into the war and would put Uncle Sam in the position of a man who has to marry a widow with 12 children, all of them with measles.

Miss Thompson retorted that Britain could not very well be compared to the widow, since Britain took more than 70 per cent of our exports and had a navy, the loss of which would cause a panic in this country.

"As for drawing us into war," she said, "we are already in the war—everybody knows it."

In answer to a question from Representative Mundt about sending several million American boys to Europe, she said military men had told her that this would not be necessary.

"But if I thought it necessary," she said, "I would spend 1,000,000 lives to save this country, including the life of my own son. And also my own."

"Mussolini" of Far East

She said she didn't think it would be necessary to defeat Germany, but Hitler. She expressed the opinion that if Hitler failed to conquer England, his star would set.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in a jolly mood, read off questions submitted by the audience and submitted them not only to Miss Thompson but to other members of the panel. The first question asked whether the United States ought to stop Japan's southward march now, or whether that was what Hitler wanted us to do.

"I think Japan is the Mussolini of the Far East," Miss Thompson said. "I think she will come into the war if the British Empire is licked, but not until then."

The First Lady read another question chiding Miss Thompson for not mentioning the collective economy of Russia and its influence on the future world.

"I just don't think that the future plan of the world lies in a country that just 30 years ago was totally illiterate and living in filth," Miss Thompson said. "I have been there and I know that Soviet Russia is fascinated by the United States. It is ridiculous to think that the world of tomorrow is coming from Russia."

She said that starry-eyed Russians had shown her baby clinics. When told that other countries had established them 45 years ago, she said, they would snort "Bourgeois!"

Nover Also on Panel

Barnet Nover, foreign affairs columnist for The Washington Post, and Marquis W. Child, of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch Washington bureau, both members of the panel, joined Miss Thompson in a discussion of the problem of redistributing populations.

Miss Thompson said in passing that Hitler expected, in case of victory, to "depopulate England" because he couldn't trust Englishmen on their own island.

Huston Thompson and John W. Studebaker were other members of the panel.

Miss Thompson concluded the meeting with the observation that the kind of world that is to emerge from the war would depend "on the faith and vision of the United States."

She Wants to Be an American

16 and 20 in 1937. According to Lewin, it was a meeting of the medical society's executive committee gathered for the purpose of committing an illegal act.

Leahy's contention was that it should suffice to lay the results of the hearings before the jury, that to reopen the whole case would impose an unnecessary burden upon the ears and patience of judge and jury.

Dr. Scandiffio, who was expelled from the medical society, one of the defendants, is now medical director of Group Health Association. Dr. Lee, who quit GHA after the first session of the expulsion trial, is now in private practice here. The former is scheduled to testify for the prosecution and the latter may be called.

Jury Excused

Yesterday's 4 o'clock outburst over admissibility of the disciplinary proceedings, occurring after the jury had been excused from the courtroom, topped off another day of fresh disclosures of the organized doctors' 1937 campaign methods against GHA, a health cooperative for Federal employes here.

Continuing its strategy of trying to convict the American Medical Association, District Medical Society, Washington Academy of Surgery, Harris County (Texas) Medical Society and 20 individual defendants by their own letters and recorded conversations, the Government read documents revealing:

That representatives of the A. M. A. and the local medical society, at a special trouble-shooting conference in Chicago, indulged in a little buck-passing, as to whether the national or District organization should take responsibility for initiating legal proceedings against G. H. A.

That Dr. Prentiss Willson, one of the individual defendants, likened the Federal workers' cooperative to "an illegitimate child left on our doorstep."

That on October 6, 1937, nearly four weeks before GHA opened its doors here, a member of the District Medical Society pleaded with that body to adopt a more liberal attitude and investigate the possibility of starting a group care plan of its own.

On November 6, 1937, Dr. Francis X. McGovern and R. Arthur Hooe were at headquarters of the A. M. A., having been dispatched to Chicago by the District society to talk over matters with leaders of the national organization.

Excerpts of the discussion follow:

Dr. McGovern—It seems that the intelligent way to go about this thing is politically and it would seem the wisest thing to do would be for the parent organization (A.M.A.) to contact the private physician of every Congressman and Senator and carry on a campaign that way.

Dr. Olin West—Political attempts always bring reprisals.

To Dr. Hooe's question as to whether the A. M. A. had exhausted all means of "combating this thing," Dr. West replied that it certainly had not and had no idea of quitting. Dr. Hooe then asked what was thought of the idea of having the A. M. A. tell the American press of its opposition to G. H. A.

Dr. West—A conference of capable newspapermen was held here a few days ago and this among many other subjects was discussed but the principal interest of the newspaperman is the method of securing and publishing news. There are radicals among newspapermen as well as among Congressmen and physicians.

Dr. McGovern—Do you feel that the medical profession is rendering medical service to the people as well as it could or should?

Dr. West—It is doing it better than any other profession on the face of the earth.

Dr. McGovern (after reading an abstract of a paper showing the "indifference of medical organizations," he had presented four years earlier as retiring president of the District Medical Society)—Do you feel that everything is all right in American medicine today? . . . Why all these different types of practice springing up in the United States if behind it there does not seem, in the minds of laymen and of some physicians, to be some need?

Dr. West—The organized medical profession has tried hard to have the need met and has done very well under all the circumstances.

Each Chary of Filing Suit

Dr. McGovern (a few minutes later)—The question in the minds of some is as to whether it G. H. A.) should be fought legally.

Dr. West—It is my purely personal opinion that somebody has to fight it legally. If the A. M. A. does it, it may arouse forces that will make it more difficult.

Dr. Hooe—Why not the District Medical Society, by the same token?

For the remainder of the lengthy conference, the participants talked about "controlling the hospitals" and lobbying their cause on Capitol Hill.

Drs. McGovern and Hooe, who, along with Dr. West, the A. M. A.'s secretary and general manager, are now among the defendants, had been authorized to go to Chicago at a District society meeting three days earlier.

It was at that session that Dr. Willson characterized G. H. A. as an "illegitimate child." He said, according to the transcript read to the jurors by Prosecutor Lewin, that its most vulnerable spot for attack seemed to be the legality—or illegality—of its corporative setup. Constructively, he suggested that the society begin thinking of a group care plan of its own.

Radcliffe Reelected by 'Illegal Methods,' Sen. Tobey Charges

The Senate seat of George Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, "was gained by illegal methods," Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, charged last night.

In a minority report from the Senate committee investigating campaign expenditures, Tobey stated that more than $200,000 was spent last year in Maryland in behalf of two candidates for Senatorial nomination, "one of whom was elected and seated in the United States Senate."

The Maryland corrupt practices act, according to a formula based on the number of votes cast at the preceding election, allowed a maximum expenditure of $3,000 in 1940 in behalf of each candidate, Tobey asserted.

The campaign committee majority refused to take cognizance of the Maryland primary case, Tobey said, on the ground that the State law applied only to the election campaign.

Radcliffe, who is now serving his second term in the Senate, defeated Howard Bruce in the Democratic primaries and then defeated Harry W. Nice, Republican, in the election last November.

The statement on the Maryland primaries was one of three supplemental reports issued by Tobey. Publication of the committee's majority report was postponed yesterday for the third time since its adoption Saturday. Chairman Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, said the report will be released Monday.

U.S. Seizes 15 Tons Of Propaganda

more complete disclosure rather than censorship.

Walker said he had been tudying the matter with the State and Justice Departments and that those who have been dealing with the matter feel it would be wise to change existing legislation to require more complete information concerning the propaganda and their senders. Walker suggested that Congress require that:

All foreign propaganda mail be properly labeled;

Copies of each piece be filed for inspection by the Government and by the public;

Information about the source of the material be published on the material itself, as provided by regulations now covering second-class mail, and

The names and addresses of the recipients of the propaganda be made available by the senders, "provided, of course, that appropriate safeguards have been established for the protection of such recipients."

Walker said the ruling that the material was nonmailable was in accordance with the provisions of the International Postal Convention, which permits the designation of what is not mailable to be made in accordance with the domestic regulations of this country.

Mrs. Ruffin, Writer, Dies in Alabama

Mobile, Ala., Feb. 20 (AP).—Mrs. Margaret Ellen Henry - Ruffin, author of several books and a prolific writer of magazine verse, short stories and articles, died at a hospital here yesterday.

Among her books was "The North Star," a romance of the Christianizing of Norway. She was the widow of Francis Gildhart Ruffin, of Charlottesville, Va.

Hopkins Named To Defense Board

utive vice president of General Motors; William E. Levis, chairman of the board of Owens-Illinois Glass Co., and Robert E. Doherty, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Hopkins' appointment to the board was seen as bringing a trusted confidant of President Roosevelt into the heart of the defense program's most critical organization. Hopkins' experience on his recent trip to England is also expected to make him influential in determining supply of defense materials to be sent abroad.

Formation of two more OPM committees was also announced yesterday by E. R. Stettinius, jr., director of priorities. The two new bodies will deal with priorities in the fields of rubber and of hides, skin and leather. Stettinius also disclosed the appointment as a consultant of Phillip D. Reed, chairman of the board of General Electric Co.

Hitler Burned in Effigy

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HARVARD "HEX" PARTY—A group of Harvard students, identifying themselves as the "Crimson Cult," burned an effigy of Adolf Hitler on a bank of the Charles River. Members of the "cult," about 20 in number, stuck pins in the figure before burning it and explained they were "invoking all the occult methods of ancient and modern alchemists" to bring misfortune to Hitler

'I Want to Buy Train,' Typical Whim of Scotty

Valter B. Clausen, after a trip with Death Valley Scotty over his old trails, is telling the story of the fabulous desert prospector in four daily stories, of which this is the third.

By Walter B. Clausen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Death Valley, Calif., Feb. 20.—One June day in 1905, a bluff, pleasant-faced—and sane-looking—stranger walked into the Santa Fe passenger agent's office in Los Angeles, introduced himself as Walter Scott, and said:

"I want to buy a train."

The agent gulped, fumbled for a fitting reply and finally blurted out:

"You know, Mr. Scott, trains cost money."

The stranger slid $100,000 United States cash money across the counter and said:

"Is that enough?"

That was what might be called the public debut of Death Valley Scotty.

He had circulated obscurely for 20-odd years as a Death Valley mail rider, surveyor's helper, borax mill worker and Buffalo Bill Circus rider, but this was the start of his career as a fabulous figure that has continued right down to the present.

It was only a few weeks ago that Scotty emerged from the desert where he has gleaned a fortune in gold, to create a flurry by cryptically inquiring of the Secretary of the Treasury what a feller should do if he stumbled across some United States $10,000 gold certificates.

Scotty didn't say right out that he had any, but, on the basis of past performance, it wouldn't be the least bit implausible. You wouldn't have expected anyone to buy a train, but——

"I craved a little excitement," Scotty reminisced to me a few days ago as we cruised over his old desert trails. "Down at Daggett, Calif., I had rented the little old jail house, which they never used, to keep my pack supplies in for the burro trips into the valley.

"I had plenty of whisky there, and it used to be a roundhouse for the hog-heads, the engineers. We talked about trains and gold. I learned a lot from them.

"I figured a train oughta make it to Chicago in 40 hours. I got into Los Angeles in June. The papers were calling me a fourflusher and a fake. I scented out the lay of the land.

"I walked into the Santa Fe office and said I wanted to buy a train.

"I said I wanted 10-wheeler locomotives. I wanted the bearings packed in castor oil. I wanted all westbound switches spiked. I wanted to make it in 40 hours." It cost $5,500.

Scotty's "Coyote Special," engine 442, a 10-wheeler, baggage car, diner and Pullman sleeper, pulled out of Los Angeles station at 1 p. m. The best previous record was 57 hours and 56 minutes.

June 11, at 11:54 a. m. the special roared into the old Polk Street Station in Chicago, with every car blackened—time, 44 hours and 53 minutes. Scotty rode most of the way in the cab. "Shoveled coal 1,500 miles," he says.

Scotty was the man of the hour in Chicago. He was called the "Flying Gold Bug" and "Human Horn of Plenty."

"How much are you worth?" reporters asked.

"All the way from a dollar to $20,000,000."

"Where's your mine?"

"Where the devil himself can't find it."

U. S. Sentiment Favors War in the Event European Power Invades Latin America

This is the first of two articles dealing with the attitude of the American public toward foreign continents. Today's report concerns public opinion in this country toward Central and South America. The next report on Sunday, will deal with American attitudes toward Japan in the Far East.

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 20.—What do people in the United States think about South America? Are they indifferent to the fate and future of the republics to the South? Would they fight to defend them against invasion?

Four Facts Stressed

To find the facts concerning public opinion on this vital issue, the American Institute of Public Opinion has gone to the source—to the people themselves in a Nation-wide survey. This survey reveals four important facts:

1—Most Americans regard Central and South America as a region of great natural resources and potential wealth which is destined to become powerful and important in the world scene. Only a tiny minority think of the region as poor, weak or backward.

2—The great majority believe Nazi Germany will try to get control of South American countries or is already trying, and sentiment is nearly unanimous that we should do all in our power to prevent this.

3—There has been a significant increase in the number of Americans who think the United States should fight to defend Central or South America against foreign attack. The number favoring such aid has nearly tripled in three years.

4—A sizable majority believe the United States should lend money to Latin-American countries for the building of industries, railroads and defenses.

Trend Is Significant

It is clear from the trends of sentiment regarding Latin America that there has been a tremendous awakening of interest in, and concern over, South America and Central America since the European war broke out.

Back in 1938, only one-third of voters polled by the Institute were ready to defend South America against foreign invasion. By September, 1939, this figure had only increased to 53 per cent—a bare majority. Today, nearly nine persons in every ten with opinions on the subject are ready to take up the defense of Latin America in case of invasion. The trend follows:

"If Brazil, Argentina, Chile or any other Central or South American country is actually attacked by any European power, do you think the United States should fight to keep that European power out?"

	Yes	No
March, 1938	33%	67%
September, 1939	53	47
Today	86	14

In the most recent study only one voter in every twelve (8 per cent) was undecided or without an opinion

The other questions and results in the survey follow.

"Which of the following statements best describes Central and South America"

Central and South America have very few natural resources, such as good farm land, oil, coal, silver, gold, water power, etc., and will probably always be poor, weak and backward, 8 per cent.

Central and South America have many natural resources and some time may become fairly wealthy and strong, 33 per cent.

Central and South America have many natural resources and probably will become very wealthy and powerful, 48 per cent.

Don't know, 11 per cent.

"Do you think Germany will try to get control of Central and South American countries?"

Yes	50%
Germany is already trying	38
No	7
Don't know	5

Especially significant in the above table is the fact that only 7 per cent—fewer than one person in every ten—believe Hitler's statement that he has no interest in the continent of the Americas.

"Do you think it is important for the United States to keep Germany from getting more influence or control over Central and South America countries than she now has?"

Yes	93%
No	4
No opinion	3

"Do you think the United States should lend money to Central and South American countries to help them build up their industries, railroad and defenses?"

Yes	58%
Qualified opinions	12
No	22

Geographic Society To Hear Luis Marden

Luis Marden, National Geographic Society staff writer and photographer, will address members of the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall tonight on the subject "In Montezuma's Painted Land." His lecture is based on a recent journey through Mexico and will be illustrated with new color motion pictures made by Ralph Gray.

Marden's talk will begin with a description of Mexico City and environs, and follow on to Oaxaca, Cholula, Toluca, Papantla and less-known places. Hinterland scenes will include a realistic portrayal of the spectacular flying-pole dance of the "voladores."

Maj. Waggaman Calls Versailles Treaty 'Fair'

New Orleans, Feb. 20 (INS).—Maj. Ennals Waggaman, of Washington, senior vice commander in chief of the Military Order of the World War, said tonight he did not share the opinion of a large number of persons here and abroad that the Versailles Treaty was unfair.

"In my opinion," he said, "the only unfair thing about it was that England and France did not make Germany live up to it. The Versailles Treaty will look like a schoolgirl's letter compared to what Germany will do if she wins this war."

Howe Voices Probability That Symphony Will Be Saved

IT LOOKS BAD—Mrs. E. McLean King looks over the tally board of the National Symphony drive. Campaign ended yesterday, some $32,000 short of the $107,600 goal set for sustaining funds for the orchestra's 1941-1942 season

Although the public campaign for funds for the National Symphony Orchestra next season ended yesterday $32,000 short of its $107,600 goal, Walter Bruce Howe, chairman, said that it is probable that Washington will still have its symphony.

The Musicians Protective Union does not have to be notified until March 15 whether the orchestra will continue next season, he said. He added that he could see where all but $6,000 of the needed remainder could be raised.

He made this statement at the final report meeting yesterday in the Carlton Hotel, where new response was kindled. It was announced that, through Conductor Hans Kindler, who is now on a Southern tour with the orchestra, a conditional pledge of $1,000 would be given, if it were matched by nine other $1,000 pledges. Two of these were immediately made. Howe said he would personally give an added contribution of 20 per cent of all money brought in between yesterday and March 12.

The $75,263.25 reported at the meeting yesterday came from 6,085 contributors and represented 69.95 per cent of the goal. The campaign had been extended for a week past its original deadline.

Howe said he felt that $12,000 additional could be expected from the existing committees; $5,000 from a commercial source; two anonymous contributions for $5,000 and $3,000.

Although committees will not remain organized, volunteer workers may follow up cards which are out, which have names of previous contributors on them, Howe said. About half of the 150 present at the luncheon responded to the call to continue with the canvassing.

"The public side of the campaign is over, but until we have exhausted all of the possibilities, we still have an orchestra," Howe said. "We have from today until the evening of March 14 to turn in the last penny necessary."

Among gifts announced yesterday were $100 from Kirsten Flagstad, Metropolitan Opera soprano, who has appeared with the orchestra several times in the past year; $250 from the Association of Colored School Teachers in appreciation of the concerts in the colored schools; $5 from an 11-year-old pianist, Earle Donoho, Bethesda, Md.

C.I.O. Plans Drive To Organize Aircraft Workers

President Philip Murray, of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, yesterday announced appointment of Richard Frankensteen, of Detroit, a director of the United Automobile Workers, to head a drive for organization of aircraft workers.

Frankensteen immediately announced a prime objective will be to obtain an upward revision of wage scales for aircraft industry workers.

"The average hourly wage in aircraft today is 74 cents an hour," he said. "In automobiles, where the work is similar, the average hourly wage rate is slightly above 95 cents. This gap must be narrowed down in the interest of aircraft workers' living standards and of the uninterrupted construction of the necessary defense planes.

"Aircraft workers have also stressed their desire for such machinery as now exists in 700 organized automobile plants for the adjustment of problems which arise in the plants."

Walter Smethurst was named assistant to Frankensteen.

Shaw, Kirk Confirmed To Diplomatic Posts

The Senate confirmed yesterday the nomination of G. Howland Shaw, of Massachusetts, a foreign service career man, to be an assistant Secretary of State.

Also confirmed was the nomination of Alexander C. Kirk, of Illinois, Minister to Egypt, to serve also as Minister to Saudi Arabia.

The chain grocery stores will remain open all day to accommodate their customers, but will be closed all day Monday. The City Postoffice will make its usual deliveries tomorrow. Dr. Cowley Declines Minnesota Post

Clinton, N. Y., Feb. 20 (AP).—Dr. William H. Cowley declined tonight the presidency of the Nation's second largest State university to remain at one of its oldest small colleges.

In refusing an invitation to become president of the University of Minnesota, Dr. Crowley said he wanted to continue the educational program he started when he became president of Hamilton College here two and a half years ago.

Founded in 1812, Hamilton has a student body of 450 as compared to 40,000 at Minnesota, which has more than 900 members on its faculty and staff.

Minneapolis, Feb. 20 (AP).—Dr. Walter C. Coffey, dean of the department of agriculture at the University of Minnesota, late today was elected acting president of the school, effective July 1.

WASHINGTON PAN-AMERICANETTES. Two magnetic little Latin-American entertainers, who are still regular Washington girls, have just taken over in Ciro's Famous Village. They're Ariel, dancer and songstress, and soprano Nancy Giannina. Ariel came to Washington just a few years ago, when she was 14, and already a mistress of the Spanish classical dances. While acting as a professional model she also took voice lessons and now adds lilting song to her rumba and conga stepping. Nancy Giannina began singing in public when she was 5; in the last couple of years has graduated into the radio and has also sung leading roles in a number of amateur productions of Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

Allergic to gold is Maestro Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room. The touch of the horrid yellow stuff upsets his system. He's had his collar buttons backed with platinum. . . .

PR-RESENT ARMS! Rodd Raffell's Nightingale Band, with the youngest age average around town, is contributing heavily to the military services. Saxist Mel Holober will don the uniform of a lieutenant in the Marine Corps on February 28 and Saxist Bernie Miller will entrain for an Army camp on March 3. There'll be a big farewell party for the boys before they leave. In the meantime Maestro Raffell is looking around for a couple of young married saxaphone players with large families—if there are such.

HANDSOME INDIANS. Recent Indian night club stars command the conclusion that the redskin race is terrifically good looking. The Shoreham's Bob Castaine, who'd be a decoration for any magazine cover, is part Sioux. The very beautiful Princess Red Rock who preceded him at the Shoreham is an Alaskan Indian—almost an Eskimo. Six-foot Bob Heathen, a half-Cherokee, was the handsomest emcee ever to appear at Troika.

HI HAT PICTURE. Manager Russell A. Conn very elated because Mrs. Conn is making a fine recovery from that surgery session, declaring that he wasn't recovering as well from his first 1941 golf session . . . Everyone bending an approving ear to the hot rhythm of Bill Marsden, new singing guitarist . . . Warbler Carmela Lazari confiding that there's a sentimental significance to her enamel brooch showing a sailor playing on an accordion. She likes it because her husband, Cy Broughton, teaches accordion.

"Okolihau" is the title of a tune being concocted by Cafe Caprice's Don Carper. Okolihau, he tells us, is a native Hawaiian drink brewed from cocoanut milk and papaya juice. It's so high-test you can use it to run an automobile.

NUMBERS YOU'LL approve. "Lili From Chili," new and far from chilly, being introduced in the Metronome Room by Marion Stanfield and Tommy Marvins band . . . "In Chi Chi Castenango," another Pan-American pepper pot special, being done piquantly by Bonnie Boyd in the Mayflower Lounge . . . "Make Love With a Guitar" (still more of that country-sweeping South American rhythm), specialty of Frank Tam, guitarist with Carmen Cavallaro's band in the Cosmos Room . . . Absolutely anything pianoed by dynamic Jerry Brandow at Paul Young's. No matter what the number, it'll turn out to be the ultimate in boogie-woogie. . . . The haunting old "Forgotten" becomes even more haunting as made into a modern torch song by Eileen George of the Anchor Room. . . . The magical "Girl of the Moment," as dexterously rendered by Pete Macias orchestra in the Lounge Riviera. It's from "Lady in the Dark," New York musical recently sold to Hollywood for the biggest price in history.

PAL MAL, PAHL MAHL, PAWL MAWL. Those are some of the varying pronunciations people advance for the Pall Mall Room. Nobody agrees. But our English authority says that the right way to say it is "Pell Mell Room." Sounds pleasant, doesn't it?

FOR FOOD CONNOISSEURS. Many new diplomats and other visitors from overseas receive a perfect introduction to American food at the Parrot, at Connecticut Avenue. The Parrot dinners should make them feel extra friendly toward America. That fried chicken! Those corn sticks! Um-m-m! . . . The shore dinners at Olmstead's offer a fascinating selection of the most toothsome denizens of the sea, all prepared with the greatest skill . . . Chevy Chase residents are completely "sold" on Silver Fox dinners, especially those chubby filet mignons—and the chicken a la king with generous slices of both white and dark meat . . . Madrillon's Pan-American dishes are the last word in savoriness. Telephone your order ahead unless you don't mind a wait of a half hour while they're cooked to order.

MURIEL RUSSELL, now stepping prettily at Casino Royal

No innovation at Restaurant "223" has been so enthusiastically received as the new free parking for customers from 6 p. m. until closing. Patrons vote it the greatest convenience ever.

MARIMBAPHONE MASTER. Al Bottorff, of Milt Herth's Trio in the Neptune Room, plays the biggest marimbaphone made. The same model was on display at the New York World's Fair. Al is now 22, has been on the stage since he was 6, played with Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians when he was 15.

MAIDS MEET AT MAYFAIR. Femme parties by the score foregather at Mayfair every afternoon. They include leddies who've been exhausted by shopping, Government girls who need a spot of relaxation, high school lasses who just must hear Paul Kain's music and Adele Van's songs.

AN E STREET MAGNET is that model of a fighting ship in the window of Dick's Grill. It has all the modern trimmings, such as anti-aircraft guns, and seems to attract all passing males from 6 to 60.

Billy and Idylle Shaw, now at the Lotus, were in Germany when war broke out. But they have no stories to tell. "We just didn't hear anything about it," said Billy. "Nobody in Germany knew from nothing."

PROFESSIONALS AND AMATEURS compete in diversion at Kavakos' Grill. Crack professional floor shows are presented on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. But Kavakos' gifted customers pop up with songs and dances every other night of the week.

Borah Land Offered As Site for Hospital

By the Associated Press

Thirteen acres of land, acquired years ago by the late Senator William E. Borah for the home he never built, were offered by his widow yesterday to the State of Idaho as a site for a tuberculosis hospital at Boise.

"The only condition I attached to this gift was that the hospital, as contemplated in State legislation, should be named the William E. Borah Memorial Hospital," said Mrs. Borah, who telephoned her offer to C. C. Anderson, chain store executive, at Boise, after she had received inquiries as to whether the land could be purchased.

Invitation to Willkie Considered in Australia

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—The acting Prime Minister of Australia, A. W. Fadden, will ask the war cabinet to consider inviting Wendell L. Willkie to visit that commonwealth, the British radio said today in a broadcast recorded by C. B. S.

"Mr. Fadden said nothing but good could come from such a visit," B. B. C. reported.

U. S. Income For 1940 Near 74 Billions

National income of the United States reached a post-1929 record high in 1940 of $73,800,000,000, or about $4,400,000,000 more than in 1939, according to preliminary estimates released yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones.

He said that retail distribution, consumer credit and employment also showed substantial gains over 1939, and that the net income of corporations was 20 to 25 per cent higher in 1940 than in the previous year.

Expansion of Government activities due to the defense program raised military and regular employment during the last quarter of 1940 about 13 per cent above 1939. At the same time, Jones said, there was a large reduction in emergency income disbursements, so that, as regular pay rolls increased by $70,000,000 between March and December, relief and unemployment benefits dropped by $50,000,000.

As distinguished from national income, the measure of net production of commodities and services, income payments during 1940 totaled $74,300,000,000, compared with $70,100,000,000 in 1939. By December last year, the data disclosed, income payments reached the annual rate of $78,000,000,000.

The $73,800,000,000 national income aggregate for 1940 was the highest value for any year since 1929, Jones declared. It was 84 per cent above the depression low of $40,100,000,000 in 1932, and 3.5 per cent above the previous recovery high of $71,200,000,000 in 1937.

Average employment for 1940 was estimated by the department at about 46,000,000 persons, or 4 per cent under the 1929 figure. The 1940 total, however, does not include the addition of 400,000 men to armed service since June and excludes persons on WPA, NYA and CCC rolls.

Senate Approves $375,000,000 For WPA Projects

The Senate yesterday passed an urgent deficiency bill providing the Work Projects Administration with $375,000,000 for its operations from March 1 to July 1.

The bill, passed by voice vote after 15 minutes of debate, now goes back to the House for action on Senate amendments. Besides the WPA funds, the bill provides $20,357,775 for defense housing, customs refunds and other purposes.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee in charge of the measure, explained the measure will require reduction of WPA rolls from 1,950,000 this month to 1,300,000 in June, the lowest figure since establishment of the WPA.

Contract Bridge

Against declarers who display as much ingenuity as did Wingate Bixby on today's slam hand, it is almost impossible to pick any lead to defeat them. Bixby, who since coming to New York from Chicago a few years ago, has become a familiar figure at the Regency and Cavendish Clubs, hadn't expected to lose a trump trick on this hand. But when the unforseen happened, and a sure trump loser developed in addition to a losing heart, he managed to find a solution by stripping the hands and tossing his adversary in the lead at exactly the right moment for an end play.

When dummy was spread six was certain, if the trumps broke one-one. The ace of hearts won the first trick, and when a spade was led from dummy the bad news of a trump loser was revealed. As declarer also had a heart loser, it would appear that the contract must go down one trick. However, there was a remote chance of finding South with a singleton heart.

The ace of spades won the trump lead and a diamond was returned to dummy's ace. A low diamond was ruffed in the closed hand, the ace and king of clubs were cashed and the low club ruffed in dummy. The last diamond was trumped in the closed hand and declarer's last club ruffed in dummy. Now a spade was led and South had to win.

Being now void of trumps, hearts and clubs, he had no choice but to give the declarer his slam-making trick with a diamond return. Dummy's trumps had just lasted through.

U. S. Begins Probe of Drug Industry

A Nation-wide investigation of the drug industry, directed particularly at suspected violations of the antitrust laws in production and distribution of insulin, was begun by a special grand jury here yesterday.

Insulin is a vital necessity to sufferers from diabetes, who are estimated to number 1,500,000 in the United States. In the last few years the drug has been employed in treatment of mental cases.

The Department of Justice opened an investigation last summer, obtaining tons of evidence from manufacturers and distributers, who were ordered to produce their files, contracts, sales practice agreements and other documents.

After months of study, grand jury investigation was believed necessary and a special grand jury was authorized by Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District Court. Conducting the inquiry are Special Assistant Attorneys General Kenneth L. Kimball and George Wise.

The new grand jury was sworn in yesterday, making the fourth grand jury operating at the same time at Judiciary Square, believed to be an all-time record. Besides the regular grand jury, there are panels investigating alien propaganda here and suspected violations of the election laws.

The officers of the new grand jury are: Foreman, Byng Bubbenfield, 44, American Legion field representative, 4306 Yuma Street Northwest; secretary, Mrs. Louise R. Berryman, 33, housewife, 6633 Thirty-second Place Northwest; clerk, Burton Wallace Marsh, 43, American Automobile Association director of safety and traffic engineering, 6221 Western Avenue Northwest.

Grillo, 31, switchman, 6313 Sixteenth Street Northwest; Emil Tyler Amerman, 39, safety supervisor, 2214 Randolph Street Northeast.

Also Philip Amodeo, 36, Government clerk, 334 Thirty-fifth Place Northeast; Carlton Ross Behrens, 35, chief clerk Pennsylvania Railroad, 2606 Thirteenth Street Northwest; Mrs. Helen H. Valdes, 43, housewife, 3620 Kanawha Street Northwest; Burdette S. Bertrand, 36, merchant, 3600 Connecticut Avenue Northwest; Reneer J. Legion Post Expands Aid To Blood Bank

The appealing cause of aiding child sufferers through the blood and serum bank prompted an American Legion post yesterday to expand its already energetic efforts for turning festivity into help.

George Washington Post No. 1, which sponsored a party last night at Holy Comforter Auditorium, will add to its contribution through a newly planned party to be held on the evening of March 14 at the Manor, 2108 Sixteenth Street Northwest, it was announced by Post Commander Charles S. Beilmann.

Mrs. Jefferson A. Long, assisted by Mrs. R. Ashby Harbison and Mrs. Edward Cotter, is organizing the new card party, which will have a duplicate section and table games. Lieut. Comdr. W. A. Corley, U. S. Navy, retired, will direct play.

Another new event was added to the list yesterday with the announcement of a card party for the Department of Commerce Post and Auxiliary Unit No. 44 on March 15 at the home of Mrs. Agnes Thaxton, 1402 Morse Street Northwest. Mrs. Thaxton is child welfare officer of the post. Plans were announced by George F. Wohlgemuth, post commander, and Miss Helen Bintz, unit president.

A party will be given in Falls Church tonight at Madison School for the benefit of the fund.

Upward of 100 Legionnaires, their wives and guests swelled the blood bank fund in a card party at Holy Comforter auditorium, Fifteenth and East Capitol Streets, last night. Refreshments followed the card playing sponsored by George Washington Post No. 1. Hosts at the party were Commander Charles Beilman and Vice Commander Harry W. Brown.

Fort Stevens Squadron, No. 32, Sons of the American Legion, has pledged $5 to the fund, it was announced yesterday by Chairman Charles H. Heller and Squadron Capt. Andrew Ferraro.

Among contributions which came in yesterday was $12 from C. Lester Jones.

There is still time for individuals and organizations to plan and hold parties for the fund, sponsored by The Washington Post, Station WJSV and the American Legion. The schedule of parties will continue throughout this month and into March. Persons planning parties may call at The Post for souvenir tallies.

Names of winners and seconds in the Washington Bridge League's party Wednesday night at the Shoreham Hotel were announced yesterday as follows:

Motor Patrolman Hurt in Fall

Motorcycle Policeman George Woods suffered minor cuts to his face yesterday when he toppled from his motorcycle at Forty-first Street and Alabama Avenue Southeast. He received first aid at Gallinger Hospital.

Woods said he was riding to duty at the Traffic Bureau when a piece of tree limb blew across his path. He swerved his machine, striking the soft shoulder of the street. He threw himself clear of the motorcycle to keep from being pinned underneath and probably saved himself from serious injury.

New Classes Arranged For Hard of Hearing

New classes in voice control and public speaking for the hard of hearing will be started at 8:15 p. m. today at 2431 Fourteenth Street Northwest, by the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing. A $5 fee will be charged for the voice control course, while the public speaking instruction will be free.

U. S. Investigating Reported Deals In Defense Orders

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is looking into activities of "certain individuals" in Washington who claim "they are able to secure defense contracts for their clients," Attorney General Jackson notified Congress yesterday.

Jackson made the statement in a letter to Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who had turned over to the Justice Department the complaint of a Michigan businessman who was told by a Washington firm that they would obtain defense business for him for a $75 a month retainer and 3 per cent commission on sales.

Vandenberg placed before the Senate a letter from William Knudsen, defense production chief, pointing out the War Department requires contractors to swear they have not paid a fee of any sort to any person, excepting the contractors' established sales agency, for soliciting or securing Government business.

Attorney Haycock Weds Ruth Yanovsky in D. C.

Married by Municipal Court Judge Nathan Cayton yesterday were Ruth Yanovsky, 24, 2440 Sixteenth Street Northwest, and former Assistant District Attorney Stephen P. Haycock, 32.

War Cuts Travel Abroad By $100,000,000

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that the war cut American travel expenditure abroad by more than $100,000,000 last year.

The expenditures in other countries in 1940 were estimated by Secretary Jones at $59,000,000, compared with $160,000,000 in 1939—also a poor year because of the war. Foreign travel in the United States declined from $63,000,000 in 1939 to $32,000,000 in 1940.

'Tall, Dark and Handsome', Capitol, Is Unique Item

Cesar Romero Reveals New Type of Gangster In Twentieth Century-Fox Comedy-Melodrama; Henry Busse Unwinds Speedy Stage Revue

"TALL, DARK AND HANDSOME" may not be quite so spaciously high, wide and handsome as it might have been, but, at least, it gives a new twist to the familiar contours of gangster melodrama.

BELL

The new Twentieth Century-Fox release, unraveled yesterday for the first time on a local screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, suggests procedures that would have been valuable to Al Capone, for instance, back in the bullet-ridden, hey-hey period of one of Chicago's wilder eras. The scene of the adroit film play, fashioned by Karl Tunberg and Darrell Ware, is Chicago. Its two principal characters are the rival gang leaders of the North and South sides, whose economic and romantic interests clash somewhere along the dividing banks of that limpid repository of grain elevator screenings, lumber yard whittlings and coal dock refuse known as the Chicago River. You never see the river—one of the cinema's more gracious concessions to the esthetic—but you do see an exhilarating amount of the private lives of Shep Morrison and Pretty Willie—the one a tender-hearted thug; the other, a bright saffron gorilla, with murder in his heart and a yellow streak up his back. There is a girl in the case, of course, and likewise a youthful hoodlum she is employed by the gentleman of the title to "mother" with a gentle solicitude that falls on barren ground in the heart of a kid with ambitions to be a killer, like his expunged dad. There are also the customary trimmings of swank night spots, cabaret entertainers, "murder" in the dark at the end of one of those notorious Chicago "rides," Christmas trees and some ne plus ultra double-crossings in which the District Attorney's office plays right up Mr. Morrison's alley.

The piece plays itself practically all of the way with its tongue in its cheek. The aim and achievement of the cast is preponderantly on the side of comedy and they bring it off with high success most of the time. Cesar Romero, in the title role, pretends suavely, humorously and at times menacingly, as the tough guy who doesn't kill his victims, as the newspapers and police records report, but fattens them with a life of luxury in his opulent basement jail. When his "death list" makes its appearance at one of his high-proof parties, the effect upon his brilliantly illuminated guests is something for the psychiatrists. Sheldon Leonard adds a sinister balancing touch to all this humor by making Pretty Willie a pretty craven fellow. Milton Berle, as Frosty, Morrison's chief lieutenant, slaps his comedy around with abundant profligacy. The gal is Virginia Gilmore, and her mentor in the Morrison menage, Charlotte Greenwood. Between the two of them, they peddle some teasing tunes whipped up for the opus by Leo Rubin and Ralph Ranger. Stanley Clements is a later generation of the "Dead End" kids in the role of the bloodthirsty incorrigible. Paul Hurst, Barnett Parker and the rest of the cast are always on their toes—or somebody's.

On the stage at the Capitol this week, Henry Busse and His Orchestra and specialty artists unfurl a revue that ranges all the way from Mr. Busse's eminent musicianship as one of the foremost of the contemporary trumpeters to the disintegrating dissonances of "boogie-woogie." In addition to the wide diversity of his band's contributions to a generous program, the maestro presents Eunice Healy, one of Washington's favorite dancers, fresh out of Al Jolson's "Hold Onto Your Hats"; Ginger Harmon, among the jitteriest of the singing jitterbugs, and Ross Wyse, that amazing acrobatic comedian so ably and strenuously assisted by June Mann, a dancer of no mean dimensions on her own account. Over and above these are Billy Sherman, Mr. Busse's ace vocalist, his male quartet and glee and Otto Glazer, whose single comic bit is a gem.

Sam Jack Kaufman's "Slavic Rhapsody" overture, the Fox Movietone News and a Terrytoon comedy, in color, "The Temperamental Lion," with overtones of Bert Lahr, complete a bill that went over in the grand manner with the customers at yesterday's first performance.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Feb. 20.

Well, it's all over but the shouting. Our local fashion group put on a show that will be remembered for many a long day. Stylists and experts flew from all parts of the country, and at last America knows that we really can make clothes.

HOPPER

Of course, the studio dresses topped them all—they always do. Those designers have been making fashion history for years—making over awkward peasant girls like Greta Garbo into glamour girls, talked about the world over.

In this show Adrian showed two gowns worn by Hedy Lamarr. One called "Clean Cut" was of black, white and henna wool, an unusual stripe treatment, and the other was "Summer Moment," which looked simple as a summer breeze—of mousseline de soie, with hundreds of hand-made loops.

Orry-Kelly, who has done up Bette Davis for years, did a little thing called "Gaby Deslys" which looks like her. There was a girl who knew her glad rags! Travis Banton showed a Carmen Miranda gown, as colorful as her personality. Edith Head, a printed dinner dress with little tie-front jacket you'd give anything to own.

Irene's "P. M." of white with nude chiffon upper, and jeweled flowers where they'd do the most good, cried out for Marlene Dietrich's chassis. The Brewster Twins untied more knots than a sailor, getting out of their bathing suits, shorts and pajama ensembles.

Milo Anderson's "Can-Can," featuring a diamond garter which should be fun, covered Mary Taylor's body. (Mary can—but didn't—bark like a Pekinese.) And "Missionary's Downfall" (which I thought was a drink) was a pajama suit guaranteed to cause anyone to go boom.

Howard Greer had a brown and beige "Venetian Blind" dress with pleated skirt made so you could have pleats of either shade—by a mere flip of the finger. Mme. Jeanne's silk and wool ensemble is the kind of dress you must wear when you're tired. It rests and flatters at the same time.

Visiting firemen chose Roz Russell, Constance Bennett, Dolores del Rio, Ina Claire and the Duchess of Windsor among the best dressed. And, speaking of the Duchess, you may get a giggle at the pictures of redecorated government in Town and Country. Because on every table or desk there are double pictures of the Duchess, with the drawing room decorated around her portrait, not his. Gosh! hasn't royalty any rights these days?

Coming Next to Earle Screen

IDA LUPINO AND HUMPHREY BOGART
in the costellar roles of the Warner Brothers' production of "High Sierra," which, by one of those eleventh-hour revisions of bookings, becomes the next attraction at the Earle Theater, opening a week from today. "Flight from Destiny," alias "Invitation to Murder," will be coming along later to some Warner screen or other in the midtown area

Metropolitan

Honoring an adjoining State, "Virginia" remains at the Metropolitan instead of making way for a film of less potent local appeal. With a week at the Earle already to its credit, "Virginia" thus makes a three-week stay on the Capital mainstem.

Filmed in Technicolor and boasting a cast of the first order, "Virginia's" true heroine is an old home, its hero the spirit of the past. A young actress arrives in the county of her birth, but knows not its customs. She aims to sell her ancestral home, is bothered to find family servants still looking after the mansion and is irked to discover that not only has the boy on the neighboring estate remained true to the past but has that certain thing which makes her heart leap.

Madeleine Carroll, always an extra treat in Technicolor, is the girl who almost forgets she's a Virginian before she's a woman, and very pleasing she is, too. Fred MacMurray is the stalwart chap who married the wrong girl years ago, but hasn't let it drive him off his land or to old man rum. Newcomer Stirling Hayden makes a pleasing appearance as the rich chap from New York, who offers Miss Carroll himself as well as his fortune. And minute Carolyn Lee, who appeared with MacMurray and Miss Carroll in "Honeymoon in Bali," plays about amusingly with a Southern accent which she apparently can turn off and on at will.

While not a particularly convincing story, "Virginia's" Technicolored authenticity—much of it was filmed in Charlottesville—gives it unusual appeal—especially so along the Potomac.

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 20 (INS).—The happy-go-lucky John Carroll, who always has a smile on his lips and a story to tell, takes Tony Martin's place in "Lady Be Good." Not because there was anything wrong with Tony, but the role seems to fit Julian La Faye (John's real moniker). Louis B. Mayer, who has an uncanny way of knowing talent when he sees it, told me nearly a year ago that John Carroll, in his estimation, was the best find M-G-M had had in a long time. At that time John had only played in Monogram Pictures, and I was a bit surprised at the statement. Later, when I saw John in M-G-M pictures, I knew what L. B. meant.

PARSONS

I hear from an authentic source that George Bernard Shaw, the 81-year-old pink-cheeked cherub, has written an original screen play with a Panama-South American background for Gabriel Pascal. This may sound fantastic to the Shaw fans who know of George Bernard's grand contempt for anything to do with Hollywood (and this picture, I understand, is to be produced in Hollywood). But when you remember that Shaw permitted Pascal to produce "Pygmalion" (Academy Prize winner) and "Major Barbara" (yet to be released) you know that Pascal would be more likely to get Shaw to write an original than anyone else.

I had the same feeling hearing Kathryn Grayson sing in "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary"—and seeing her fresh, young performance—that came to me the first time I saw and heard Deanna Durbin in "Three Smart Girls." She's sweet and young—just as Deanna was, and is—and hers is also a God-given voice. So wise of MGM to start her out, too, in this particular Andy Hardy movie, for her songs come so naturally and easily.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Dorothy Lamour is wearing Greg Bautzer's mother's old-fashioned diamond ring, but both deny it means an engagement; Wayne Morris has sent in his questionnaire to the draft board and is hoping he will be called soon; those who have met Edgar Bergen's mother at his home—and everybody who has been there has—will be sorry to hear of her illness; Lorena and Danny Danker, soap magnate, train to New York for a holiday and business trip.

Olympe Bradna has set May 7 for her marriage to Douglas Wilhoit; Perc Westmore has written an article on glamorizing men for a national magazine and it is said it will stir quite a commotion when it is published; the Mocambo has a diamond horseshoe ball on the calendar for March 9; Liz Whitney drifted first into the Brown Derby with a Great Dane and Walter Brooks 3d and later into Ciro's, causing quite a commotion.

Virginia and Darryl Zanuck are back after a wonderful vacation at Sun Valley.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Feb. 20.

HONOR: Next week Rollins College in Florida will bestow an honorary degree upon Maurice Maeterlinck, the Belgian playwright. He received the news a few days ago at the small hotel where he now lives after having arrived in this country without any funds . . . "We wish to honor Maeterlinck for his great contribution to letters," the college officials informed his representative, who confided, "He has no means of getting to Florida to receive that honor" . . . And so, for the first time in many years, an American college not only will confer an honorary degree upon a renowned writer but will also pay his expenses for the long trip.

ooo

RELIEF: Vivien Leigh, now in London, sent a letter to the David Selznick office in which she reported what Winston Churchill said after he had seen "Gone With the Wind" . . . "Mr. Churchill saw the picture," wrote Miss Leigh, "and then remarked: 'I have been reduced to a pulp. There isn't a bone left in my body. Thank God, I can now get back to my own war.'"

ooo

ESCAPE: The newspapers reported the disappearance of Georgette Cusson, the yachting companion of Wallace Groves—the investment trust financier now being tried by the Federal Government in a fraud case involving $750,000. Miss Cusson was wanted as a witness in this case . . . As a matter of fact, Georgette Cusson recently was a student at N. Y. U.'s class in meteorology—a course in which she received a passing mark last month. She also completed enough solo flying hours at Roosevelt Field to secure a private flying license.

ENTERPRISE: Chico Marx was part of a golf foursome. For nine holes one of the players, a stranger to Chico, kept assuring him that the wall paper routine in "A Day at the Races" was the best sequence of any Marx Brothers picture . . . Chico finally tired of his enthusiasm and began to enumerate a long series of scenes which were funnier than the wall paper one . . . "Not to me," the stranger explained. "I'm in the wall paper business here. I had a lot of bum stock on hand, which I was about to throw out, until M-G-M came along and bought it for $800."

ooo

CHEER: William Saroyan sent the manuscript of his play, "Hero of the World," to David Lowe, producing director of the Millpond Playhouse. The production involves more than 30 actors and almost as many scenes . . . Saroyan, who permits no one to alter his script, reminded the producer about this condition. But Lowe, who portrayed the role of the narrator, pleaded that one word be eliminated from the speech which closed the first act. It read: "Ladies and gentlemen, please understand that we are sincere when we say that if any of you are bored and do not wish to see the rest of this play, please go to the ticket office and your money will be cheerfully refunded" . . . Saroyan agreed to permit Lowe to omit the word "cheerfully."

ooo

CHATTER: The recent attacks against the $1-a-year defense officials whose companies receive large contracts did not come as a surprise. The President had sent a confidential memo warning against the possibilities of such conditions arising . . . "John Doe," the new movie, will open simultaneously at the Rivoli and Fifty-first Street Theater for continued performances—the first time in New York's history . . . Paula LeCler, who was on the air for "We the People," has been bombarded on three continents in four wars. She's just back from the Balkans . . . Elizabeth Hawes is designing the uniforms for volunteer Red Cross workers . . . When Gertrude Lawrence was asked to pose for a photo at the Casino Russe she said: "No. Thi season I'm really Lady in the Dark."

ooo

DRAMA: Clifford Odets, who started with the Group Theater as an actor, recited from memory the encouraging review by Percy Hammond for his performance in "Men in White" . . . "When did you decide to stop being an actor and concentrate on play writing?" Odets was asked. He drew from his wallet a long card, with some holes punched in it, and replied: "I have the exact date here—August 12, 1935" . . . "How do you remember that date?" Odets was asked . . . "Because on that day," he confessed, "I stopped the series of treatments I was getting for preserving my hair."

ooo

PRIDE: Flora Robson, who now is deciding between a film appearance in "The Yearling" and a Broadway role in Laurette Taylor's "Queen Anne," is telling of her visit to a New York home where four British refugee children are being housed . . . One of the youngsters stated: "Laurence Olivier is providing for my care here" . . . "Maurice Evans is my sponsor," the second one boasted . . . "Philip Merrivale is taking care of my stay," said the third . . . "Actors. Hmph!" scoffed the fourth. "Gilbert Miller is my sponsor—and he always gets top billing."

ooo

DEFENSE: Irving Stone, who wrote "Lust for Life" and "Sailor on Horseback," lives near Hollywood. He and his wife were troubled by the constant reports in the West Coast papers that our defense program was lagging, that neither planes nor tanks were being produced . . . A few days ago, while driving up Ventura Boulevard, they noticed a truck in front of them, carrying three tanks. They drove closer to the truck, elated at this realistic disproval of the reports that the country is unarmed. For 8 miles they followed that truck, while their confidence rose, and swelled into national pride of might. When they had had their fill they drove ahead, past the truck—on whose gleaming side they saw the disappointing words painted: "MGM Prop Dept."

after a cold then what

DOCTORS stress remaining in bed until the body temperature is normal. Sound advice.

You know how weak you feel after a cold. Colds play havoc in weakening the body. The story is well told in the blood picture. It is important to build back body strength right away to carry the load of work, worries, and loss of sleep. A weakened body may be more susceptible to relapse or long drawn out recovery.

So reason sensibly and take the choice of millions by immediately starting on a course of S.S.S. Tonic—taken three times a day immediately before meals. In the absence of a focal infection or organic disease, you should note improvement in the way you feel and look within the first 10 days. The confidence of millions over many years is the best testimonial of this product.

An experience with S.S.S Tonic will cause you to say to your friends, S.S.S. made me "feel and look like myself again."

Jews to Stress Brotherhood Theme Here

National Brotherhood Week, which begins tomorrow throughout the United States, will be the keynote of many services tonight and tomorrow morning in local orthodox synagogues and reformed temples.

The Washington Hebrew Congregation has invited members of the Civitan, Cosmopolitan, Lions, Optimist, Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs to attend services there tonight at 8:15, when Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld will speak, stressing the brotherhood theme. Both Sides Get Solace in Words Of Washington

The House interrupted its meditations on national defense and aid-to-Britain yesterday to listen to George Washington's famous farewell admonitions about the iniquities of permanent foreign alliances. Then it adjourned over his birthday tomorrow.

Representative Magnuson, of Washington, read the address.

Republicans took from the address those passages which seemed to support their point of view. There was a solemn nodding of approval on this side of the House when Magnuson read:

"Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice?"

But the Democrats did not hide their pleasure when Magnuson read:

"Taking care always to keep ourselves by suitable establishments on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary purposes."

AmericanMediator Seen in Anglo-Irish Dispute on Bases

London (Friday), Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Political quarters reported last night that some important United States or Canadian figure may be asked to mediate the Anglo-Irish dispute, particularly in regard to Britain's desire for Irish naval and air bases.

The possibility of such a mediation attempt was foreseen after a memorandum stressing the "urgent need" of an immediate accord was submitted to Prime Minister De Valera and Prime Minister Churchill by a group headed by Gen. Sir Hubert Gough, veteran British military leader, who now is leader of local defense volunteers for the London zone.

The memorandum is understood to make specific recommendations regarding bases for Britain as well as the question of Irish unity, involving De Valera's struggle to end the partition between the 26 counties of Eire and the 6 northern counties of Ulster to bring about a "united Free Ireland."

Actress' Divorce Revealed in Paris

McGehee Urges Suspension Of Payroll Tax

Elimination of the 2.7 per cent District pay roll tax until the reserve fund is reduced from nearly $20,000,000 to $10,000,000 was proposed yesterday by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, who is chairman of the judiciary subcommittee of the House District Committee.

McGehee, who sponsored the legislation for reducing the unemployment tax last year, said he will introduce a bill shortly to bring his plan before the District Committee.

His suggested relief for employers would not be accompanied by any further benefits for the unemployed.

"We gave the employes enough concessions last year," McGehee said, recalling the compromise bill passed by the Seventy-sixth Congress.

John A. Marshall, executive officer of the District Unemployment Compensation Board, estimated that it would require about four years to bring the reserve fund down to $10,000,000. He said that benefit payments in 1940 aggregated more than $2,000,000 and tax collections $5,000,000.

The Unemployment Compensation Board this week decided to recommend legislation calling for a sliding scale reduction in the pay roll tax and slightly large employe benefits.

Under this formula the tax would fall to one-half of 1 per cent so long as the reserve fund is four times the largest year's benefit payments. It would work up by stages to 2.7 per cent as the reserve fund decreased.

McGehee, who is a member of the fiscal affairs subcommittee, reiterated his indorsement of a sales tax for the District in lieu of the income tax.

The fiscal affairs subcommittee will meet in executive session on the District tax problem next Tuesday.

Campaign Report Expected Tuesday

The special grand jury which has been investigating the 1940 Presidential campaign here since last December will conclude its work and report to the District Court next Tuesday.

The jurors have heard more than 100 witnesses, including the most prominent leaders of the Democratic, Republican and all minor parties.

ASCAP Ratifies Consent Decree; Sees Peace Soon

New York, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Approximately 700 members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers tonight unanimously ratified a consent decree formulated yesterday by the society's board of directors and the Department of Justice which settles an antitrust suit against ASCAP.

It is believed that the consent decree established a basis whereby ASCAP, which controls most of the popular music written in the last 50 years, can reach an agreement with the major radio networks on their dispute over fees. ASCAP tunes have not been broadcast by the major radio outlets since January 1 because this dispute prevented the drawing up of a new contract.

Gene Buck, president of ASCAP, said after the meeting that "I honestly believe that there will be a settlement with the broadcasters in a very short time."

Over-the-Counter Auto Tag Sales To Begin Monday

Over-the-counter sales of 1941 automobile tags will begin Monday at 8:30 a. m., Traffic Director William A. VanDuzer said yesterday.

At the same time he warned car owners that close to 6,000 applications are being held up either because of unsatisfied traffic violation warrants or failure to indicate a change of address.

All applications will be in the mail by next Wednesday and should reach the owner by next Friday, the director stated, unless the application is being held up.

Motorists may begin using the new plates March 1 and must have them on their cars by midnight March 31. No extension of time will be granted, Van Duzer declared.

D. C. "Country Store"

The apparent loss of three years' records of dog-tax collections bears out Commissioner Young's statement that the District has been checking its receipts as if it were "running a general country store." The Commissioners did authorize in 1938 the disposition of dog-tax records from 1920 to 1933, but the auditor's office has not been able to find any authority for destruction of those for 1934, 1935 and 1936. If there was any shortage in these years in addition to the $9,800 discrepancy discovered for the subsequent period, the chances are the District will never be able to recover the money.

This example of careless administration emphasizes the importance of the periodic audit ordered by the Commissioners. If quarterly or even yearly audits had been possible, it would have been learned long ago that the daily check-up on dog licenses was not working as it should. The shortage in this instance is not large in comparison with the District's total expenditures, but it must be remembered that there are some 50 agencies collecting taxes for the city and without a strict accounting the same thing could happen in any of them. A desirable supplement to the reforms instituted by the able new tax collector would be the addition of enough permanent employes to the auditor's office staff to permit the carrying out of the Commissioners' order.

Throwing Money Away

We're preparing for war, Secretary of Commerce Jones told the House Banking and Currency Committee the other day, and "when you do that, you've got to throw money away." As a matter of fact, the high cost of the defense program makes it the more imperative to see that not a single dollar is spent needlessly. There are, to be sure, some extreme advocates of pump-priming who regard the present emergency as a heaven-sent opportunity for testing the efficacy of what Dr. H. G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, calls "a full-powered spending program." These "all-out" pump-primers are not worried about the mounting Government debt; and they regard an unbalanced budget as an undisguised blessing, at least for the indefinite future.

Reason, however, as well as the teachings of history, confirms the belief that bankruptcy will sooner or later overtake any government that habitually spends more than it takes in. The comparative wealth of the United States will not save us from a fate similar to that of poorer spendthrift nations if we fail to take advantage of our favored situation. Progress toward a balanced budget will undoubtedly be retarded by the extraordinary costs of the defense program, but we can make headway if we are willing to effect rigid economies in nonmilitary outlays and submit to heavier taxes.

Dr. Moulton concludes on the basis of reasonable assumptions and estimates that the defense program could be financed without a great increase in the national debt, and without unbearably heavy additions to taxes, allowing for the higher national income to be expected during a period of fuller employment. "Whether the goal of a balanced budget is actually realized," he says, "will depend chiefly upon whether the views of those who believe in prudent financial management prevail in Government councils as against those who favor a perpetual expansion of the Government debt as the road to economic salvation." One thing is certain: if Government officials become imbued with the idea that money has to be thrown away, we shall be heading for disastrously inflationary kinds of deficit financing that will push up prices, add to the cost of the defense program and saddle the people with a needlessly heavy indebtedness.

Mr. Harriman's Task

President Roosevelt's appointment of W. Averell Harriman as "expediter" of the program for leasing and lending war materiel to Great Britain should meet with general commendation. Once the lease-lend bill is passed, and its passage is now beyond doubt, the United States will become more than it has been hitherto the great arsenal of the countries fighting Hitlerism. That will require not merely a heightening of our own production of war supplies but also an increasing measure of coordination between our defense industries and those of Great Britain. In other words, the task of rendering the greatest possible aid to that country will perforce require an intimate understanding by our authorities of what the British are themselves capable of doing in the field of war production. For only through such an understanding will we be able to supplement that production in a manner likely to produce the most constructive results. As a financier and businessman, Mr. Harriman is especially equipped for his fact-finding assignment. Operating outside the diplomatic sphere, he will, in effect, be the liaison officer between the Office of Production Management, of which he is at present chief of the Materials Division, and British industry.

Guam At Last

The House vote to fortify Guam may be regarded as a complementary step to the British move to reinforce Singapore. Both are defensive, though the vote on Guam, like the lend-lease bill, probably comes too late to contribute physically to the warding off of any global offensive that may be imminent. Yet nothing is more likely to arrest Japanese attention than this tangible evidence that we are now fully alive to the stakes at issue.

Japanese expansionists have hitherto imagined that our innate pacifism would keep our nation locked behind the outermost limits of our Pacific defense scheme. This ends at Wake Island, 1,500 miles east of Guam. Such a feeling of immunity has egged on the Japanese to make one move after another in a scheme of hemispherical conquest which would parallel Hitler's in Europe. Japan's is even more fantastic than the Fuehrer's. The map of Asia from the Mongolian steppes to equatorial Borneo would be rolled up, and Oceania would be taken in as well. To every move in this design our country has opposed only words of protest based upon the law of nations. They have been eloquent enough, but worse than useless. For Japanese expansionists have treated them as confirmations of American impotence, and have left to their political puppets the job of turning on a fountain of hypocrisy which is oceanic in its resources.

But hypocrisy has a habit of catching up upon the practitioner. Words in time are ignored when deeds pile up in variance with them. Shining through the soothing sentences out of Tokyo is a blueprint of a Japanized Pacific which has become plain to the American man in the street no less than to our navalists and Far Eastern experts. The prospect is at last apparent that the Axis powers aim at sandwiching our country between one ocean dominated by the Rising Sun and another flying the Swastika. No American worthy of his past could regard such a prospect with anything but an instinctive urge to go out and prevent it. Accordingly the House has voted its approval to fortify this long string of coral beads in the Far Pacific called Guam. Under this plan our defense, in other words, would be taken into the Far Pacific, though that would not bring our positions any nearer to Japan than 1,500 miles.

The vote has been a long time in coming. Twenty years ago we agreed with the Japanese in one of the pacts concluded at the Washington Conference not to fortify any of these Pacific atolls. When the Japanese in 1937 repudiated the naval agreement, however, the whole situation as to the islands returned to what the treaty makers call the status quo ante. Yet we took no step to fortify Guam, even though the retention of the Philippines is possible only by the establishment of a naval base at Guam. The Japanese were not so punctilious. They began to fortify their own Pacific islands thereabout, including the mandated territories, and the activity has been going on side by side with the continental warfare in Asia which is now echoing on the doorsteps of Malaya. Our legislators could no longer ignore the awakening of our people to the implications for the United States contained in a Japanized Asia.

Underseas Menace

Whatever form the anticipated all-out assault on Great Britain may take, it is certain that one aspect of it will be a continuation and probably an intensification of German U-boat and bombing plane attacks on British shipping. During recent weeks the average of British shipping losses has been substantially lower than it was last fall. It is suspected, however, that this is less the result of improved anti-submarine defenses than of weather conditions unfavorable to the operation of undersea craft and bombing planes. As the hours of daylight lengthen and the storms of winter give way to balmy spring days the U-boats are likely to become more active again, with ominous possibilities for the sea-girt islands that have so bravely stood up against the Nazi attack.

It is particularly disturbing at this juncture to learn from neutral quarters in London that Germany may be able to let loose against Great Britain a fleet of no less than 600 submarines. Such a fleet would give her several times the destructive force she was able to employ against British shipping during 1939 and 1940. And with Great Britain's tonnage losses already greater than the tonnage she can replace through domestic construction, the British position could in the long run easily become critical. For that reason the British shipping situation is of major concern to the United States, whose determination to pursue a policy of "all-out aid" is soon to be reinforced by the passage of the lease-lend bill. It is not too soon to begin considering in what ways this Nation can be most effective not merely as a supply base for raw materials and weapons needed by the British but also in helping Britain keep her supply lines open.

The Conference Table

It is reassuring to know that William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, and Sidney J. Hillman, associate director, are confident that strikes will not become a serious menace to the defense program. Mr. Knudsen told the House Judiciary Committee that 14 strikes are now in progress in defense industries. He regards those stoppages of work as "annoying" but "not important." Yesterday Mr. Hillman further outlined the labor record in defense plants and pronounced it "almost perfect."

A similarly complacent attitude has been taken by the OPM toward the strike in the Allis-Chalmers plant at Milwaukee, where important defense work has been held up for a month. Settlement of that dispute was prematurely announced a few days ago by officials of the OPM. Mr. Knudsen made a further hopeful prediction on Wednesday, but the C. I. O. negotiators have quit the conferences and there are threats that the walkout will extend to four other plants. About the time this testimony was being given before the Judiciary Committee, moreover, work in a defense plant at Donora, Pa., was halted in defiance of union officials. And 14,000 employes of a Lackawanna steel plant are threatening to walk out.

Of course, Messrs. Knudsen and Hillman are entirely right in placing their emphasis on the conference table as the chief means of settling labor disputes. Legislation attempting to deny the right to strike would be most unwise. The chief difficulty is that voluntary negotiations, arbitration and other peaceful means of preventing or settling disputes are so frequently ignored. A few years ago the conference table was not available to many labor groups. Today collective bargaining is required of all employers by the Wagner Act. In these circumstances there is much to be said for requiring unions to take full advantage of their opportunities to bring about peaceful adjustments before holding up defense work to enforce their demands.

The current threat of a steel strike is a case in point. Charges against the Bethlehem Steel Co. are said to have been filed with the NLRB at Buffalo. Yet the union is threatening to strike to bring about enforcement of the Labor Relations Act before the case has been heard. That threat implies an unwillingness to rely upon the machinery provided by Congress to guarantee the right of collective bargaining. It also definitely suggests that employe groups as well as employers should be required to postpone any resort to force until peaceful methods of settling their grievances have been invoked. It is just because the conference table is so vital to the adjustment of labor controversies in this critical period that neither of the disputants should be left free to jeopardize the defense program by substituting violence for orderly negotiations and law enforcement.

Checking Up

Our Congressmen must now face the prospect of being checked up on the degree with which they represent their districts. James H. Causey has set the fashion at the expense of his Representative, Mr. Hamilton Fish. Mr. Fish, one of the leaders of the opposition to the lend-lease bill, will find that his ideas are in the minority even in his own New York district. The poll was actually taken by a reputable expert, Elmo Roper, and Mr. Roper reports that only 18.2 per cent of the people who had heard of the lend-lease bill were against it. Slightly less than half, or 49.4 per cent, favored the passage of the measure without any change at all. The figures furnish a microcosm of the swift manner in which the tide of public opinion has moved. Mr. Fish just hasn't kept up with it, though his Republican colleagues one by one are showing more resiliency.

TRAIL IN TIME

I saw him on the river bank
With silver dripping from his flank,

With silver in the wary eye
That watched a tall moon turn the sky.

His feet were marble, and the dew
Patterned each small shining shoe;

Slant moon and tumbling stars and white
Tall deer with eyes like frozen light.

He did not stir and the trees were still
As a cameo scene on a carven hill.

So it remains in the mind's long hall
Clear as a frozen waterfall,

And if some winter I should find
The same track backward through my mind

The only change would be that sound

Degeneracy Of Art

Mr. H. B. Bradford in his letter to The Post of February 14, regarding the apparent degeneracy of artistic thought as evidenced in certain art exhibits, gives plenty of material for reflection. He also mentions the trend of jazz and swing music. As a student of music, a lover of art in all its manifestations, it appears to me that perhaps he is right. When I view some of this new type of art, which sometimes actually receives public acclaim, I wonder whether it is I who am crazy, the hypnotized admirers, or the artist. In such exhibits I see nothing which my eyes have told me is beautiful, but only that which is horribly grotesque, unnatural, unbeautiful.

And music! What hideous cacophonies issue from many of the bands or orchestras. A music student will appreciate it when I say that the natural chord produced in the overtones when a note, particularly a bass note, is sounded is fundamentally a beautiful triad (that is, three notes, for instance C, E, G), which is very satisfying to the normal ear. For centuries this chord has been accepted by the masters as the natural closing chord of a composition. A few years ago, however, someone introduced into this chord another tone (that is, C, E, G, A), the sixth of the scale. More recently some wild-eyed moderns have introduced into this closing chord still another note foreign to the triad, namely D, making the closing chord C, D, E, G and A. This is nearly equivalent to slapping the hand down on the piano keyboard at the end of the composition. Why some composers resort to such cacophony is indeed a mystery to me, for I cannot see how this could fail to be equally hideous to anyone with normally acute ears possessed with normal tonal perceptions.

"Oliver Wiswell"

While anyone today almost hesitates to advocate any peace suggestions for fear of being judged an appeaser, I cannot but urge all the readers of "Oliver Wiswell" to read twice these excerpts:

"I'll never use force to try to make my enemies think the way I think." "You can't destroy ideas by force and you can't hide 'em by silence."

And again: "He wants to tell the truth about what's happening and as I see it such an occupation will be of more benefit to humanity than a red-faced general who sends 1,000 men up the wrong side of a hill with no results except to rob a few hundred women of husbands."

That Kenneth Robert's book has been received with enthusiasm is obvious. Let us all hope our leaders of the Nation in Congress have the leisure and inclination to read it before the lend-lease bill gets by without plenty of reservations and amendments

Starvation in Europe

Our chief concern in the European conflict to date has been "How to supply England with planes, bombs and other instruments of war." The time has now come when it is equally imperative that we act to save the lives of millions of starving people. No words of mine can add to those of Herbert Hoover, who so eloquently set forth the need of sending food and medicine to the occupied democracies of Europe. It only remains for each of us to realize that for the cause of democracy every dollar's worth of food sent will be worth many times the dollars sent in the form of bombs. And realizing this, we must make our wishes known so that definite action can be taken before millions die through no fault of their own.

So far the English government has opposed every effort to send food into the countries occupied by Germany, claiming this would give Germany some military advantage. No doubt the English have good reason to believe Germany would not keep her promises regarding food sent into these countries, but does this justify refusing a brief trial under neutral supervision? Only those numbed by the horrors of war could maintain that the possible slight temporary advantage resulting from a miscarriage of a trial outweighs the tremendous good which might result.

There is only one man who can make this effort materialize, and he is our President. By using the power of his high office and especially his influence with Churchill, there is little doubt that some working agreement could be reached. We have seen how the President was able to get shipments of food to Spain and unoccupied France. That same means could be used to aid the occupied democracies of Europe. Whether millions shall die of starvation and disease in Europe will most certainly depend on whether our President acts in the manner he has taught us to expect.

Turkey

About four months prior to World War I the Ottoman Empire of the Sultans procured a large loan from the French on very easy terms. At that time, in spite of large infiltrations of Germans and the construction of the Berlin-Baghdad Railway by the Germans, Turks were considered strongly pro-British and pro-Ally. They entered on the side of the Central Powers in 1915.

About a year before the present war, the Turkish Republic received huge loans from Great Britain and also from France in the form of actual cash and armaments. So far, she claims to be Great Britian's non-belligerent ally. With the signing of the nonaggression pact with Bulgaria, her alliance with Great Britain has already gone overboard.

It is needless to say that as soon as Turkey has sufficient reason to think that Britain will be defeated, she will be an active partner of the Axis in the hope of recovering Syria and Mesopotamia. It is surprising that Britain had faith at all in the Turkish alliance.

Reader Reactions To Auto Inspection

As another new citizen of Washington that has gone through the car inspection and operator permit routine that California Resident didn't like, I would like to testify for the defense.

I came from a State where your driver license is just handed to you and from a city where driving is a slap-happy-go-lucky affair. I was impressed by what was, for me, an unusual amount of red tape, but was also impressed by the thoroughness and efficiency of the tests and examinations. I'm all for it.

As for the courtesy of the officials during the procedure, my experience in the same places was exactly the opposite of that of California Resident. No one took time out to tell me funny stories, it is true. They were all pretty busy when I went through. But no one was ever discourteous. In fact I have been reveling in the uniform friendly and courteous treatment I have received in Washington. Inasmuch as I have traveled thoroughly in all of our 48 States and in Canada and Mexico, I think I can qualify as a judge of courtesy to strangers.

I think the difference in treatment I received was due, perhaps, to the fact that I made inquiries in advance so that I arrived at the inspection station before my foreign State license was illegal. I knew enough to do that even though I was never on any traffic and safety commissions. Also, I did not expect the inspection station to serve as a repair shop or service station to remedy defects on my car. Also, I tried to find out where the ropes were and follow them instead of plunging haphazardly into them, as California Resident seems to have done. JOHN FISHBACK.
Washington, Feb. 19.

Since reading of the tribulations of California Resident after his contact with local traffic bureaucracy, I've experienced a leaking of sympathy from the tear ducts which gives the vicinity a damp appearance. Especially I was moved by the account of official discourtesy and abuse. Having served in the Army long enough to rise to sergeant first class, I'm more pretzel than ladyfinger and impervious to blistering oratory.

Dropping my murmurs of sympathy, I'll tell how I solved it all, after 14 years of driving. I made a survey of my situation and discovered I walked a lot anyhow. I usually transported nobody but myself. I had long thought the country was dead on its feet and that any normal animal needs the minimum of exercise a five-mile daily walk provides; that physical deterioration was gripping American "manhood," which venerated its potbellies, ills, medicines and operations, and wouldn't get out of its cars unless inducted into the military at bayonet point.

Those who, with a car to support, can barely get by should listen to my story. I know they won't, though they include about 60 per cent who are throwing cars around Washington streets. First I told the junk dealer he could have it, and walked away $70 richer, but with a wealth of privileges I didn't realize then. No more permits, no more inspections, no more waiting in line while employes held social hour, no more car taxes, gas and oil, dumb blather with those who act as if free education had been abolished and intelligence abrogated by some all-knowing body.

I'm a qualified driver of trained skill and not a horn-blowing killing menace, but my voluntary return to a pedestrian status is my best job in two decades. About 50,000 other Washington drivers should have this experience imposed upon them forcibly for the benefit of themselves and the public.

REFORMED.
Washington, Feb. 19.

You are to be congratulated for giving space to the letter in which a former resident of California—like myself—underwent the OGPU kind of treatment handed out by the crew examining his automobile. They are little people but they do big harm to the District.

The Post Impressionist

In All Their Glory

Let me introduce you to an executive of my acquaintance, a blue-blood of easy carriage and gracious demeanor. Her sons are in the White House as aides or something or other. Her broad culture, extensive knowledge, so all-embracing through constant travel and association with prominence, have borne inevitable fruit, and with these ramifications she holds a position of authority.

She approaches her office each morning beautifully groomed, a model of womanly charm. Graciousness is exemplified in her greeting to her office assistants. The messenger receives just the right shade of interest in his salutation. She is back on the job after an extensive trip in which the strain of travel strikes the predominant note. The day passes fairly well, although it is broken so often by the telephone showering invitations and inquiries upon her—luncheon engagements, committee meetings, etc.—that her secretary is harassed, and she is in a dither. The day is finally boiled down to a few brief business sessions, with an early departure. The strain is telling, it is true, but not the strain of work or simple routine. It is the strain of maintaining prominence which will finally incapacitate her.

From one extreme to the other is the way of mankind. I have in mind another specimen, a ruffian, a tyrant, to whom Nero would not dare lift his eyes. No one has ever been able to account for his rise to authority or his stay in it. It seems that away back his father was a man of consequence and so the son rode to glory on his father's back. He sits in his swivel chair and with beetling brows gazes at his stenographer as she comes timidly, yet daringly in, chin lifted to absorb the shock of greeting. She escapes to the inner office, where she gladly sits. If he must perforce address her, it is through sheer necessity, he wants her to understand. She must likewise be brief. And she is. She has developed a finesse, a business-like proficiency that is a marvel of brevity. During the day, the ill feeling he engenders becomes more and more intense. Mistakes made are as "grapes of wrath" upon his stenographer's luckless head, and the day culminates with the stenographer easing her way out, thankful to breathe free air once more.

You have no doubt run across the unobtrusive, genteel type of employer—quiet, well-mannered, but evidently a misfit in wielding authority. However, he makes a splendid effort to conceal it. He has some blue blood, too, but not too blue. He is considerate. But he just doesn't know how to cover saying nothing by lots of conversation—in other words, the art of being noncommittal. He is noncommittal, very, but it isn't an art. It is an impious fraud upon the art. His stenographer feels rather sorry for him and makes obvious efforts to help him. She really knows her job and earns her salary in the delicacy with which she handles it, shielding his hesitancy with timely utterances and easing tension admirably. This executive is kind-hearted and really a learned man. He has admitted to himself that he doesn't know much about handling others, but the strain comes in keeping it from seeping out.

It is a far cry from this man to another type, a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde combination, that has remained, unfortunately, in my memory. This man is a personality contact man in a personnel office. He is slender and, as you approach his swivel chair, his decided "once-over" confuses you. His smile is so winning that you feel the job is gained even before the engaging combat of words, to which you fairly leap with eagerness. But you are a defeated opponent, though you don't know it. You land the job, feeling rather heavenly. You go to work. As you contact him from time to time, his charm increases. His affability and suavity are pronounced. His clerks seemingly work with serenity, but actually they are also schooled in the art of chicanery, one finds. You continue in your job, basking in his favor at every visit. Then suddenly you are out; dismissed with the blandness of a diplomat; bidding him goodby, somewhat bewilderedly, not knowing what it is all about; facing the same fascinating smile—nevertheless out. A few visits to your immediate boss, a whispered word, a glance, and the thing is done.

But the world of executives includes many noblemen, and this would be incomplete without making you acquainted with one outstanding in my acquaintance. He has risen from the ranks of the so-called "middle" class, a conscientious and intelligent man. He is well groomed, and it is rather a joy to see him enter in the morning with his swinging stride and his generous greeting. There is a healthy reaction here to start on, and the day begins well. In the first place, his stenographer was chosen because of promptness. This appealed to him. The choice revealed something of the man's discernment. He is no pseudo-employer, has no pretense. He is a gentleman giving fair play, expecting and getting it. He is honest, first of all, with himself. He can readily see that his stenographer handles her job with the same measure of intelligence he does his, and he acts upon this. In turn this brings the proper psychological reaction and earns respect. As a result, there is no strain in their relationship and there is efficiency in the office. He is exacting, without being tense; she is responsive to this, carrying her responsibility also. Moreover, she is paid for her job. Her boss knows an underpaid employe cannot work except under anxiety, which militates against efficiency. And so on the office goes, harmonious as a whole and honestly holding up its standards. And the day ends well.

Message To Youths

TO THOSE MEMBERS of American Youth who may be inclined to find fault with the state of the Nation and to blame the present senior class for neglect and sloth I should like to address a message—unsolicited, to be sure, but prepaid.

It goes this way:

If you think things are bad now, you should have seen the mess which we inherited around 1900!

Hardly anyone had electric lights then, even in the cities, and gas light was still a luxury, and, of course, there were no automobiles to speak of, nor any paved roads, and the plumbing was about what you would find in a modernized French or English mansion at this time—which is to say very primitive. Wages were low, but you could get a soup bone for a nickel and liver was free for the cat, but fresh vegetables vanished from the people's diet for the winter and oranges were a Christmas delicacy.

Up to some time around 1915 the river front in Chicago was a revolting mess of garbage, literally, and old buildings infested by rats big enough to saddle and ride, and in most cities the transportation consisted of street cars only, which in winter were heated by coal stoves.

In New York, up to then, the subway came up the East Side to Forty-second Street, then forked off to Broadway and uptown, by comparison with a present system so intricate that even some of the policemen don't know their way around.

ONLY A dozen years ago a drive from New York to Philadelphia was an expedition, and it took at least two and a half hours to get past Newark. Our generation built those vehicular tunnels and the George Washington Bridge, the Pulaski Skyway and the concrete throughroute which avoids the hard going in the congested districts. Our generation just obliterated South Water Street, shoved back the lake and made those boulevards which whip you swiftly and smoothly to areas which were country then.

Of course, I, personally, made no contribution to these improvements, but if you are going to blame my generation, generally, for neglect and failure in certain matters, you have to count us all in on the credits. Those who deserve the greatest credit as individuals or groups were the dirty capitalists who created the motor industry and other productive lines for sordid gain.

In the matter of public improvements, credit belongs to the party politicians—many of them grafters, I grant you, who were constantly trying to put the public in debt to them for material improvements to which they could point with pride in campaign time. They furnished the drive.

You should have seen St. Louis about then. You should have seen Detroit.

SO WE HAVE neglected you, have we? Well, in 1900 there were only 114,000 students taking regular college courses, fewer than one-tenth of the enrollment in 1938, and while it is true that the population also grew, that increase was only about 60 per cent. Work that out on your polished intellect and see how many more of you are going to college in proportion to the population than went to college then.

Why, in those days Miami was a little isolated trading post, and the soil which is now shoving up green vegetables and even strawberries in winter and all that citrus was shoving up only weeds, vine, pine and palmettos. If you think the Indians or nature made that change you are crazy. That was all done by this generation, which also produced the airplane, the telephone system, the radio and discoveries in healing that now cure people who, similarly ailing then, just had to die.

And all this time my generation somehow contrived to preserve the American liberties under the Constitution which you will not appreciate until and unless they are taken away. And if anyone tries to tell about the marvelous advance in Russia, ask him how many ordinary Russians own automobiles and what happens to a Russian who says a word against Joe Stalin. Ask how things are in Germany and Italy and make your comparisons.

If your generation does half as well as mine you will have run a very good score, and I hope you do.

THE ACCOMPANYING CHART depicts the national defense organization as it stood yesterday, with the possibility of other changes any day. Major alterations have taken place since last December, when the greatest part of the responsibility rested with the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense. By executive order signed January 7, the President set up the Office of Production Management. An idea of the shifting balance between the Advisory Commission and the OPM may be obtained by observing their positions on the right and left of the diagram. The OPM is set up within the Office for Emergency Management, which in turn is part of the President's own executive organization. The Office for Emergency Management also acts as a liaison agency between the President and the council and commission. The duties of the council, as stated in the Act of 1917 which set it up, are to "supervise and direct investigations and make recommendations . . .," and the commission actually did the advisory work referred to. The order establishing OPM, however, directs it to "formulate and execute." The personnel of the OPM was taken largely from the commission, and OPM and its parent office have been gradually absorbing the older organization's functions. Further shifts that have been discussed involve Industrial Materials, Employment and the Bureau of Research and Statistics.

Singapore

Britain Stands Her Ground

WHEN A LARGE contingent of Australian troops disembarked at Singapore this week to reinforce the garrison of that Gibraltar of the East, a ten-year-old British policy of retreat in the face of Japanese pressure was definitely and finally thrown on the scrap heap.

NOVER

Almost a decade has elapsed since the Japanese army suddenly marched into Mukden and initiated that cycle of aggression which has brought the world to its present tragic pass. In the Far East as in Europe that decade has seen the shattering of many hopes, the destruction of many illusions and the loss by the democracies of the West of one important bastion after another. Only two are left. One is the island fortress of Great Britain. The other is the island fortress of Singapore.

If Britain falls, Hitler will be the unchallenged master of Europe and Africa and the road to the conquest of the Americas will be open to him. If Singapore falls, Japan will be able to establish her hegemony over a large part of Asia and the adjacent islands. There would then be little to prevent the island empire from taking possession of Malaya, the Dutch East Indies, Burma, India, even Australia and New Zealand.

SHOULD A STRUGGLE develop over Singapore, and that appears to be a real possibility, it would be no mere sideshow in a war whose crucial theater is thousands of miles farther to the west but an integral part of a world-wide conflict. That is why, regardless of our justifiably intense interest in what is going on in Europe we cannot for one moment ignore developments taking place in the Far East. And it is equally important that our role in that area as in Europe be more than that of mere spectators.

The British, for their part, have emphasized the vital importance of defending Singapore by sending to that base reinforcements of men and planes which they could use at this time to very good effect in the Near East or at home. Nor are they showing much concern over the Japanese reactions to the Singapore move. Japanese spokesmen say that the British, by sending large contingents to Singapore, are acting in an aggressive manner. In Tokyo, it appears, as in Berlin and Rome, an aggressor is one who insists on being strong enough to defend himself. In any event it must now be clear to the Japanese that Singapore will not be taken without a fight.

AT FIRST GLANCE it would seem foolhardy in the extreme for Japan to attempt to invest Singapore. Three and a half years of war in China have sapped the strength of the island empire even though it has made her master, at least on paper, of a vast domain. To court a war in southeastern Asia when the bulk of her military force is bogged down on the mainland would seem to fly in the face of common sense. And it may be that the more cautious of Japanese leaders, those who understand the great risks that would be involved in an aggression against British and Dutch possessions in southeastern Asia, will be able to override the clamors of the rasher elements for a rasher policy. Yet there is no certainty that the latter will not have their way.

In the first place, the general situation in the world is such as to provide Japan with opportunities of imperialistic expansion that may never occur again. Presumably an assault on Singapore and the Dutch East Indies would be timed to coincide with a German all-out attack on the British Isles which means that the defenders would only have the weapons on hand with which to repel the attack.

Secondly, Japan cannot afford to let matters drift in China where her forces are being subjected to an incessant war of attrition by Chinese guerrillas, yet where it is impossible for her to move forward either. A victory in southeastern Asia would enable Japan effectively to close the Burma Road; it would relieve her of dangerous dependence on the United States for raw materials, particularly oil; indeed it would enable Japan to turn the tables on the United States by placing this Nation at Japan's mercy in the matter of rubber and tin from the Netherlands Indies and Malaya. Last but not least there is the potent consideration to be taken into account that Great Britain may soon be in a position to release for the defense of Singapore naval vessels now stationed in the Mediterranean and the Atlantic.

It is because at the moment the weakest aspect of Singapore's defenses and the defenses of the Dutch East Indies lies in the naval sphere that the role of the United States in the developing Far Eastern situation is so important. Were Japan convinced that this Nation would not stand by with hands folded while Japan moved farther south, there is a very real chance that caution would prevail at Tokyo. Hara-Kiri is not as popular in Japan as it once was. Fortunately, this country, like Great Britain, appears to have got over its erstwhile state of jitters regarding Japan. The passage by the House, with only one dissenting voice vote, of the measure to fortify Guam, a proposal rejected out of consideration for Japan's feelings some years ago, is a straw in the wind, a sign which the men directing the policy of the island empire can ill afford to ignore.

British Outlook

By Ernest K. Lindley

WENDELL WILLKIE and Harry Hopkins, between them, should be able to clear away confusion from at least one important question: The trend of political, economic, and social thinking within Great Britain.

Regardless of their own predilections, they are both level-headed observers, and both had unusual opportunities to probe the minds of British leaders. There is good reason to believe that they are pretty close together in their diagnoses, and that this will become apparent as they speak their minds.

Persons who already have heard some of their impressions sum them up in this way:

Ernest Bevin and other British Labor leaders in the government are more conservative than they are sometimes thought of in this country as being.

Conservative opinion is, on the whole, alive to the need for assuring that the postwar order in England spreads economic and social benefits and opportunities more widely.

All but the minorities of extremists on the fringes are deeply committed to democratic processes and are thinking of changes brought about by the traditional democratic means, not by revolution or sudden disruption.

Such a diagnosis is not news to persons who are familiar with the backgrounds of the active leaders of all parties in England. But, if authoritatively vouched for, it should dispel misapprehension among various groups in this country.

Fear that a victorious England would go far to the left politically undoubtedly has dampened the enthusiasm of some American businessmen for aiding the British to win the war. The British Empire as a bulwark of the system of private enterprise is one thing to them. A fully socialized England is another. And some have been heard to say that from their viewpoint a socialized England would be no worse than a Hitler-dominated England.

Flatly stated, this attitude probably is found only among persons of the type who think, or thought, that Franklin D. Roosevelt is a full-blown socialist, if not a communist, at heart.

A milder variant of this theme can be heard in the accusations that Roosevelt chose John G. Winant as Ambassador to Great Britain to encourage the forces of socialization and so to make easier drastic changes in our own economic system.

Such misgivings are based, in the first place, on a failure to realize that the British Labor Party is essentially conservative. It has stood for gradual change by democratic means. Its backbone consists of trade-union members who think first of improving conditions of labor, rather than of overall economic reorganization.

Likewise, the Tory Party often has been misjudged in this country by conservatives and liberals alike. From the time of Disraeli it has had a reforming tradition. And since World War I it has been responsible for many improvements in social conditions.

In his attitude toward such questions as health, education, housing and social insurance, Neville Chamberlain would have felt at home in the New Deal. The dominant conservative party of this country, to its great loss, lacked in the postwar period the common sense and social vision of British toryism.

In looking at England, a distinction must always be drawn between the economic and the social order. Before the present war broke out the British, in some respects, had gone much farther than we along the road toward economic democracy. But they had a more rigid system of social classes. The ladder from the bottom to the top was more difficult to climb than in the United States.

Returning observers testify that this class system is being shattered by the impact of the war. The real elite of England today are the pilots of the R. A. F., who are drawn from all classes.

Our recently returning visitors to England may also serve to put the influence of Harold Laski in better perspective. He is not the spokesman for the leaders of British trade-unionism. Whether he is a prophet, only time can tell, but he carries more weight among American liberal intellectuals than among British trade-unionists.

Chiefly through Felix Frankfurter, Laski has a channel to the White House. The Frankfurter influence was important in the selection of Winant as Ambassador. But Winant already knows first-hand the leaders of British labor. That is the chief reason he was chosen. And he undoubtedly knows that they are more conservative than they are often regarded as being by either our left-wing intellectuals or our jittery right-wing businessmen. If he doesn't know it, he will quickly find it out—unless the reports of other competent and recent observers are entirely awry.

The Acheson Report

III

By Merlo J. Pusey

A Code Of Fair Conduct

WHEN THE Senate Judiciary Committee gets down to the task of writing its own bill to carry out the recommendations of the Acheson Committee, two baffling questions will have to be decided: Should the bill include a code of proper conduct for administrative agencies? Should Congress attempt to improve the present haphazard arrangements for judicial review of administrative orders? This article will be devoted to the proposed "Code of Standards of Fair Administrative Procedure."

It is the minority of the committee which offers an elaborate code for the guidance of Federal boards, commissions and administrators engaged in determining numerous rights, privileges and immunities of citizens. The majority members have drafted a bill to effectuate numerous reforms, but they refuse to put their necks out when it comes to suggesting uniform procedure in the making of rules and the disposition of cases by administrative agencies. To be sure, the majority bill contains a brief "declaration of general policy." But this is scarcely more than an admonition that "administrative adjudication should be attended by procedures which assure due notice, adequate opportunity to present and meet evidence and argument, and prompt decisions." The minority favors much more detailed and binding directions.

TAKE, FOR EXAMPLE, the rule-making function. Agencies such as the SEC, the FTC and the NLRB lay great store upon rule-making. In the past, Congress has told some boards how their rules should be made, but it has also delegated this vital power to a great variety of agencies with virtually no direction as to how it should be employed. All members of the Acheson Committee agree that the exercise of this power should be surrounded by safeguards. They differ as to how far Congress should go in writing these safeguards into law.

The majority bill would require statements from each agency showing its internal organization and setting forth its rules, regulations and procedures. Each agency would have to designate an officer or unit to expedite the work of making or amending rules. No rule could go into effect until 45 days after its publication in the Federal Register, except that an agency could reduce or eliminate this notice period by certifying that circumstances require such action. Any interested person could file a petition requesting the promulgation or amendment of a rule. Complete reports on rules issued and requested would have to be made to Congress.

These limited requirements fall far short of meeting the demands of Messrs. McFarland, Stason and Vanderbilt, the authors of the proposed code of standards. They would require agencies to issue statements and rules under seven different headings. They call for advance notice that rules are to be made, wherever that is practicable. They would specifically authorize use of consultation and conferences, informal and formal hearings, acceptance of written views and various other methods in public rule-making. None of these methods would be made obligatory upon any agency, unless already specified in existing statutes. So, in reality, the proposed code would do little more than indicate to administrative officials that Congress would like to see such rule-making procedure used wherever feasible.

ONE CHIEF weakness of the Walter-Logan bill was that it would have discouraged rule-making by providing a rigid formula for the exercise of that power. Both the majority and minority within the Attorney General's Committee on Administrative Procedure avoid that mistake. Both groups are eager to encourage rule-making. They hope to bring this function out into the open instead of giving excuse for reliance upon secret rules or the substitution of case-to-case decisions for basic guiding principles. The minority bill even provides that "rulings in specific cases shall not, as a method or matter of general practice, be utilized to serve the functions of rules." Should important "rulings" be elevated to the status of "general rules or principles," they would have to be published as such.

In theory, at least, the minority makes out a good case for writing a code of fair procedure into the law. Many administrative agencies have grown to gigantic size. Their rulings and orders affect the lives of millions of citizens. Yet Congress has frequently given these instruments of power little indication as to how their powers should be used. "To govern the courts by weighty tradition, a bulky 'Judicial Code' and uniform rules of practice," says the minority report, "but to give administrators only slight statutory attention is an absurdity in a democracy."

There is no effort to fit all agencies into the same mold. Messrs. McFarland, Stason and Vanderbilt clearly recognize the need for flexibility to avoid crippling boards that are carrying out policies adopted by Congress. But they do not believe that flexibility should be carried to the point of arbitrary or haphazard procedures affecting personal rights. To quote once more: "The answer, we think, is to identify the few basic considerations and express them in legislative statements of policy, or principles, or of standards for the guidance of administrators, subject always to reasonable variation to meet varying needs."

SOME OF OUR regulatory laws endow administrators with enormous discretionary powers. That seems to be necessary if the work of modern government is to be done efficiently. Certainly it is not unreasonable for Congress to prescribe in general terms how those powers should be employed. Failure of the legislative body to provide direction where direction is needed has given rise to indefensible encroachments upon individual rights in some instances. It is not an uncommon practice, for example, for an administrator to roam at large securing evidence to be used against a person without ever putting that evidence into the record so that the individual accused of violating the law has a chance to refute it. The basic elements of a fair hearing have long been recognized in the United States. Adoption of these principles by administrative agencies can't reasonably be left to their own discretion.

To write such a code of fair procedure, however, is a difficult undertaking. The majority of the Acheson Committee admits that it was attracted to the idea when it was first proposed. It refused to go along with the minority in working out a suggested code because it believes that further study is essential "before the attempt can safely be made to prescribe by statute for a greater uniformity either of principle or of practice." Moreover, the majority believes that there is danger of making a code too rigid, on one hand, or so general that it will be meaningless, on the other. It hopes that separation of the prosecuting and adjudicating functions, unanimously recommended by the committee, will minimize the need for detailed instructions as to procedure.

THERE SEEMS to be little doubt, however, that the proposed hearing commissioners would have a better opportunity of attaining a truly independent status if they could begin their work under a clear-cut but not narrowly rigid code. Indeed, the majority bill goes a long way in telling these proposed officials how cases before them should be handled. The need for guidance of other administrative officials is also unanimously recognized. Perhaps a committee which worked as long and faithfully as did this one may be excused for the presumption that its report will serve that purpose more effectively than would an act of Congress. No doubt many of the committee's suggestions will be adopted voluntarily by administrators. But to suggest that a mere report will take the place of a code prescribed by Congress is to ignore the fate of thousands of competent reports now gathering dust in dark pigeonholes.

Nor can the implication of this suggestion be readily accepted. No administrative agency should be left to choose for itself whether it will adopt rules and procedures which assure fair play in the enforcement of the law. In this country governmental boards and commissions are amenable to the law and to our concept of justice no less than are citizens. In most instances, of course, their decisions may be appealed to the courts. But much waste of time and effort will probably be saved and friction in the administrative system will doubtlessly be minimized if Congress finds it practicable to subject these agencies to a code that will guarantee fair play in the first instance.

On The Record

"The American Century"

LAST WEEK in Life there appeared an editorial by Mr. Henry R. Luce, called "The American Century." It was more than an editorial; it was an essay, and I have an idea that it is more than either—that it is an American document. Honest, bold, imaginative, it calls spades spades, presents the issues of the present in clearer terms than those to which we are accustomed and projects a daring future. The editorial has been reprinted. It is obtainable from the offices of Time Incorporated, 9 Rockefeller Plaza, New York City. Those who missed it should send for it.

MR. LUCE is a Willkie Republican. Mr. Luce's publicans have maintained for seven years a critical attitude toward the Roosevelt Administration. It has not, however, been a blindly partisan attitude. It has not been critical for the sake of criticizing, but critical according to the views of objective reality of the editors and writers. Now Mr. Luce says, with candor and intelligence, that it is "our job to help in every way we can, for our sakes and our children's sakes, to insure that Franklin D. Roosevelt shall justly be hailed as America's greatest President."

For Mr. Luce, like Mr. Willkie, happens to care more for the fate of his children and his children's children than he does for the fate of any political party. The most we can all hope for is that Mr. Roosevelt will succeed in the most grandiose way. Those who help him succeed will govern America tomorrow, under whatever party label. If he fails, it will be a miserable America to govern.

Mr. Luce says logically, reasonably and clearly, that this century will either be a Nazi century or an American century. It won't be a French century and it won't be a British century. If it is an American century it will be a century in which Great Britain and all she stands for as the builder and carrier of Anglo-Saxon ideas will live and flourish. But the senior partner in the Anglo-Saxon world of tomorrow will not be the British Isles, but the United States. That is in the cards. Mr. Luce quotes the London Economist, highly intelligent British weekly that has often formulated policy, to this effect. The Economist says:

"In any permanent closer association of Britain and the United States an island people of less than 50,000,000 cannot expect to be the senior partner. . . . The center of gravity, and the ultimate decision must increasingly lie in America. We cannot resent this historical development."

The Economist is right and Mr. Luce is right. Because they are right, the futile pleas of certain Congressmen that Britain should state her peace aims show only a complete ignorance regarding the distribution of power in the English-speaking world. Only America can state the peace aims of the New World. Britain, says Mr. Luce, will accept our peace aims, provided they are in harmony with the basic ideals of freedom, justice and law.

MR. LUCE draws objectively the two pictures: Isolationism and internationalism. He sees that we have already rejected the former. Isolationism means letting the rest of Western civilization go altogether. It means holding North America and Central America, together with an undefined small part of South America, and making this complex strong enough to resist all comers. But it means living in a far more limited world than we have ever lived in throughout our whole history.

But internationalism means more than "aid to Britain." Internationalism means taking up the full responsibility that destiny has placed in our hands as a nation of 130,000,000 people occupying the greatest land space between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. It means taking upon ourselves the complete responsibility of leadership which is ours for the taking.

"Like most great creative opportunities, it is an opportunity enveloped in stupendous difficulties and dangers." But "if we do not want it, if we refuse to take it, the responsibility of refusal is also ours, and ours alone."

Mr. Luce does not think that the assumption of leadership in behalf of freedom, democracy and justice means that we undertake to police the world from Alaska to Timbuctoo. He writes with clear realism to an obvious fact: "America cannot be responsible for the behavior of the whole world. But America is responsible to herself as well as to history for the environment in which she lives. Nothing can so vitally affect America's environment as America's own influence upon it, and therefore if America's environment is unfavorable to the growth of American life, then America has nobody to blame so deeply as she must blame herself."

AND "IN ... failure to grasp this relationship between America and America's environment lies the moral and political bankruptcy of any and all forms of isolationism. It is most unfortunate that this virus of isolationist sterility has so deeply infected an influential section of the Republican Party. For until the Republican Party can develop a vital philosophy and program for America's initiative and activity as a world power it will continue to cut itself off from any useful participation in this hour of history."

MR. LUCE should not be surprised by the behavior of a large branch of the Republican Party. In every single country the tory parties have been those most willing to sacrifice the national honor, power, prestige and, eventually, existence out of the fear of revolutionary developments at home. The fear is a bogeyman. Revolution in the sense of disorder, breakdown and civil war thrives in the atmosphere of hypocrisy and indecision. We are having a revolution—a world revolution—which is turning and changing political structures, economic structures and social relationships from Scotland to Peiping. The question, however, is whose revolution?

And I thank Mr. Luce for these words: "But to say that a revolution is in progress is not to say that the men with either the craziest ideas, or the angriest ideas, or the most plausible ideas, are going to come out on top. The Revolution of 1776 was won and established by men, most of whom appear to have been both gentlemen and men of common sense."

Mr. Luce might have added that the Revolution of 1776, which was in reality a civil war inside the Anglo-Saxon world, has since then won over the whole length and breadth of the Anglo-Saxon world. Certainly the British Commonwealth has been Americanized. The very constitution of the Union of South Africa was constructed according to the philosophy of The Federalist—the philosophers of the American Revolution.

To Americanize enough of the world so that we shall have a climate and environment favorable to our growth is indeed a call to destiny. It means some reforms, particularly in the economic field in relation to the nature and use of wealth; but those reforms are in the cards and a clear international policy will make them easier, not harder. For this country alone has the power—if it also has the intelligence and the will—to bring about a reconstruction of a large part of the world in harmony with freedom and with an honest promise of prosperity for all.

MR. LUCE'S essay will evoke others—others, I hope, from his own pen and from others' pens. It stands out for its bold affirmation of opportunity, sweeping aside the floundering timidity that has cursed our policy ever since the last war. If we had been doing our part in the world, this war would not have happened. Now we must do it or take a back seat in history. This will either be an American century or it will be the beginning of the decline and fall of the American dream.

CHRISTIAN COLLEGE GIRLS LEAVING THE CAPITOL FOR MT. VERNON

Zoo's Who . . .No. 5

Acinonyx jubatus, or so they relate us,
Is what you see here, gentle readah;
But nix on that Roman, tongue-twisting cognomen,
Just call her "My good friend, the cheetah."

No, wait! Call her Kitty, because it's a pity
To hide the good name of Her Highness;
She came from Af-ri-ca, by way of To-pe-ka,
Her mate's known as Tom and that's finis.

Visiting College Girls' Spokesman Tells Youth to Believe in America

By Scott Hart

Norma Belden, a student of Christian College in Columbia, Mo., yesterday inquiring into the state of the Nation with 35 touring classmates at the Capitol, snapped out how she thought American youth can best aid their country.

"Simply by believing in it," she said.

Ahead of the first robin, long ahead of the first cherry blossom and all the droves of touring students soon to arrive, the Christian College girls were welcomed by Speaker Rayburn, Senator Capper and a dozen or more other members. Rayburn said he wanted them to be like their mothers, that their coming here "is one of the finest things that has happened to you, this seeing of your Government at work."

Betty Jo Fridel, 16 years old, but a far-advanced student, who came to Christian from Graham, Tex., said that no one should think college boys are cowards. They're ready to fight, if war comes, she asserted, heatedly, and "we should give England everything we've got, but shouldn't send our boys . . . unless we have to."

"I am a Republican,' 'said Miss Belden, "but I think that in time of war democracy is a failure because it handcuffs the President. In peace, of course, it is wonderful and I wish the world would disarm."

Maybe a slightly faulty picture of the girls is given by all of this. They don't wear heavy rimmed spectacles nor have the dust of ancinet library volumes in their hair. The proof: The Inter-Fraternity Council of George Washington University has assigned them escorts for a dinner dance tonight at the Washington Hotel, where they are stopping under chaperonage of the college president, J. C. Miller, and Mrs. Miller, and J. Herndon Kirkland, conductor of the tour.

Richest Girl, 17, Celebrates Quietly

GLORIA VANDERBILT, dark-eyed heiress to $4,280,000 made by her forebears in railroads and banking, was 17 years old yesterday. She spent the day without fanfare but received a flurry of special delivery letters, telegrams and florists' boxes at the private school she attends in New York. Gloria, who winds her hair around her head to look older, has expressed her reluctance to make a formal bow to society

Most of Land For Stadium Now Purchased

Nearly all the land needed for the projected Washington Stadium at the end of East Capitol Street has been purchased, Norman C. Brown, associate purchasing officer and appraiser of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, announced yesterday.

In approving several purchase contracts yesterday, the commission brought to 15 acres the land now in public ownership. All that remains in the area, Brown said, is a stretch containing flats and row houses, which will not be purchased until the stadium is actually ordered by Congress.

Nearly Doubles in Value

Brown said that the average price paid for the undeveloped land over a five-year period was 34 cents a foot, and he estimated that the land would now bring 60 cents a foot. The site is immediately north of the site of the new District National Guard Armory.

Under plans which have yet to be translated into legislation, the Washington Stadium would be a feature of the National Sports Center, near the Anacostia River. The sports center would consist of a huge parade ground and track, a special stadium for acquatic sports, a tennis arena, a boathouse and other features. The stadium itself would have a capacity of from 50,000 to 150,000 and would handle such events as the Army and Navy football game.

Playground Requested

At its meeting yesterday the National Park and Planning Commission received a request from Milo Christiansen, coordinator of recreation, for a playground at Twenty-third and P Streets Northwest.

The commission approved plans for extending Independence Avenue from Fourteenth Street to the Tidal Basin. Ultimately that avenue will extend to the Potomac River.

The commission also adopted the recommendation that the District Government, the National Capital Parks Service and the National Park and Planning Commission each appoint a member to a committee that will prepare a report on additional highway and parkway facilities through Rock Creek Park.

D. C. Tuberculosis Board Returns After Resigning

The committee appointed to make recommendations on reorganization of the District Tuberculosis Association, which resigned "to keep out of a fight," was back at work yesterday and will report periodically upon its findings, Ross Garrett, chairman, said yesterday.

The association board of directors refused to accept the committee's withdrawal and was said to have enjoined it to "let the chips fall where they may."

Functioning again, the committee will follow its own dictates and possibly will have its findings ready within 10 days, it was said. The charge has been made that a large part of the association's funds were being spent for salaries and overhead expenses, with the resultant investigation.

Roosevelt Signs Bill Authorizing Volunteer Armada

Copyright by New York Times

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a bill authorizing the Coast Guard to create what amounts to a volunteer armada for guarding the shoreline of the United States and to increase this fleet whenever a full emergency is declared to exist.

A Coast Guard reserve, similar to the Navy reserve, is authorized by the legislation. Its members could be ordered into service in case of a national emergency and allowed to volunteer for active service in the meantime. "Motorboats or yachts" could be accepted by the Coast Guard from reserve members, or from others, for this service. The present nonmilitary reserve will be converted into a separate "auxiliary" under the new law. Its members would not be liable for military service.

The legislation authorizes the Coast Guard to call immediately into active service 100 commissioned officers, 126 warrant officers and 1,620 enlisted men from the new reserve.

Leahy to Get Food At Vichy Month Late

Baltimore, Feb. 20 (AP).—Ambassador William D. Leahy at Vichy, France, will get 42 tons of foodstuffs and tobacco—a month late.

The consignment, for use in the American Embassy, had been placed on the Red Cross ship Cold Harbor, which sailed for France and Spain February 1, but was taken off because the request for a British navicert was received too late. The supplies will be sent aboard the United States Lines freighter Artigas, sailing tomorrow.

Little Congress Elects Sakowski Speaker

Arthur Sakowski, Nanticoke, Pa., youth who runs an elevator at the Capitol, now rates the title of "Mr. Speaker" among his fellows.

The Little Congress, composed of employes on Capitol Hill, elected him speaker at a meeting Wednesday night. Sakowski is the son of a former mayor of Nanticoke.

Visitors Jam Senate Gallery, Waits Are Long

Members of the House are getting worried because lots of tourist-constituents are having to stand in line several hours before being admitted to the Senate galleries to hear the lend-lease bill debate.

Capitol police estimate that between 2,500 and 3,000 persons pass through the lines daily and many of them stand as long as three hours waiting to enter the crowded galleries. Some, after standing most of the afternoon, don't get in at all before adjournment.

Some of the House members have suggested that the Senate set aside one large gallery where tourists could sit for ten or 15 minutes and then clear out for others. The Senate does maintain such a gallery in normal times.

John R. Perry, head doorkeeper, said that he would take up the matter with Sergeant at Arms Chesley W. Jurney, but he foresaw difficulty if the plan were adopted.

The confusion of periodic moving would disturb the Senate, he said, and some of the militant pacifist women who have been haunting the Capitol might refuse to leave the gallery, or else make a scene.

Perry pointed out that members who make special requests for seats for friends or constituents are accommodated despite the long waiting line.

Inter-American Librarians Attend Convention Dinner

Delegates to the fourth convention of the Inter-American Bibliographical and Library Association held a dinner meeting at the Willard Hotel last night, Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, former resident of Panama, presided.

Addresses were delivered by Miss Ruth L. Butler, of the Newberry Library, Chicago; Miss Carmel Sullivan, of the Library of Congress, and the Rev. Ruben Vargas Ugarte, S.J., dean of the faculty of philosophy and letters of the Catholic University of Peru.

The final session of the convention will be held this morning at the Willard.

Mothers Seeking Milk for Children Riot in Paris

Vichy, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—The first food riots in Paris occurred in three workers' suburbs late yesterday when mothers demanded milk for their children, according to reports reaching Vichy.

The disorders, said to have been on a small scale, occurred in the suburbs of Brunoy, Suresnes and Saint Denis in the "red ring" of Paris. Authorities of the German-held capital accused Communists of provoking the troubles.

Simultaneously in the three suburbs mothers swarmed around the town halls, holding their children in the air and shouting demands that they be given milk.

The demonstrations were quickly brought under control without police interference, it was said.

Don't Hoard Tin, Harriman Appeals

W. A. Harriman, of the Office of Production Management, appealed to tin users yesterday not to hoard the metal and said that available supplies were sufficient to meet requirements for 15 months.

Harriman said that present buying practices "might have unfortunate repercussions on the defense program and the national economy as a whole."

February Is Cherry Recipe Time

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

IT WOULDN'T be February for most of us if we didn't in some way revive the story of George Washington and the cherry tree.

Martha Ellyn

Ever since Parson Weems wrote his "Life of Washington" there has been a close association between cherries and Washington's Birthday. Although the story of the chopped down cherry tree may be discredited, it is pleasant to have some symbol of one phase of our traditional freedom to use in these days of patriotic feeling.

The Post recipe contestants make cherry dishes take on new charm. Cherry rolls, cherry cobbler, cherry-decorated cakes and cherry pies seem to be the order of the day. Glorious baked hams, too, with sugar-glazed surface and studded with cherries proved themselves popular in the menus submitted.

Miss Helen Richter, 24 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, wins top honors, the first prize of $10, with her Washington's Birthday dinner. It is one that any hostess would be glad to use to commemorate Washington's memory by recalling the charm and grace of living associated with Mount Vernon. For those who lean to the cherry tree fable, Miss Richter offers a maraschino Cherry Cake as the starred recipe on her winning menu. Here are her menu and the recipe for the cake:

Washington's Birthday Dinner

Hot tomato bouillon
Baked Ham
Candied Sweet Potatoes
Harvard Beets Brussels Sprouts
Lettuce Salad, Russian Dressing
Parker House Rolls, Apple Jelly
Marchino Cherry Cake
Cherry Ice Cream Stars
Coffee

Maraschino Cherry Cake—Cream ½ cup shortening. Add 1¼ cups sugar gradually and cream thoroughly. Sift 2 cups plus 6 tablespoons flour once before measuring. Mix ½ cup broken nut meats and 16 maraschino cherries, cut in quarters and dredge with 2 tablespoons flour. Mix and sift remainder of flour with 2¼ teaspoons baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt. Add to creamed mixture alternately with the liquid. Blend in the floured nuts and cherries. Fold in 4 egg whites which have been beaten until stiff but not dry. Pour into well-greased and floured cake pan, 8 inches square, 2 inches deep, and bake 50 minutes in a moderate oven, 350 degrees. Cool and frost with 7-minute frosting and decorate with cherries, using strips of citron for leaves and angelica for stems in making cherry clusters. In each corner of cake put one cherry and in the middle a cluster of three.

To make cherry ice cream stars, cut ice cream with star-shaped cookie cutter.

Mrs. Jay Lawlor, 1627 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest, gives expression for Washington's Birthday food in a buffet supper menu. The second prize of $5 goes to Mrs. Lawlor. Her winning supper menu and recipe for sweetbreads with sherry mushroom sauce follow:

George Washington Buffet Supper

Cherry Juice Cocktail With Mint
Breaded Sweetbreads,
Sherry Mushroom Sauce
Latticed Potatoes
Mixed Green Salad
Stuffed Celery With Cheese
Pickles Hot Rolls
Cherry Marlow Coffee

Breaded Sweetbreads With Sherry Mushroom Sauce—Let 2 pairs sweetbreads stand in ice water for 20 minutes. Drain; plunge into 2 quarts boiling water, to which has been added 2 tablespoons vinegar, also 2 teaspoons of salt. Simmer, covered, for 30 minutes. Lift out and plunge again into ice water. Separate sweetbreads and carefully remove fat and thick connecting tissues. Then remove fine membrane and lightly sprinkle with salt. Slit them if they are very thick. Add 4 tablespoons cold water to 2 slightly beaten eggs. Season 1½ cups finely sifted, dried bread crumbs with ¼ teaspoon pepper and 1½ teaspoons salt. Dip sweetbreads first in the egg mixture, then in crumbs; repeat. Saute on both sides in ¾ inch of hot salad oil in a skillet until golden brown. Serve with sherried mushroom sauce, made by blending and heating 1 small can condensed cream of mushroom soup and 6 tablespoons milk. Saute the mushrooms in 3 tablespoons butter; add to sauce with 2 tablespoons sherry and serve. Serves 4.

Miss Jean S. Allen, 5812 Thirty-second Street Northwest, suggests a Washington's Birthday supper. For this suggestion Miss Allen wins the third award of $3. Here is her winning menu and the recipe for cherry biscuits:

Clubwomen To Discuss Defense Aid

Service Groups' Officials to Meet At Conference Here Sunday

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor

The relation of women's classified service clubs to the national defense program will be one of the topics discussed Sunday at a conference of international presidents and executive secretaries of the five foremost clubs of this kind in existence. For the first time in U. S. history such a conference, looking toward cooperation on matters vital to the general welfare, will be held by the executive heads of the Altrusa, Pilot, Quota, Soroptimist and Zonta Clubs.

The conference will open at 10:30 Sunday morning at the Mayflower Hotel and continue through the day. In the evening a buffet supper honoring the presidents and secretaries will be given at the Shoreham Hotel, with members of the local clubs and of those in nearby Maryland and Virginia attending.

Miss Edith R. Macauley, local president of Altrusa, the oldest of the clubs, will open the conference and present the international president of her organization, Mrs. Dessalee Ryan Dudley, of Battle Creek, Mich., who will preside during the business sessions. Washington was chosen for the meeting as two of the presidents, Mrs. Jean Bennett, of the Soroptimist Club, and Mrs. May Moyers McElroy, of Zonta, and Miss Gwladys Jones, executive secretary of the Quota Club, live here.

There will be discussion both of cooperation in the national defense program and of the demands of war defense. Some of the clubs already have sent out questionnaires to their members throughout the country, to determine their training and availability for service in various capacities in case of an emergency. The international organizations also have contributed generously to war relief, giving Red Cross ambulances and funds for other supplies and, in the case of the Soroptimist Club, offering to sponsor in this country for the duration of the war all children of British Soroptimists.

Participating in the conference will be Mrs. Dudley, president, and Miss Mabel Meek, of Chicago, Ill., secretary of Altrusa International; Mrs. Ina Clarke Drake of Memphis, Tenn., president of Pilot International; Mrs. Clara Mason of Fargo, N. Dak., president, and Miss Gwladys Jones, secretary of Quota International; Mrs. Bennett, president, and Miss Martha Servis, Philadelphia, Pa., secretary of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs; Mrs. McElroy, president, and Miss Harriet Richards, Chicago, secretary of Zonta International.

The committee on arrangements for the supper is composed of the presidents and officers of the local clubs: Altrusa, Miss Macauley, president, and Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist; Pilot, Miss Helen M. Hoffman, president; Quota, Miss Margaret Lunn, president, and Miss Minnie Byers; Soroptimist, Mrs. Lorraine Good, president, and Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis; Zonta, Mrs. Nan Street, president, and Mrs. Helen T. Steinbarger.

Mrs. Dudley of the Altrusa Club will arrive today and be joined by Miss Meek and Miss Eva Wall of Winston-Salem, N. C., tomorrow when they will confer on arrangements for the international convention of Altrusa, to be held in Roanoke, Va., in July. Miss Wall, immediate past governor of the second district, is in charge of convention plans. Both she and Mrs. Dudley will be guests of Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist during their stay in Washington.

Workers for Blind Entertain 100 At Church Party

A party was given last night at the monthly meeting of the Association of Workers for the Blind, held at the Church of the Epiphany on G Street. Walter Waple was chairman of arrangements and a skit was presented under the direction of Eddie McGinnis, who entertained at one of the meetings last year.

About 100 blind persons and friends attended.

The association recently collected $15 for keeping talking books for the blind in repair, by means of distributing miniature aprons to members who filled the pockets with pennies to the amount of the number of inches in their waist measure.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

MEMBERS of the Soroptimist Club have a meeting each month devoted to the club itself and its members.

This week, at the Wednesday luncheon of the local club, Lois Garlock, a new member, was introduced and told of her work. She is chief clerk of the medical division of the United States Compensation Commission, a graduate of Skidmore College and entered Government service at the time of the World War.

Another distinction she has—which she may or may not have told her sister Soroptimists—is that of having been commodore of the Sandy Cove Yacht Club for several years, the only club with an exclusively feminine membership.

Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis, a charter member of the club, also gave an account of her work, telling of the establishment of the Lewis Hotel Training School, of which she is vice president—the first resident and correspondence hotel training school in the world.

ALL-AMERICAN PARTY—Bethlehem Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, will sponsor an All-American party Tuesday evening, March 4, it has been announced. Unit 9, of the ways and means committee, under Mrs. H. M. Franke, is in charge of arrangements and has elaborate plans for the event. It will be at the Masonic Temple, Eighth and F Streets Northeast.

Representative Luther Patrick, of Alabama, will be the guest of honor and speaker, discussing the defense program. There will be music by Mrs. Marie Deal and a male quartet, and the colors will be presented by men in uniform.

Each table at the affair will be decorated to emphasize the American theme, one illustrating the Spirit of '76, others representing the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and other branches of the military service.

FARM AND GARDEN MEETING—The Capital division of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association will have a luncheon meeting at the Highlands Monday at 12:30, followed by an illustrated lecture on "American Beauty," presented by Mrs. Ridgley Chapline.

Mrs. Chapline will select the pictures from those made on her travels in Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks, in northern Minnesota, the Canadian Rockies, Utah, Colorado and the Middle West.

As an active member of the Woman's Farm and Garden Association, she is donating her services for the benefit of the scholarship fund. Mrs. James Craig Peacock is in charge of reservations for the luncheon, to which members may bring guests.

Indiana Alumni to Hear Myers, Rep. Boehne

The Indiana Alumni Association will be addressed by Walter Myers, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, and Representative John W. Boehne, of that State, at its breakfast meeting Sunday morning at 10:30 at the Kennedy-Warren.

The breakfast will be in honor of the retiring officers John J. Reinhard, president; Mrs. W. E. Givens, and Jerome Shay. The new president of the association is James L. Fieser national vice chairman of the American Red Cross.

Taylor to Speak To Illinois Society

Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne Chatfield Taylor will address the annual dinner of the Illinois State Society, tonight at 7 o'clock, in the ballroom of the Annapolis Hotel. Representative Laurence F. Arnold, president of the society, will be master of ceremonies and Representative James M. Barnes will act as toastmaster. Members of the Illinois delegation in Congress will make short talks on the subject, "It Happened in My Campaign."

Miss Janet Bracken, coloratura soprano, who sang with the Women's Symphony Orchestra, of Chicago, and shared a Giant Park program with Mischa Elman, will sing.

Among guests at the dinner will be Senator and Mrs. Scott W. Lucas, Mrs. C. Wayland Brooks, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, members of the Illinois delegation in Congress and their wives, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Schramm, M. S. Szymczck, Claude V. Parsons, Mr. and Mrs. John Herrick, Dr. and Mrs. Glenn Dillard Gunn, and Dr. Mollie Ray Carroll.

Chairman of the dinner is Mrs. G. H. Cameron, 3206 Wisconsin Avenue.

Lectures in Richmond

Mrs. Lydia Van Hagen Van Zandt has returned from Richmond, Va., where she substituted Wednesday for Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard, lecturer on current events, in a talk before the Richmond Woman's Club. Mrs. Howard, due to illness, was unable to fill her regular lecture engagement there. Mrs. Van Zandt discussed "Events in the Far East."

Jewish Juniors Will Honor National Head

During the next two weeks, members of the Washington section, National Council of Jewish Juniors, will engage in a round of activities. The first of these events will take place Wednesday evening at the Jewish Community Center when the section will honor the national junior president, Miss Vera Teplitz, of Chicago.

Miss Teplitz is visiting sections throughout the country in conjunction with the new national junior project, port and dock work. She will attend the board meeting scheduled for that evening, and immediately afterward will be the guest of honor at a reception, to which the entire membership is invited. Prior to her election as national president, Miss Teplitz held the posts of president of the Chicago section, national chairman of finance and administration, and second national vice president. She also acts as executive director of the council camp, sponsored by the Chicago section of the National Council of Jewish Women, at Wauconda, Ill.

The Washington Junior section will celebrate its twenty-first anniversary Sunday afternoon, March 2, in the Cafritz Auditorium at the Jewish Community Center. The speaker of the afternoon will be H. R. Baukhage, noted radio news commentator. This occasion also will serve as a reciprocity meeting between the Washington, Baltimore and Richmond sections, as well as the joint senior, junior and subjunior affair.

Miss Elizabeth Satlof is the general chairman of the afternoon, assisted by Mrs. Edith T. Cooper and Miss Sadie Grossman as cochairmen. The seniors on the committee include Mrs. Arthur J. Stephens, Mrs. Sylvan King, and Mrs. Nathaniel Aaronson.

Among honor guests invited are Mrs. Samuel Strouse, of Baltimore, national chairman of the committee on senior-junior relations; Mrs. S. M. Bowman, of Richmond, president of the Mid-Atlantic Conference of the National Council of Jewish Women; Mrs. Alexander J. Wolf, of this city, honorary national vice president of the National Council of Jewish Women; Miss Eda Bess Krivitsky, of Baltimore, president of the Mid-Atlantic States Conference of the National Council of Jewish Juniors.

Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, recent past president of the Washington seniors, will deliver the opening prayer. The mistress of ceremonies will be Miss Dordy Schiller, president of the Washington Juniors.

Miss Martin to Go On Trip for G.O.P.

Miss Marion E. Martin, director of the women's division, Republican National Committee, leaves today for a number of speaking engagements and conferences with Republican women leaders in New England.

She will go first to her home State of Maine, where she will attend the citizens' reception honoring Gov. Sumner Sewall, in Augusta. Her next stop will be in Concord, N. H., where she will confer with Mrs. Edward Toland, national committeewoman and other organization workers.

In Boston, where Miss Martin will be on February 27, she will meet with organization groups under the leadership of Mrs. Addison B. Green, vice chairman of the Republican State committee, and also will attend a dinner honoring Gov. Saltonstall.

A speaking engagement in Worcester, Mass., under the auspices of the Republican Business and Professional Women's Club, is also on her schedule before her return to Washington on March 3.

Give Others A Lift, Urges Judge Howorth

The responsibility of the exceptional woman for helping the average woman was stressed last night by Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth in an address at the dinner meeting of the Washington Quota Club, at Ivy Terrace.

Judge Howorth, past president of the Business and Professional Women's Club, declared there was much that such women as the Quotarians — whose membership in a selective clubindicated they had achieved success in their individual fields—could do for other women. She specified their obligation to help the young woman, the home woman and the average business woman.

Successful business women, in their contact with younger women, should give them an understanding of the necessity for making an economic contribution, she said. Even if they marry, they should not regard the marriage ceremony as an insurance policy for security, Judge Howorth asserted. They should realize their responsibility for making an economic contribution either through able management of their homes or by continuing to work.

Giving vocational advice and assistance is another means by which women in executive positions can help others, she said.

She also urged that girls be encouraged to understand machinery and become mechanical minded. "We raise girls by the standards of a handicraft age when we are living in a machine age," said Judge Howorth, "and have been left behind as a result."

Executive women need to cooperate with home women and urge them to use their time and ability in community work, she said. She cited the statement in a caption on a picture in The Sunday Post, which stated that women delegates to the Federation of Citizens' Associations do a small amount of talking, and asserted this should not be the case—"they should present their views."

Miss Margaret Lunn, president of the Quota Club, presided.

Floral Decoration To Be Topic of Talk At Hurst Hall

An event of interest to flower lovers is the benefit lecture to be given by Mrs. Ikko Greger at Hurst Hall in the American University, Nebraska and Massachusetts Avenues on February 25 at 3:30 p. m.

Mrs. Greger will discuss and demonstrate "Flower Arrangement in the American Home." Her lecture is sponsored by the garden committee of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Horace Mann School and is for the benefit of the school gardens there.

Landscaping of the grounds is already in progress through the efforts of active member of the committee which is composed of Mrs. Greger, Dr. F. W. Lathrop, Mrs. Guy W. Leadbetter, Mrs. Lynn R. Edminster, Commander Walter S. Diehl, Mrs. Charles H. Pardoe, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Furbershaw.

W. C. and A. N. Miller have contributed a portion of land adjacent to the school grounds to be given over for experimental purposes, seed beds, etc. and the garden will become an outdoor classroom, supervised by some of the garden-minded teachers during the spring and summer months.

Garden Club Votes Proceeds of Tour To British Relief

The Garden Club of Virginia has voted to donate the entire proceeds derived from the club's "Garden Week" tour, to be held April 28 through May 3, to British relief through the Washington branch of Bundles for Britain, located at 1801 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Mrs. George Angus Garrett, Washington chairman of Bundles for Britain, held a meeting of the sponsors and committee chairmen of bundles, at her home, 1627 New Hampshire Avenue, yesterday to consider the part which Bundles is to take in this venture.

The tour will be conducted under the auspices of the Garden Club of Virginia as it has always been in the past, with the various committees of Bundles for Britain working to stimulate additional interest and participation in it.

Pre-Lenten Affairs Jam Social Calendar

By Hope Ridings Miller

THE FINAL WHIRL before Lent always has its hectic points but this year the calendar seems more jammed than usual; and a record number of luncheons, teas and dinners—to say nothing of several big-league weddings—will have Capitalites out and about at top speed the next few days.

Hope Ridings Miller

Climaxing the high-gear schedule will be dozens of parties on Shrove Tuesday (looks to me as if everybody in town has decided to entertain that day). In fact there will be so many fetes from 1 o'clock on that social Washington will have its collective tongue hanging out by the time Ash Wednesday rolls around . . . and nothing will be more welcome than a Lenten lull.

However, while scores of Capital hostesses will be whipping themselves into a grade A social froth on the final day before Lent, one local celebrity, at least, will be devoting herself to a more worthwhile pursuit. In other words, Mrs. Francis Biddle, wife of Solicitor General, who is also widely known as Katherine Garrison Chapin, the poet, will be speaking before the New York Cosmopolitan Club at one of its exclusive member-luncheons. Her talk will have the provocative title, "Why, Poetry," and she will touch on the responsibility of the poet in a time of chaos, and poetry as a social need. Chances are she also will read some of her latest verse, including a few selections to which she has added the final lines in recent months.

THAT EVENING at the New York studio of Mrs. Biddle's sculptor sister, Cornelia Van A. Chapin, there will be a very interesting supper gathering, and poetry again will come up for discussion. Several years ago Rachel Crothers, the playwright, formed a dinner club of friends who called themselves The Famous Women, and this is the group that the Chapin sisters will entertain.

Some of the members are Mrs. August Belmont (Eleanor Robson), Lucille Watson and Cornelia Otis Skinner, actresses; Malvina Hoffman, famous sculptor; Mrs. Ernest Peixotto, Miss Mary Aldrich and Alice Duer Miller. At the Tuesday fete Cornelia Chapin will talk informally about her stone cutting; Katherine Chapin will continue the thread of her speech at the Cosmopolitan Club; and several others in the group will also give brief talks about their work.

Miss Chapin, the sculptor, is now exhibiting a large new work of art at the Whitney Museum. Last year her long list of honors was made even longer by her election to membership in the National Academy.

Mrs. Biddle will be off to Boston this week-end to visit her son, Randolph, who is at Harvard. She will stop in New York on her way home and will return here on Wednesday. Since they moved into their Georgetown home (1669 Thirty-first Street) several weeks ago, the Biddles have been entertaining at only small, informal fetes; but before long, Mrs. Biddle probably will be hostess at a large tea. I'll tell you more about that later.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: "In wartime there are to be no published dinner lists from here," said a spokesman at the British Embassy yesterday. Anyway, the British Ambassador and Viscountess Halifax gave a dinner last night, the second at which they have entertained this week. . . . Another dinner on last night's calendar was the one given by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles. . . . Mrs. Sterling Byrd Lacy, of Leesburg, who is spending some time in Washington, will entertain at a luncheon at the Carlton today. . . . Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins will be guest of honor at a cocktail party to be given by Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell on Friday, February 28.

PURELY PERSONAL: No hard work is more fun than having a brief fling before a radio microphone. The tense, last-minute note-making, the final long breath, and the pin-drop quiet that accents the last split second before you're on the air—all these add to the thrill that makes a radio appearance something you won't forget. At least, I won't. Last night, an hour before Dorothy Thompson took the stage for her Town Hall lecture, several of us were working like mad over our WINX radio program that went on the air at 7:30. The Mexican Ambassador was patiently reading his script over and over again. Leo J. Paulin and Dr. Evang were rehearsing their lines, and Helen Essary and I were comparing notes. Then, before any of us realized it, we were all "on the air" . . . and off again with the program finished. It's all a fever-pitch business . . . but, as I've said before, a lot of fun.

Mrs. Izac Entertains in Honor Of Her Mother at Luncheon

Several luncheons were given yesterday afternoon at the Congressional Club. Mrs. Edouard Victor Izac, wife of Representative Izac, of California, was hostess to a large group in honor of her mother, Mrs. DeRosey C. Cabell. Mrs. Dave D. Terry, wife of Representative Terry, of Arkansas, and Mrs. Charles Edwin Fairman, wife of the Art Curator of the Capitol, entertained jointly at a party.

Miniature violet corsages graced the guest's plates at Mrs. Izac's luncheon. The guest of honor, Mrs. Cabell, came East from San Diego to attend the wedding, last November, of her granddaughter, Mrs. Robert M. Waller, the former Miss Happy Izac. She will leave next month for her home in California and en route will visit her son, Col. DeRosey Cabell, who is stationed in Indiana.

Clusters of silver grapes, tied with orchid and green ribbons, centered the table and silver compotes held mints of the same colors. A happy innovation at each place was an artistic scroll containing a questionnaire, relating to spring flowers, to be answered by the guests. Guests included Mrs. Clarence Lea, Mrs. Harry L. Englebright, Mrs. Richard J. Welch, Mrs. James M. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Clyde Williams, Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, Mrs. Frank H. Buck, Mrs. Charles Kramer, Mrs. John H. Tolan, Mrs. H. Lewis and Mrs. Robert Waller, daughter of the hostess.

Spring flowers were used to decorate the table where Mrs. Terry and Mrs. Fairman entertained. Guests included Mrs. Guy Gillette, Mrs. M. C. Walgren, Mrs. Charles A. Plumley, Mrs. Frank Kennedy, Mrs. Eugene N. Reybold, Mrs. Martin Smith, Mrs. John Kee, Mrs. Ross Collins, Mrs. W. R. Norrell, Mrs. Pete Hudgins, Mrs. Richard Duncan, Mrs. Anthony Dimond, Mrs. Samuel W. Virginia Smith To Be Married

Miss Virginia Frayser Smith, who will be married February 26 to Wesley V. Disney, son of Representative and Mrs. Wesley Ernest Disney, of Tulsa, Okla., has selected the attendants for their wedding. Miss Fannie Cooper, of North Carolina, who was a roommate of Miss Smith at National Park College, will be maid of honor. Other attendants will be the Misses Marie Lackey, Lillian Leslie, Mary Burman and Margaret Bartley. Ralph W. Disney will be his brother's best man.

The wedding will take place in the Foundry Methodist Church here. Miss Smith is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dorrance Yerkes Smith, of Plainfield, N. J.

Sulgrave Club Plans to Admit New Members

Now that the Sulgrave Club has had its "face lifted"—to the extent of installing a gay Mexican bar—and has taken a new lease on life new members are being admitted. A board meeting will be held today to discuss adding to the list of 360 members.

Another plan being discussed is a garden, for dining and tea, which has been suggested for "Sulgrave Point"—a bit of land adjoining the club which happens at the moment, to belong to the Government. About a month ago a new system, of junior associate members—at present comprised of about 25 young men—was installed.

On March 20 there will be a dinner for members and guests at the club when Compte d'Noue, a Frenchman, will tell of his experiences at Dunkirk.

Travel Movies Shown at Party

Among those who entertained at the Washington Club dinner last evening were Mr. and Mrs. Adrien Busick, Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Bunker, Mrs. Charles Hendley, Maj. and Mrs. Edward Keys, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williamson Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Camden R. McAtee, Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Sappington, and Mrs. William Theophilus.

Following the dinner Mrs. Gregg Birdsall and Dr. and Mrs. Sappington showed colored motion pictures, "Summer Travels." The films include scenes in the Canadian Rockies and a number of United States national parks.

Mrs. Beale Honor Guest Of Greek Envoy

In honor of Mrs. Truxtun Beale, who heads the Washington chapter of the Greek War Relief Association, the Minister of Greece and Mme. Diamantopolous were hosts at tea yesterday. Various members of the committee, several from the Greek colony, were among those present.

The hostess, who received her guests in the upstairs drawing-room of the legation, wore a long black dress with pink satin trimming at the neck and waist. Mrs. Beale was in a gray suit and gray felt hat to match trimmed with tiny bows of ribbon.

The minister will organize a large dinner to be held March 25, anniversary of his country's independence. The party will be a subscription affair, with the proceeds going to help Greece in its gallant struggle against Italy.

Gladioli, in a shade of deep pink, centered the tea table yesterday. The same flowers were placed in tall vases in the drawing room. Over the table where drinks were served was a white cloth with a border of the embroidery for which Greek weavers are famous.

Mme. Depasta, wife of the Counselor of the Greek Legation, assisted the hostess. She wore a black crepe dress and a small black hat trimmed with blue flowers.

Among those who called during the afternoon were Mrs. Randall Hagner, in black with a red trimmed hat; George Vournas, who has been so active in raising funds for the Greek cause; Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, who was dressed in a red ensemble; Miss Carolyn Nash, in black with a white flower hat; Dr. C. G. Abbot of the Smithsonian Institution, and Mrs. McCeney Werlich, who topped off her dark green frock with a silverfox cape.

Prewedding Dance Tonight

Something different in the way of pre-wedding parties—a dance the night before, instead of an intimate rehearsal dinner—will be given tonight by Mrs. Joseph Leiter. Guests of honor will be her daughter, Miss Nancy Leiter, and her fiance, Thomas Clagett, who will be married tomorrow at noon.

A hundred guests have been invited to the dinner, and an additional 150 asked in afterwards for dancing. The party will take place at the Sulgrave Club and Meyer Davis will play.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Leiter and her fiance were honor guests at a cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Lyle O'Rourke. The affair was held in a private room at the Carlton near the cocktail lounge, where some of the guests later adjourned for dancing.

Among those invited were Mrs. Leiter, Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. James F. Mitchell, the Misses Elaine Darlington and Louise Stillwell, and Countess de Baillet Latour. About 100 attended.

George, Mrs. Peter G. Gerry, Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Alben Barkley, and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

EVERY OTHER person is moved to take pen in hand these days on some controversial question. Mrs. Rushmore Patterson, of Washington, sat down at her desk one day and wrote a long letter to Anne Lindbergh, disagreeing with her about that wave of the future. A publisher friend happened in, and she showed him the letter. He insisted that it was so good that instead of mailing it, she should let him publish it. Now the epistle has appeared in book form.

HERE AND THERE: "I took my daugter to Peru as a gesture toward the good-neighbor policy," laughs John Winant, "but I think she rather overdid it." Mr. Winant is spending some time in Washington before going to England as Ambassador.

The Greek Minister does all his correspondence with his government by wire, for it takes five weeks for an airmail letter to get through. The trip from Athens to Washington now requires five months, as travelers must come via South Africa . . . The Polish Ambassador, Jan Ciechanowski, brought two of his children here, but left his 19-year-old son in London, in the Polish army.

Largest dinner before the gala opening of the National Gallery March 17 will be given by Mr. and Mrs. David Finley at the Sulgrave Club. Mr. Finley is director of the gallery . . . Chinese Ambassador Dr. Hu-Shih will fete Gen. William Crozier and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck at a joint birthday party on Wednesday. The envoy once studied under Dr. Hornbeck at the University of Hangchow . . . The embassy will be the scene of a picturesque ceremony April 12 when the daughter of a rich Chinese-American merchant, K. C. Li, is married there. The Ambassador will officiate, reading the service first in Chinese and then in English.

MRS. Francis Biddle has asked members of the Washington Civic Theater in next Thursday to hear the reading of a new play by Clinch Calkins. One night this winter she read it aloud to her husband, the Solicitor General. Although it was late when they finished, he tried to telephone the author but couldn't reach her. When she called him back, Mr. Biddle said:

"Your play is very exciting, but you've made a boner." Since the play concerns a coup d'etat at a dinner party and has a nice constitutional point in it, the author asked apprehensively, "What is it?" "Just," replied Mr. Biddle, "that no member of the Philadelphia Club would ever call a man a —— in the presence of his sister."

DOLLAR-A-YEAR men are balling up the Treasury accounts by refusing to cash their checks, but framing them for the office walls . . . The Minister-Counselor of The Netherlands Legation and Baroness von Boetzelaer have bought a house in the Foxhall Road section and hope to move in early in the spring, after George Howe has done some remodeling for them. The Dutch Legation staff is working an average of 12 hours a day this winter, and has increased from less than a dozen members to 35. The Minister and Mme. Loudon are planning a trip to California in March . . . Louise Stillwell and Randall Hagner intend to make their wedding a small one. It will be held March 14 at the Argentine Embassy, with a reception afterward . . . Though he failed in his try for the Senate, James Cromwell is evidently not going to retire from the public scene. Reports say he hopes to go to England to study conditions in Great Britain preparatory to making a lecture tour of the United States on his return.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The United States Minister to Hungary, Herbert C. Pell, is in in Newport where he will be the weekend guest of Mrs. James Laurens Van Alen. He will speak at the Art Association on Sunday afternoon.

The Costa Rican Minister and Senora de Fernandez will be honor guests at the celebration of Mardi Gras at National Park College in Forest Glen, Md., this weekend.

The First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Pardo have issued invitations for a cocktail party on Tuesday afternoon from 5:30 until 7:30 o'clock in their apartment at 2029 Connecticut Avenue.

Mrs. Truxtun Beale will entertain with one of a series of teas at her home, Decatur House, on Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock for the committee members working on the bazaar, Piccadilly Arcade, to be held April 3, 4 and 5 for British relief.

Mrs. Lionel Atwill entertained at a dinner last night for the younger set. Her guest of honor was Miss Peggy Lansdowne, daughter of Mrs. John Caswell.

Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse are at the Hotel Biltmore in New York City for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Hawley and their daughters the Misses Eleanor and Antoinette Hawley are spending a month at the Cloister at Sea Island, Ga. Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Myers, also of this city, are spending some time at the island resort.

Guests Gather For Dinner At Abell's

Entertaining at the third in a series of buffet dinners, George Abell last evening gathered in a congenial group of guests at his apartment at 1606 Twentieth Street. Several more came in later from other dinners and the party continued until long after midnight.

The Canadian Charge d'Affaires and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney were in the company, as were a number of others from the Diplomatic Corps, including the Netherlands Commercial Counselor and Mme. Kleijn Molekamp, and Dr. and Mme. H. R. van Houten, and Dr. and Mme. H. N. Boon, also of the Netherlands Legation, and the Swedish Military Attache, Capt. Karl Wessel, and Mme. Wessel.

Representative William D. Byron was there without his wife—she having gone South, where he will join her in a few days. Mrs. William E. Borah was among those present, as were Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Miss Carolyn Nash, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Walmsley, and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt. Mr. McNutt, having a speaking engagement earlier, joined the party after dinner.

Still others there were Mr. and Mrs. George Boncesco, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, Countess Palffy, Miss Evelyn Gordon, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Rafal Lepkowski, Col. William E. Shipp, Col. Lowell Riley, and J. J. Van Schreven, of New York. Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Gen. Allen Gullion and George Williams were among those coming in later from other parties.

Jean Catton, who has been singing at a local night club, entertained the company after dinner. Mr. Abell will leave some time next month for a brief trip to California.

Parties Follow Miss Thompson's Town Hall Talk

A number of parties followed the Town Hall meeting last night at which Miss Dorothy Thompson was the speaker. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer gathered in around a hundred diplomats and topflight officials who had attended the lecture. The party, a buffet supper, was in honor of Miss Thompson.

Dr. and Mrs. Frank Bohn entertained at a small fete after the lecture, having among their guests the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun, the South African Minister and Mrs. Ralph William Close, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom and a few others.

Still others who attended the lecture dropped in at George Abell's party afterward, among them Mrs. McCeney Werlich and George Williams.

(From the Truthtown Torch.)

Many of Truthtown's most noted notables have been on the sick list this week. Mrs. Featherton Daubler is at the Bide Awee Sanitarium as a result of a nervous breakdown. Mrs. Daubler developed a split personality as a result of trying to decide whether to go to Palm Beach to swim or to Sun Valley to ski.

Mrs. Leonidas Pelf suffered an attack of the flu but has recovered sufficiently to leave in her private car for her palatial villa in Florida next week. "It serves me right for staying so long in this severe climate," said Mrs. Pelf yesterday.

Ebenezer Van Rant, millionaire manufacturer of lamb chop panties, is confined to his home with a severe attack of dermatitus brought on by indignation attendant upon making out his income tax.

The Social Lingo

A unique course entitled "How to Stay Off Subjects" is to be conducted by Mrs. Rutherford M. M. M. Muscatel each morning in the Cupist nook of the Hotel Swank. (Mr. Muscatel, widely known kite manufacturer, recently filed a petition in bankruptcy.)

Mrs. Muscatel's course includes lectures on: "How to Make 'Doggy' Comments on Boxers, Retrievers, Poodles, Wolfhounds, etc.;" "Horseshow, Hunt and Racing Terms, Including Genealogical Data on Equine Uppercrusters;" "Motor Chit-Chat With Special Reference to Lincolns, Packards, Rolls-Royces, etc.;" "Regatta and Polo Conversation, Including Comments on Spectator Clothes;" "Alphabet of Famous Dress Designers;" "Appreciation of Jewels and Furs;" Modernistic Art Comments;" "Symphony Concert Comment;" "The Broad 'A' in Conversation;" "Sound and Safe Opinions on War and Politics."

Doing Their Bit . . . .

"I simply can't make up my mind whether or not to buy that beige costume suit with the bleached fox."

"It does a lot for you."

"Still, that's a lot of money—and with everything so uncertain . . ."

"Yes; that's why I can't decide about that blue redingote with the hand-blocked print."

"Well, of course, they keep saying everybody's going to have to sacrifice . . ."

I know, and I think they're right. It's high time a lot of people did sacrifice!"

"Exactly! A lot of people don't know what sacrifice is."

"Well, I know I couldn't sacrifice any more than I already do."

"Me either. And you really do have to have clothes to cover you."

"Of course. But what I mean is there are really a lot of people who are going to have to give up things."

"Yes, people who have things of —who really have things."

"That's it . . . Say, you know . . . if I did get that redingote outfit, it would be wonderful if we took that trip this summer."

"Yes, and that beige suit would be simply marvelous if we go on that cruise on vacation."

Suits Follow the Plaid Vogue

Women are still stealing men's thunder in dress. Now it is their plaids. This suit in brown and blue "Lewispun" plaid incorporates all the "musts" for suits this spring. The plaid looks just like that in men's sports coats. Many times when women buy suits, they order enough material to have coats made for their husbands just like their own. If an entire ensemble fits a woman's budget, there are matching box topcoats to go with the suit

Count Calories To Reduce

POOR MRS. STOUT! Nobody guesses she's actually younger than her sister, Mrs. Slim, who's in on all the fun of the youthful crowd. To them ponderous, slow-moving Mrs. Stout seems much too old for peppy good times!

But on a low-calory diet Mrs. Stout could quickly regain her youthful vim, and girlish grace.

She got into the matronly class because she didn't know that calories make a difference. She cheerfully combined a cup of beef hash (400 calories), ½ cup creamed asparagus tips (268), and a slice of fruitcake (250), all in one lunch—a total of 918 calories!

But on a very similar luncheon she could easily begin her reducing campaign. A slice of beef loaf (100), asparagus tips in aspic with reducer's dressing (50), and sponge cake (100), add up to a mere 250 calories. And who wouldn't enjoy it!

To reduce, all you need to do is to cut your daily intake of calories down to 1,200 for a while, or fewer than you need. Then your system burns up its store of fat you lose at the rate of 10 pounds in five weeks.

Even at parties, when others are enjoying tasty snacks, you don't have to be a martyr. But instead of taking high-calory tidbits like peanuts (221 calories, 1-3 cup), chocolate fudge (100 a piece), you choose such low-calory treats as little stuffed olives (only 4 calories each), marshmallows (20 each).

Be young and slim! Our 40-page booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake," gives 42 low-calory menus for reducing —all tasty and healthful. Has calory chart, recipes for low-calory desserts. Includes three-day liquid diet to start reducing; tells how to gain, too.

Send 15 cents in coins for booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Diets of Old Make Us Glad To Live in '41

By Ida Jean Kain

IN THE FINAL analysis, the survival of the fittest depends on the food supply and the story of "The American and His Diet," by Richard Osborn Cummings, assistant professor of history at Lawrence College, drives home the realization that one of the main concerns of the general public during any crisis is the maintenance of an adequate diet.

We are glad we know what adequate nutrition is. That knowledge should, in itself, be the guaranty of a better chance.

Horace Greeley's editorials during the depression of 1837 centered on the huge percentages of malnourished children afflicted with terrible skin diseases. He constantly warned young men to stay away from the cities where so many died of diseases induced by want and hunger.

Ignorance went hand-in-glove with want, however, and fresh fruits were regarded as dangerous, especially to young children. During the cholera epidemic of 1832 their sale was prohibited by city councils. Since it was also doubted whether uncooked vegetables could be eaten with impunity salads were generally supposed to be harmful.

Mainstay Was Bread

Among the impoverished of the cities, the dietary mainstay was bread. In some of the rural districts, pork was considered "the staff of life." In most sections, fats and starches comprised the main ingredients for the three meals a day. The only good things about the diet were the use of sorghum or unrefined sugar for sweetening and the fact that the millers had not succeeded in eliminating the wheat germ from flour.

Even the wealthy, who could have afforded a variety of foods, could not obtain them because of the lack of refrigeration, slowness of transportation and the imperfection of canning methods! To obtain strictly fresh milk, it was necessary to dispatch a messenger to the country for it.

To overcome the difficulties of transportation, some of the dairymen supplying large cities housed their cows within the city limits in dark sheds and fed them on the mash from distilleries. They did not hesitate to water their product to make it go further. To make it more appetizing, this milk was sometimes reinforced with chalk and plaster of paris.

Ill Health Rampant

Visitors to this country were impressed by the pasty-faced, stiff-jointed, soft-muscled appearance of the Americans. And also by the monotonous round of badly cooked meals. Ill health was rampant in the cities, Cummings observes, and dyspepsia was the most common ailment.

It was during the Civil War that canned milk came into use—first for the soldiers, then for the public. At the same time, the American was benefiting from improved methods of canning vegetables, from the faster transportation. By the gay '90's he had a more alert and erect bearing.

With the discovery of vitamins in 1911 a new era in nutrition began. During the First World War, families were urged to plant gardens. Later on, there were the 4-H Clubs to further disseminate the new knowledge of nutrition. Auxiliary food substances and frozen foods made their advent on the market along with the depression of 1929. In this emergency, agencies were formed for the purpose of supplying food to the poor families and, finally, food stamps came into use.

The story of food is necessarily one of economic ups and downs. But although the author leaves us wondering "What next?" he also leaves us feeling that we are better equipped to handle our problems than our forebears were.

New Face Powder Blended to Suit Individuals

Your face powder is the bloom on your beauty—that is, if it's not the very veil that hides it. Too many women make the mistake of buying a box of face powder as carelessly as they would purchase a cake of soap. The fundamental truth is that no two women have exactly the same skin tone, therefore no two women should use precisely the same shade of powder.

Facing this fact, one famous cosmetic firm refuses to sell a box of face powder that isn't individually blended by one of their experts. From now through March 1 a special representative, Miss Inez Hester, is in town at one of the local stores to blend your face powder and to analyze your skin tones. The powder is on special sale for half price along with their fine make-up cream, "Revenescence Cream."

This "Revenescence" cream, which for a few days is below half price (this only comes once a year), gives a dewy, fresh and moist look to the skin and imparts a porcelain-like appearance. The qualities of the cream are many; besides protecting your make-up against changes in temperature, it conceals fatigue lines, large pores and slight imperfections

Mary Haworth's Mail

Deeply Worried by 'Cold and Heartless' Conduct Of His Sweetheart, Who Has Cast Him Aside in Favor Of His 'Best Friend,' Young Man Asks What to Do

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two years ago I met a girl whom I liked immediately. Thereafter we were together almost constantly until finally we found ourselves in love. She responded to my love with the greatest affection and we planned a future together. I am in a position to marry in another year; and also, have an excellent future ahead, if I take advantage of my opportunities.

However, once last summer she started ignoring me and dating another young man. This lasted for about a month. Then I received a letter from her, in which she said she wanted to see me as soon as possible. Since that time, we have been going together steadily again,—seeing each other every possible moment.

A couple of months ago, we started having "double dates" with a very good friend of mine. We took him with us almost every where we went,—first on double dates, and recently without his dating anyone. The three of us enjoyed each other's society and we took frequent all-day trips together. He understood how I felt about the girl, and how she felt about me. We were the best of friends and he talked about us (the girl and me) constantly when we were together.

Two weeks ago, I fuond it necessary to go to a business dinner and I made arrangements with him to take my girl out for the evening, so she wouldn't be alone. The next night she told me we would have to stop going together steadily, as she wanted to date other young men. Also, she said that, "for another reason," I was "losing respect for her!" This, I learned later, was simply a "blind."

She finally told me, after having two dates with this other young man, that she was in love with him and he with her. Her actions toward me have been cold and heartless,—quite different from her usual manner, but similar to her behavior of last summer. Since I have based my future plans on the assumption that we would be always together, I am deeply worried. I love her as much as any man could love a woman, and she knows how I feel about her.

My work has been lagging since this misunderstanding, and I find myself thinking of her every time I stop for a moment in my work. I cannot sleep at night from worry, and she is on my mind constantly. Please advise me what to do, as I feel my whole future is at stake. WORRIED.

Get Out and About With Other Girls

DEAR WORRIED: Your quasi-fiancee is much more of a cold blooded opportunist than she is a warm hearted friend or starry-eyed sentimentalist. She makes the most of what she can get at the present moment,—while ever on the alert for something better to come along. She cannot be trusted out of your sight, nor even under your nose, for that matter,—as witness the fact that she had already subtly coquetted with your "best friend," while in your company, to such an extent that he talked of her constantly to you, and jumped at the chance to "take her off your hands," as the saying goes. She isn't in love with you. What you have come to mean to her is "a sure thing" —to be picked up or discarded, as suits her whim or convenience or changing fortune in the game of hearts.

Since she is devoid of dependable fidelity, principle and kindliness,—at least, in her dealings with you,—it is useless for you to try to build a stable future for yourself on the basis of any kind of contract with her. She doesn't care whether or not you are happy; and such interest as she may have (from time to time) in your material progress is purely a reflection of self concern. If you do well, and she finds she can't snare a more desirable husband, after much careful angling, —she may go through a ceremony that will grant you the dubious privilege of supporting her, while she continues to look over your shoulder for a fancier bargain.

What you should do, of course, is look facts in the face and accept your dismissal in a spirit of thankfulness,—that she has given you to understand, by her "cold and heartless" actions (1) how fickle and essentially unfeeling she is; and (2) what a tragic mistake you would have made in marrying her: thereby letting yourself in for an untold amount of humiliation, uncertainty, inevitable jealous suspicion, and other distress of mind that would have played havoc with your professional competence.

Instead of lying awake nights, brooding yourself sick over her recurrent feline treachery, you should be out and about, without further ado, cultivating the friendship of other young women, with the objective in mind of finding a girl whose words and actions can be trusted: a girl who is really worthy of an honest man's whole hearted, life long devotion; a girl who is actually as "tender and true" as this shallow creature sometimes pretends to be.

If you were to snap out of your doldrums and start "going places, seeing people and doing things" in the company of another girl—as though fully determined to conquer your disappointment by finding a new and permanent and worthier heart-interest,—you may be sure your erstwhile sweetheart would soon be soliciting your devotion again. Yet, if and when that reaction sets in, I trust you will have the foresight and strength to tell her you have learned your lesson, regarding her; that you are all washed up with being pushed around; and that each of you will just have to worry along without the other, from here on out. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Women 'Choosey' About Their Styles, Says Designer

Hollywood, Calif.—Where fashions are concerned, today's lady fair has a mind of her own, declares Orry-Kelly, designer for Warner Brothers. She will not be dictated to about a style she thinks unbecoming, nor give up one that is flattering, no matter how often designers may attempt to discard it.

She is, for example, hanging on to bouffant and flared skirts, lingerie trim, boleros, turbans, snoods, the page-boy bob and squared shoulders, although she'll accept the newer sloping ones.

The ballerina skirt she refused to accept, had an unshakable opinion about the awkwardness of platform soles, put the wasp-waisted corset right back on the shelf, and immediately turned thumbs down on the exaggerated hobble skirt and bustle.

Well, It's A Queer World

Mail still comes to the Capital occasionally for President Abraham Lincoln. On his birthday, a greeting card arrived from Boston addressed to him at the Lincoln Memorial and signed "The Gang at Cole's."

National park officials said that just before Christmas there was a letter from a woman who said she was a "witer (widow) lady," with 6 children and needed money.

Oh, Well, Blame It On the Heat

Firemen tensed for action as the engines roared to an alarm in the 500 block Fourteenth Street Northwest. The blaze was located in a barber shop, where dust on the steam pipe had ignited.

The flames were quickly doused, and firemen relaxed and started back to the trucks. "That," punned one, "was a close shave."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

U. S. Department To Try 5-Day Week

Much has been said about a 5-day week for Federal employes but no one seems to be doing anything about it. That's why the results of a plan to be tried by the Soil Conservation Service will be enlightening and interesting. The service has a cartographic section with 150 employes. Tons of heavy equipment are used to make Soil Conservation maps. Considerable time is spent each day in setting up and dismantling the equipment. Half of the employes have been moved to new offices at Beltsville and the remainder will be shifted to the Maryland town within a few weeks. Beltsville is quite a distance from the homes of most employes.

On March 1 the cartographic employes at Beltsville will be put on a 5-day, 40-hour week instead of the 5½-day, 39-hour week. Agriculture has approached the entire problem sensibly. Records have been kept of the production output and cost of the longer workweek. Similar files will be kept when employes work the 5-day week. And officials are confident the 5-day week will save money for Uncle Sam and that employes will turn out more work. TVA, for example, lowered its costs by placing its employes on a 5-day week.

William Batt, OPM's deputy director of production, was telling Gano Dunn, defense engineering expert, that he was going to speak before the Society of Comptrollers.

"Say Bill," remarked Dunn, "maybe you can help me out in my fight; for the past 20 years I've been trying to knock the "p" out of comptroller."

Dunn went on to explain that comptroller was a corruption of the word controller.

President Roosevelt has signed an executive order that exempts from Civil Service the jobs of professional, technical or scientific specialists at Food and Drug who work less than 60 days annually . . . IDRA Players will stage "The Late Christopher Bean" tonight in Agriculture auditorium. H. E. Weatherwax directs and the cast includes Ralph Segar, Velma Lu Carter, Gwenne Daniels, Joy Patterson, Grace Ware, Marion DeSallar, Fred Harbour, Joe Bly and James Kieley. Steve Pierpont designed the set.

Uncle Sam urgently needs engineers in defense jobs. The need is so great that engineers who are being graduated from college this spring and others who applied for the junior engineer option of the Junior Professional Assistant examination won't be given assembled mental tests. They'll merely be graded on education and experience.

Census Bureau is making a search of the birth records of thousands of persons who are appointed to defense jobs . . . Herbert Emmerich refused to accept the key position as executive secretary of OPM until he had been personally asked to take it by each of the "big four," Knudsen, Hillman, Knox and Stimson . . . One of Emmerich's first jobs will be to draw up an organization chart of OPM and the other defense agencies. A plan is still being studied, revealed here recently, that would shake-up the entire defense agency and some of its dollar-a-year men. Latest report is that the plan will go into effect after Congress disposes of the lend-lease bill.

Mellon Art Gallery will open its doors the middle of next month. It will have nearly 250 employes, all of which are being filled from Civil Service registers except the five key positions . . . Postmaster General Frank Walker has urged all his employes to be courteous to the public in the interest of defense and national unity. And his theory is sound. He explains that the only contact most persons have with the Government is through Postoffice employes and that the Government will be judged in many cases by impressions made by the employes.

"Nonscensus of 1941," a satire on life in the Census Bureau, will give a repeat performance Tuesday night in Pierce Hall. It is directed by Irv Friedman, Herman Dolgon and Morton Nash . . . Federal Playhouse will give a performance Thursday night in Agriculture auditorium. Lee Shugar, George Heisley and Lloyd Garrison direct.

Dedicate Selves to Democracy, Parents, Children Told at Rally

Educators and American Legion officials last night urged more than 300 children and their parents to a greater realization of 1941 democracy through remembrance of the careers of Washington and Lincoln, whose birthdays the meeting commemorated.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, reminded the audience at Roosevelt High School of the large sums of District funds spent annually for educational purposes and declared in the seventh annual patriotic observances of Fort Stevens Post, No. 32, American Legion:

"Let us not just accept it (the school fund) but attach greater importance to this and like modern advantages by a realization of the early struggles of the United States."

The education official said that many persons considered it "smart to belittle Washington and Lincoln" and other American heroes "but how many of us could commence to accomplish their deeds?" she demanded.

"Rededicate Selves"

"Let us hope war does not come but let us meet whatever comes bravely . . . by rededicating ourselves to democracy," she concluded.

Col. Lemuel Bolles, past national adjutant of the American Legion, also took the floor to urge the audience to drive forward toward democratic ideals just as a military commander urges his troops toward an objective.

"Each of us has a mission in life just as a military commander has a mission," he declared, urging the youths in the audience to remember that three centuries of American life has "left us something definite, something concrete" to strive for.

Other speakers on the program included Miss May P. Bradshaw, principal of Roosevelt High School; R. T. Haugh, president of the Macfarland Parent-Teacher Association; J. A. Walker, chairman of the meeting, and Joseph A. Ashi, commander of the Fort Stevens Post.

Six Get Certificates

In the course of the program six students received certificates presented by the Legion unit attesting their leadership in their various schools. They were: Miss Helen V. Early and John E. Penn, of Paul Junior High School; Miss Ramona Randall and Robert Kasnett, of Macfarland Junior High School, and Miss Ann Myers and Richard Wainwright of Roosevelt High School.

The program was featured by ceremonies of the color guards of the Fort Stevens Post No. 32 and Fort Stevens Squadron No. 32 and a flag drill by the Sons of the American Legion.

Negro Lawyers Oppose D.C. Bar Aides as Judges

Five members of a vigilance committee of the Washington Bar Association, composed of colored attorneys, were appointed last night by Henry Lincoln Johnson, president, to oppose the appointment of any member of the District of Columbia Bar Association for membership on the bench.

This action grew out of the denial of the use of the District Bar Association library to colored lawyers, which resulted in action by Attorney General Jackson, directing the association to remove its library from the District Court building.

A resolution, adopted by the association, stated:

"Whereas, it is a fact that all of the United States District courts have libraries furnished to and used by members of the bar without regard to color or race throughout the Nation, except here in the District of Columbia, and

"Whereas, those members of the District of Columbia Bar Association who opposed and denied the use of the 'lily-white' library now in the District Court Building to colored attorneys showed by their narrowness, prejudice and hatred that they are utterly unfit to fill any position of honor and trust, judicial or otherwise.

"Therefore, be it resolved: That the president of the Washington Bar Association appoint a vigilance committee of five whose duty it shall be to diligently watch for the names of any of these malicious and un-American attorneys when and if they are considered for or appointed to any position in the Government, and that this committee appear before the Senatorial committee or any other agency of the Government and there oppose to the very last the confirmation of such attorney, after protesting to the Attorney General and the President of the United States."

Named on the committee were James A. Cobb, Perry W. Howard, James G. Tyson, George A. Parker and Thurman Dodson. The resolution was offered by Howard and adopted after extended debate.

Another resolution, offered by Parker, was adopted as follows:

"Whereas, the District Bar Association, by its constitution, refuses to admit colored members of the bar of the District of Columbia to its membership, and

"Whereas, only members of that association are selected by judges of the United States District Court for membership upon all committees appointed by the court, especially the committee on admissions and grievances for the United States District Court of the District of Columbia, thus officially recognizing and giving official status to the said District of Columbia Bar Association,

"Therefore, be it resolved, That the colored members of the District of Columbia bar vigorously protest the selection or maintenance of members of said District of Columbia Bar Association for membership on any committee having any official status or connection with the court, or appointment of any person having membership therein to any judicial or quasi-judicial office in the District of Columbia, and, further."

'Direct Action' Urged to Obtain D. C. Suffrage

"The drama of direct action" was suggested as one possible way in which apathetic citizens in Washington could be aroused to seek the vote more energetically, by Dr. Krishnalal Shridharani, disciple of Gandhi and worker for social justice in India, in an address here last night.

The question on how to arouse Washingtonians was put to him by Roger S. Lorenz at the end of his speech on "Non-Violent Action" at the Friends' Meeting, 2111 Florida Avenue Northwest.

Although he said he was not familiar enough with local conditions to advocate any specific techniques here, he gave as examples of "direct action" in the past—ways in which "votes for women" advocates dramatized their cause years ago, and in which "prohibitionist women" had sometimes invaded saloons and broken bottles in their campaign.

He stressed the idea that citizens must work out their own techniques for the suffrage campaign here, that he could not give them a ready-made answer.

"By propaganda, publicity, and better still by education," he emphasized in his answer on methods for arousing active support for the vote here.

His address was devoted largely to describing the nonviolence movement which has grown in India in opposition to Britain's rule. In the present war situation, he said, Ghandi has not let the people embark on a mass program of civil disobedience because "he believes that now, while Great Britain is fighting with her back to the wall, we shouldn't stab her in the back."

Town Hall to Hear Dr. Phelps Today On 'Art of Living'

Dr. William Lyon Phelps, writer, educator and literary critic, will discuss "The Art of Living," at Washington's Town Hall today at 11 a. m., in the Shoreham Hotel.

Dr. Phelps is a beloved figure in the world of letters. As a "revolutionary" at Yale, Prof. Phelps startled American educators in 1895 by organizing an undergraduate class to study the modern novel.

Spellbring Death Called Accidental

Dr. A Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, determined last night that the death of Mrs. Edna M. Spellbring, 38, of 4600 Forty-fifth Street Northwest, was due to an accidental fall in her home.

Mrs. Spellbring, wife of a navy yard electrician, died Wednesday night of a brain hemorrhage five hours after she had been brought to Georgetown Hospital. Dr. MacDonald performed an autopsy yesterday.

29th Ensconced in Ft. Meade; 'Wizard of Ooze' Gets Credit

By Marshall Andrews

Post Staff Correspondent.

Fort George G. Meade, Feb. 20.—Less only one regiment of Infantry, the Twenty-ninth Division was concentrated here today in its half-finished camp, ready for a year of hard work dedicated to making itself a powerful fighting force.

Tonight 8,000 officers and men who three weeks ago were businessmen and lawyers, clerks and mechanics, professors and farmer boys, lay in the long wooden city that stretches along a low ridge east of the Regular Army post at Meade. Most of them arrived here in the last two days, to find their homes for a year still under construction, partially heated and buried in a wide sea of frozen mud.

There has been no grumbling at anything but the slowness of "those guys that got $75 a week to build this camp for dollar-a-day-men." In mud, rain, snow and searching wind, officers and men alike have gone ahead to make the most of what they found here. It was not too bad for the 111th Field Artillery band, a few hours after its arrival from Norfolk, to give a concert in its barracks last night.

The camp that last Monday was only a deeper black in the darkness at night now blazes with lights along its 5-mile length. From the south and to the north, all areas are occupied except one, and division headquarters sits over it on Division Hill, like the brightest stone of all in a necklace of bright diamonds.

With arrival today of the 115th Infantry, the division will be concentrated, a feat that seemed impossible two weeks ago. The job has been done largely through the energy and determination of Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, division commander, the "Wizard of Ooze," who made this ghost city in the mud into a thriving community of 9,000 souls in time to start his training program next Monday as scheduled.

In the 115th Infantry arriving tomorrow will be regimental headquarters and Company A from Frederick, Md., Company B from Hagerstown, Company F from Hyattsville, Company G from Cumberland, and Company M from Annapolis. The Service Company already has arrived and has made the regimental camp ready for use.

Saturday will be a full holiday, except for maintenance details and camp guards. Many of the men have expressed their intention of returning home for the weekend or of visiting Washington and Baltimore.

Draft to Take 2,100 Here In 3 Months

Quota Set for April May and June; 1,250 Will Go Next Month

After inducting 1,250 Washingtonians in March Selective Service will call an average of only 700 monthly from the District in April, May and June, Washington draft headquarters reported yesterday.

After the March contingent has gone into uniform, a total of 2,100 trainees will approximately fill out the District's quota of 3,982 for the first fiscal year of conscription ending June 30, it was estimated.

Well under the March figure, the 700 monthly average in the last three months of the 1940-41 draft would indicate the peak of selective service for this year has been passed.

This number, however, is far larger than any swearing-in announced to date, excepting the March call. In February only 353 selects were summoned to service.

Officials pointed out the 2,100 three-month total may be revised slightly upward or downward. Hence the monthly calls finally set may vary somewhat from the 700 figure.

That officials think it possible to level off inductions from the peak next month indicates chances are now brighter of bringing conscription, on a nation scale long delayed housing shortages, up to schedule by June.

The 3,982 over-all Washington call represents the Capital's share of the 800,000 citizen soldiers the Army had called for by June 30. Selectees numbering 598 from the District are now in service.

Boys Club Fund Report Today

Campaign leaders of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club will hold their second luncheon report meeting at 12:30 p. m. today in the National Press Club auditorium. Spokesmen declared yesterday they were confident that several thousand dollars of subscriptions would be added to the present total of $18,726.55.

Among those scheduled to speak at today's meeting are Fulton Lewis, jr., radio commentator, who will be keynote speaker and Charles B. Dulcan, sr., the campaign manager. Other speakers will include Morris Cafritz, the club president; L. Gordon Leech, campaign director, and Fred A. Smith, advance gifts chairman.

Capital News in Brief

Two Men Hold Up Grocery, Get $65

Two colored men who entered the Nation-Wide Grocery, 1901 Fourth Street Northwest, last night to ask for "lunch meat," left the store with about $65 belonging to the proprietor, Hyman Rosenbloom, and his wife, Rebecca.

Rosenbloom reported to police that the first man, who had asked for the meat, was joined immediately by another colored man who declared "don't make a move or we'll plug you." The money was taken from the register and Rosenbloom's pocket.

Put On Rare Show Jupiter and Saturn

Third performance of a rare celestial show appeared here last night, low in the western sky, where Jupiter and Saturn passed in conjunction for the third time in six months. Thus Jupiter could be seen directly above the ringed-planet.

It seems that the two planets cross, one above the other, about once in every 20 years. But every now and then, astronomically speaking, the planets get into conjunction three times within a six-months period. The last time the triple performance occurred was in 1682.

Take It and Like It, Cold's to Continue

Hope you folks like the weather we've had this week, because the clear skies and sub-freezing temperatures are due to continue for two more days, according to the weatherman. The mercury yesterday ranged from a low of 21 at 6 a. m. to a high of 34 at 3 p. m.

Pranksters Sought After 3 False Alarms

In rapid succession about 10 o'clock last night fire apparatus rushed to Seventh Street and Florida Avenue Northwest, North Capitol and P Streets, North Capitol and I Streets, but there was no fire to be found.

Nor could firemen or police find three children who were seen to pull the false alarms.

Little Congress Hails Its First Draftee

Capitol Hill bade farewell last night to its first draftee, James F. Swist, speaker of the Little Congress, an organization of Congressional secretaries and other employes on the hill.

Swist, guest of honor at a dinner, was presented with a wristwatch by Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, on behalf of the other guests, who included Congressmen, members of the Little Congress and various officials. Swist, a member of the Capitol police force and a law student, is from Buffalo, N. Y.

Businessmen Go To Dinner, Hear Advice

SEE OUR LARGE AD on Page 11 for the LOWEST PRICES (we believe) in WASHINGTON this week-end on Wines and Liquors.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 20.—If you knew the name of the fellow who will eventually get the job as the Nats' fourth starting pitcher, there would be no mystery whatsoever about the make-up of the Washington team for 1941. Aside from that fourth pitcher, the Nats, for better or worse, are set.

POVICH

There isn't any decent competition for the other jobs on the club. The men who hold 'em are so far out in front of their rivals, it's no contest. The team that will take the field for Washington on April 14 in the opening game could have been named last month with just as much accuracy as will be possible five minutes before game time nine weeks hence.

Rick Ferrell will be the Washington catcher. Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris may prattle on about the improvement of Jake Early and Al Evans, but it will be wishful stuff. Neither of 'em can carry the mitt of Ferrel, and the Nats' bosses know it. So do the Washington pitchers, who have their own preference in the matter of their catcher. Ferrell may be no ball of fire on the bases or at bat, but behind that plate he does all right, which is more than may be said for a couple of other guys we know.

Even before he has pulled on a Washington uniform for the first time, the first base job on the Nats belongs to George Archie, the lad from Seattle. There will be two other first basemen in the Nats' camp—Jimmy Vernon and Jack Sanford—but they aren't expected to disturb Archie. The boy with the two front names has been a top-fighter in double A ball for four years and last season was the most valuable player in the Coast League. And that .322 batting average he is bringing along gives him a big bulge over Vernon and Sanford at the plate.

Whether you like it or not, Jimmy Bloodworth will be out there at second base again, fielding everything that is hit directly at him. Has a great pair of hands, that Bloodworth. Wish we could say the same thing about his legs. He goes to his right and left with all the speed and facility of a rheumatic snail. And with that bat he can create quite a breeze.

At that, the Nats' bosses are ready to string along with Bloodworth. Buddy Myer is still with the team, but Buddy is not very spry at 36. They didn't even bother to call young Morris Aderholt to camp this spring, on the theory that he's worse than Bloodworth.

Cecil Travis will be out there at shortstop, whether he likes it or not, and he does not like it. There is too much traffic around second base for the awkward Travis, who in the past has gone direct from an attempted double play to the hospital with spike wounds. But he's still the best shortstop the Nats own. We're not forgetting Jimmy Pofahl, Clark Griffith's $40,000 mistake. Pofahl would be a great shortstop if he could hit, if he could throw.

At third base it will be Buddy Lewis, over his own protests. Lewis doesn't want the job, but that makes no difference. With Travis at shortstop, Lewis gets the third base job willy-nilly. There isn't another third baseman with the club. Anyway, Manager Bucky Harris is convinced that the sluggish-fielding Lewis can do less damage at third base than in the outfield where nobody is playing behind him.

There isn't a chance for anybody to break into the Nats' outfield of Cramer, Case and Chapman unless one of 'em breaks a leg. The only other big league outfielder on the roster is Sammy West and he has reached a painful 36. Johnny Welaj is good afield, but no hit. Joe Mellendeck, the former Georgetown halfback, can field and throw but he couldn't hit .300 at Greenville, a Class B club. Jim Mallory, who came out of the University of North Carolina and looked like a pretty good ball player, is spending the summer at Mayo Clinic and won't even be in camp. Elmer Gedeon, another outfielder, has so impressed the Nats' bosses with his outfielding that Mr. Griffith has suggested that Gedeon enlist in the army.

All of which brings us down to the pitching. And when you speak of the Washington pitching, you speak only of Dutch Leonard, Sid Hudson and Ken Chase. After that, Bucky Harris admits that he hates to think about the Washington pitching. If one of the top three were twins, he'd like his pitching staff very much, incidentally.

Old Danny Macfayden will be around, pitching perhaps one game a week and maybe doing a fair job of that light chore, but Harris is still looking for that fourth starting pitcher. Stark Realist Harris isn't permitting himself to hope that the Nats' rookie crop will turn up "another Sid Hudson." He'll settle for somebody who can win ten games. That's the only job for which there is any sort of a scramble in this Washington training camp.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 20.—A baseball spring training camp is a place:

Where hopeless fellows like Waner and Mungo can always get good publicity for their whistling-in-the dark announcements. (If the Dodgers win it will be despite them.)

CONSIDINE

Where rookies get fresher every year. (In the old days, the regulars on the team would brain a rookie who tried to take his just share of "raps" in batting practice. There's generally so much dough tied up in them today that they are almost babied.)

Where wives sit knittin'-for-Britain. (And talk about everything except that which is closest to their hearts: how the old man's muscles are holding out.)

Where regulars worry much more over the way their putts are not dropping, or the way their wood shots are hooking, than they do over rounding into form. (No seasoned regular ever doubts his ability to play big league ball. They take it for granted, like a second eye. They rarely gossip about the way other players are getting along.)

Where the full is dull, but more varied than it will be the remainder of the season. (After the season opens, ball players almost invariably have steaks for dinner.)

Where the rude little grandstands and bleachers often pack more splinters than customers. (The fans in little resort towns seem much more blase about the presence of big leaguers than do the city folks.)

Where the adjacent movie houses know they can book almost anything and make money. (The average big leaguer would rather see Gene Autry than Ronald Colman.)

Where the belles of the town begin frequenting the corner drugstore, at which the players eat their ice cream or gulp their "cokes" before retiring. (As a whole, unmarried big leaguers are a highly moral lot whose idea of a debauch is a double feature and a double chocotate malted.)

Where the manager finds a hideaway tavern for a little discreet tippling with a trusted coach and a few of the reporters. (Most of the trade secrets divulged in these sessions never get into print, A fellow just understands that this stuff isn't to be printed.)

Where the most hopeless recruits are inclined to be the hungriest, too. (It is a little pathetic, yet comical in a way, to see the poor gawks edging toward the dining room doors, waiting for them to open. You think of the old line about the condemned men eating a hearty meal.)

Where there's nothing more poignant than the look in a man's face the day they tell him that he didn't make the grade. (If you search the faces of the frustrated you can find there all the big and little aches of life in the bush leagues. It is infinitely sadder, of course, when the guy is old. You know he probably didn't save a nickel from the good days).

Where the village half-wit affixes himself to the team (and is promptly turned into a court jester by the older, more assured players).

Where one gay boy almost always will break training, after scheming for days on the problem of how to get out of the hotel without detection, after curfew. (One current player ran into his manager one morning while sneaking back into the hotel after a tough night. Quick as a flash he alibied, "Just got up to take an early workout." The workout nearly completed the job of splitting his head.)

Where the creaky busses run to and from rival camps. (The hot, white roads through swamp and tropical vegetation . . . Some horseplay in the bus . . . The studious fellow in the corner . . . The hardened old catcher trying grumpily to sleep . . . The wrinkled $22.50 suits being pulled back into shape, when the bus ride is over.)

Where the players from small towns teach the city boys the old American custom of leaning against the front of the hotel, to watch the girls go by. (They take up their stand just after dinner, some with toothpicks, or burping reflectively. Rookies, mostly, they talk about life in the little leagues from which they have just come. They don't talk when the girls go by. They just look at the backs of her legs. Then they go back to baseball.)

Where the evenings are long and quiet in the hotel lobby. (The older players and their wives play bridge. The virile guys, in their prime, with much profane muttering, seem to go in for hearts, the wives gossip, and off in the corner the two players will always be talking to the girl at the cigar and newspaper counter and the only noise that is made will be made by the little group at the pinball machine.)

Mamakos Fights Zale for Title Tonight

Nats' Rookie Pitching Hope Goes In for Repairs

Arnold Anderson, young pitching hope of the Nats' ball club, has Trainer Mike Martin give his dogs a little attention as he begins preparing for what he hopes will be his start in major league baseball. He is one of two rookies Manager Harris hopes will come through this season. (See story below.)

Long Route Favors D.C. Middleweight

Champion, However, Says He'll Kayo Foe; 12,000 Expected For Chicago Bout

By Steve Snider
United Press Sports Writer.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Steve Mamakos, a slugging sergeant from Washington, D. C., who never lost two fights to the same man, makes his "lucky second" stand against Champion Tony Zale tomorrow night in a 15-round bout for the National Boxing Association's middleweight title.

MAMAKOS

Mamakos has enumerated some two dozen reasons why he thinks he will be the new champion, but the betting odds are 8 to 5 he won't.

In his first fight with Zale—a nontitle match in January—Mamakos dusted the floor twice and lost a split decision. One judge and the referee voted for Zale. The other judge called it a draw. Although the fight didn't look that close up in the grandstands. Promoter Bill Rand indicated a crowd of 12,000 would be back for the rematch in the Stadium.

Hostak vs. Burnette

Presence of Former Champion Al Hostak on the card might have something to do with the size of the gate. Until he broke his brittle left hand in an earlier match with Zale, Hostak tossed the hardest punch seen here in years outside the heavyweight division.

Hostak, in a comeback after losing his title on a knockout by Zale last July, meets Georgie Burnette, of Detroit, in a supporting ten-rounder. With his hands apparently in good repair after the eight-month layoff, Hostak was a 2-to-1 choice to bowl over the Detroit Negro and earn his third meeting with Zale—or his first with Mamakos if Steve wins the title.

Chief reason for the soldier's confidence is his weight.

"I had to come in all blown up for that first fight so Zale's title wouldn't go if I beat him," Mamakos said. "I was over the 160-pound limit for the first time in my life and felt like I carried that much lead in my arms.

Zale Predicts Kayo

"This time I can weigh anything I please under the limit. About 156, I guess, and that's my best. Zale can't last 15 rounds and that's a breeze for me."

Zale is one of those quiet boys who take the good breaks with the bad, never crows over victory nor alibis over defeat. He didn't say he'd stop Mamakos, but Co-Manager Art Winch did.

"In a hurry," he said. "Quick and right on the button."

Webb Meets Tucker To Settle Title

New York, Feb. 20 (INS).—The first match of an elimination series to establish an undisputed light heavyweight champion will be held tomorrow night with Jimmy Webb, of St. Louis, a 6 to 5 favorite to defeat Tommy Tucker, of New York, in a 15-rounder.

The victor will meet the winner of a Gus Lesnevich-Anton Christoforidis bout and the eventual survivor will be recognized as successor to Billy Conn, who will give up the championship for a crack at Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis in June.

$5,000 4-Ball Field Complete

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 20 (AP).—The field for the $5,000 International Four-ball Golf Tournament, to be played March 2-5 over the Miami Biltmore course, was completed today with invitations to five additional players.

Latest to be invited were Johnny Farrell, of Hollywood, Fla., and Willie MacFarlane, of Miami Shores, both former National Open champions; Leonard Dodson, of Springfield, Mo.; Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., and Jimmy Hines, of New York.

Frank Walsh, of Rumson, N. J.; Leo Walper, of Washington, and Willie Klein, of Miami Beach were named alternates.

The Nation's top professionals, including Open Champion Lawson Little, of San Francisco, and P. G. A. title-holder Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., were invited previously. Martin Pose and Eduardo Blasi, of Buenos Aires, will provide an international flavor.

The players have not yet been paired into teams.

V.P.I. Defeats American U. Eagles, 42-33

After running up a substantial first-half advantage, the V. P. I. basketers held their own the rest of the way to defeat the American University five, 42 to 33, on the Eagle court last night in a game that got a bit rough around the edges.

The Gobblers' attack was led by Guy Crawford, a soph forward, who had himself a time to the extent of 20 points. Crawford, a phlegmatic-looking individual, hit the hoops for 13 points in the first period and came back to pick up seven more later to clinch scoring laurels for the evening.

Late in the game tempers began to get short on both sides and the Virginians lost two men, Capt. Keith Haff and Buddy Henderson, via the foul route, while A. U.'s Bing Byham was forced from the floor for the same reason.

Eagles Handicapped

The Eagles, who saw a three-game winning streak broken last night, were materially handicapped by the loss of three regulars. Bart Reese, one of the more dependable guards, is out with a bad ankle sprain. Tommy Simpson and Jack Payne, a pair of frosh forwards, had to remain on the sidelines because of the Southern Conference ruling against freshman. Reese was replaced by Ernie Webb, a letterman of two years ago, who did some very acceptable defensive work most of the game.

Using a style of shooting that consistently baffled the Eagles, V. P. I. took an early lead that was extended to 26-13 at the intermission. Crawford and Frank Montgomery were the spearhead of this onslaught, accounting for 20 points between them.

Schulze Checked

Dutch Schulze, who saw his 12-point game average disappear last night, and Archie Norford carried the brunt of the final-period offensive for A. U., but were never able to come within seven points of the victors. The Eagles were sadly off form in shooting, and for the greater part of the game they would have found it difficult to have thrown marbles through the baskets.

Toronto Regains Lead in Hockey

Toronto, Feb. 20 (U.P.)—The Toronto Maple Leafs moved back into first place in the National Hockey League tonight with a 2-1 victory over the Montreal Canadiens.

Nick Metz's goal at 11:17 of the final period provided the Leafs with the deciding margin. Charlie Sands opened the scoring with Montreal's lone goal midway in the first period but Sweeney Schriner's tally at 15:52 of the same period tied the score.

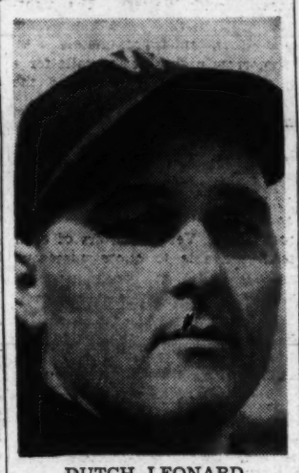
Dutch Leonard Signs At Salary Reduction

Griffith Announces Star Hurler Agrees to Terms by Wire; Chase Arrives at Orlando

By a Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 20.—Dutch Leonard's mild holdout battle with Clark Griffith came to an end tonight when the big knuckle-ball pitcher telegraphed his acceptance of 1941 salary terms offered by the Washington club.

In a conference with newsmen, Griffith claimed a triumph in the negotiations with Leonard. It was no compromise, said Griffith. Leonard accepted the original salary terms offered him six weeks ago, according to the Nats' owner.



DUTCH LEONARD

Griffith admitted that he cut Leonard's salary "a thousand dollars or so." The big knuckle-baller was paid $15,000 last season after turning in 20 victories for the second division Nats in 1939. In 1940 Leonard won only 15 games and lost 9, more defeats than any other pitcher in the league.

Griff Blames Leonard

"I cut his salary," said Griffith, "because Leonard didn't work hard last season. I'm not basing his pay on his won and lost record. In 1939, he kept himself in condition and had a great year. Last season he was 12 pounds overweight most of the time and became lazy. I wanted to remind him that he had to keep in shape. He's a big man and he takes on weight easily."

Leonard's capitulation reduced to four the group of veterans who have not yet accepted terms—Infielders Buddy Myer, Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis; Catcher Rick Ferrell.

Pitcher Ken Chase arrived in the Nats' camp tonight accompanied by Mrs. Chase and one of their three children. He has agreed to terms, Griffith announced.

Ferrell Demands Raise

The Nats' owner revealed that he had offered Ferrell the same salary the catcher received last year, and that Ferrell was demanding an increase. "He's the fellow who hit .276 for us last season," said Griffith significantly.

Classed with Ferrell in the group which is demanding raises are Travis and Lewis. Neither of them have been obstinate about signing contracts in the past, and Griffith anticipates no great difficulty in getting their signatures before the March 1 date on which they are scheduled to report.

Buddy Myer, who has received a salary cut every season since 1936, is holding out because he doesn't like the size of his latest slash. As a prospering building contractor in Louisiana where he is engaged in building barracks for United States Army camps, Myer is believed to be in no mood to accept a drastic cut.

Gallaudet Plays Bridgewater

Their next to last cage outing of the year will be undergone by Gallaudet's basketers tonight when they engage Bridgewater at Kendall Green. At 7 p. m. preliminary between the Gallaudet Juniors and D. C. Silents will open the program.

The Blues' last game will be against Randolph-Macon tomorrow at 3:30.

Mound Staff Main Problem Of Nat Bosses

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 20.—Is there "another Sid Hudson" in the lot?

That was the thought uppermost in the mind of Manager Bucky Harris today as he got his first look at the 1941 crop of rookie Washington pitchers in a two-hour workout at Tinker Field.

The Nats' bosses are still flushed with the success of their experiments of last spring when they uncovered the sensational Hudson, fresh out of a Class D league. They can scarcely be blamed for their wishful thinking that it can happen again.

Harris, however, isn't placing any great trust in the possibility that the Nats will come up with "another Hudson." Said Harris today:

"It isn't in the books that we can come up with two like that in two years but I'll kiss any of these rookies on both cheeks if he shows me he can pitch in the majors."

Harris Eyes Two Rookies

Two hours after they piled out of the bus at Tinker Field, the assorted rookies piled back in again. They hadn't attempted even to put more than a lob on the ball and from the standpoint of skill Harris saw very little

It's no secret in the Nats' camp, though, that Harris has singled out two of the young men for special attention on the theory that they may come closest to big league specifications. They are Arnold Anderson, the big, red-necked right-hander from Springfield, and Alex Zukowski, a stumpy right-hander from Greenville of the Southern Atlantic League.

"We'll give Zukowski a long look," said Harris. "He's a strong looking lad and those 22 games he won at Greenville recommended him. I can't afford to overlook any pitcher who can win that many games in any kind of a league, and I've been told that with better breaks Zukowski could have won 30."

A Magic Recovery

Particular pet of Harris, however, is Anderson who has been batting around the minors for four years as the property of the Nats. Originally he was bought from Sioux City, Iowa, by the Nats after Nick Altrock had been dispatched from Washington on a special scouting trip to appraise him. For most of the four years, Anderson seemed to be merely a costly mistake for the Nats. For two years the big fellow was bothered by a chronic sore arm and the Nats actually gave up on him.

But last last season Anderson found himself at the Nats' Springfield farm and began to show a magic recovery of his fast ball. Manager Spencer Abbott urged the Nats to take him back with the notation that "He's ready for the majors." Anderson pitched two games last fall for the Nats, shutting out the Browns with four hits in the last week of the season and leaving Harris with a pleasant impression.

Bridgewater Bows, 43-41, To Teachers

Wilson Teachers, sparked by Ray Holben, little Charley Clark and Ray Bataglini, nosed out the Bridgewater quintet, 43 to 41, at Calvin Coolidge gym last night.

The District cagers assumed an early lead which was never relinquished, and they were holding a 17-to-8 advantage at the half.

Garber, the Bridgewater forward, who set the scoring pace for the game with a total of 20 points, inaugurated a flurry which threatened to overtake the Green and White.

The Pedagogues travel to Shepherdstown, W. Va., tonight to meet the Shepherd State Teachers basketers. In an earlier game this season the Wilson five took a 40-37 decision from Shepherd on the Tech High court.

Georgetown Rallies In Second Half to Beat Pennsylvanians Before 4,000 Fans

By the Associated Press

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 20.—Spurting in the second half, the Georgetown University Hoyas defeated the University of Scranton, 51-40, here tonight before approximately 4,000 fans.

The count was tied six times during the stirring battle but the experience and reserve strength of the visiting Hoyas told in the drive down the stretch. Scranton assumed an early lead and was in the van much of the first half.

Sparked by Irving Rizzi, the Hoyas rallied toward the end of the second period to take a 23-19 advantage. The Scrantonians knotted the count three times in the second half but never went ahead.

Hoyas Again Spurt

The last time it was knotted was at 29-29, but again the Hoyas spurted and a long goal by Bill Bornheimer gave them a lead they never lost.

It was Georgetown's fifteenth win of the year.

For Georgetown, Rizzi, with 17 points, and O'Grady, with 12, were high scorers.

Elmer Ripley, Georgetown coach who managed professional teams in Scranton and nearby Carbondale some 20 years ago, was honored by Carbondale fans at half time. He was presented with a clock set in anthracite coal.

Curious Coin Betters American Record Tuning Up For $20,000 Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah Saturday

By the United Press

Hialeah, Fla., Feb. 20.—Coldstream Stable's Curious Coin bettered American records in a workout today and became one of the three leading contenders for the $20,000 Flamingo Stakes Saturday.

The two other horses favored by the dopesters were Warren Wright's Whirlaway and King Ranch's Dispose.

In a 5-furlong trial over the Hialeah track, Curious Coin, son of Brandon Mint, bettered American records for 3 furlongs and a half mile. The horse turned the 3 furlongs in 33 seconds, five-tenths of a second better than the mark set by Atoka at Butte, Mont., in 1906. He continued his sizzling pace to do the half in 0:45.2, clipping three-fifths of a second from the record time of 0:46 set by Double Call at Tropical Park last year.

Last Tuesday, in his second appearance as a 3-year-old, Whirlaway, leading juvenile of 1940, turned in a dismal performance. Dispose won the Bahamas Handicap February 1 in track record time.

Whirlaway trailed Shady Brook Farm's entry of Agricole and Cadmium, two Flamingo eligibles, under the wire Tuesday, but remained a favorite for Saturday's race.

Dispose and his trainer, Max Hirsch, will arrive here tomorrow from quqarters in Columbia, S. C. Reports were that the colt was in as good condition as when he won the Bahamas.

Gonzaga's Great Rally Downs St. John's, 21-19, for Title

Purple's Late Attack Led By Mulvihill

Inspired Johnnies Cling to Lead Until Final 3 Minutes; 3,200 See Game

By Bill Burnett

Gloriously capping a season that has ranged between mediocre and poor, St. John's High quintet last night kept itself out front most of the way but finally saw Gonzaga take the 1941 Catholic Prep championship of the city with a 21-19 victory at Tech gym.

An estimated 3,200 of the most enthusiastic scholastic fans to gather this year were on hand to see the Eagles, behind their great center Bobby Mulvihill, dig out of an 8-point deficit and win in the last three minutes of play.

It was Mulvihill, almost single-handedly, who kept his mates in the running against the inspired Johnnies throughout. And it was Mulvihill again who brought the count up even at 19-19 with three and a half minutes left, a minute later getting himself set at mid-court and firing the shot that spelled victory.

Makes Six Points

Six points the earnest pivotman tallied as the Eagles took their fifteenth triumph in 20 games. That earned him a tie for game honors with the Johnnies' Chuck Dudley. His floor play was by far the outstanding feature of the second meeting of the year between the torrid rivals, a meeting that was expected to be even more of a walkaway than the first, won by Gonzaga by 41-30.

Before hostilities began, St. John's stock went down several notches when it was revealed that George Hughes, husky guard of the Cadets, had been taken ill suddenly and would miss action. By the end of the first three minutes, however, it was back up again.

The Johnnies quickly took a 7-0 lead and were ahead by 7-2 as the first quarter ended. Dudley, Leo Healy and Dick Hathaway provided the offensive spark in that stanza, and in the next the first youthful pair continued their drive as an 11-3 margin was chalked up. Gradually it faded, though, and St. John's halftime lead was only 12-8. The third period found Gonzaga still unable to sink its shots, a late snowbird by Mulvihill cutting the Purple's deficit to 15-12 at the end.

Gonzaga Takes Lead

With two minutes of the last session gone and the Johnnies leading, 17-14, Bernie Nolan and Franny Counselman rammed home shots that gave Gonzaga its first lead, 18-17. A short set shot by Dudley again shifted the lead toward St. John's, but Mulvihill then had something to say.

Both clubs missed innumerable shots, but it was Gonzaga that looked almost pitiful at times. Late in the third quarter it had three perfectly open shots directly under the basket, with no one near, and fumbled each. St. John's, playing on nerve and desperation, had difficulty with its long tosses but appeared the better team under the rim.

Shoulder Pinning in Catholic Prep Basketball Rivalry

Cagers of Gonzaga and St. John's reverted to a few mat tactics last night as they met in the second Catholic Prep game of the year. Here Bobby Mulvihill (10) and Hart Downs (5), of the Purple, get all tangled in Paddy McCarthy's arms and legs. Watching are Referee Rasty Doran, Gonzaga's Bernie Nolan and the Johnnies' Dick Hathaway and Leo Healy. Gonzaga won a last-minute 21-19 nod

Pitcher Casey Is Fined $100 For Tardiness

By the Associated Press

Havana, Feb. 20.—Pitcher Hugh Casey of the Dodgers was fined $100 today by Larry McPhail because he reported for training four days late. The pitcher reached camp yesterday, and he accepted the fine without complaint.

In today's routine drill, Manager Durocher sent his players through a brisk session, with a long batting practice in which half a dozen pitchers took turns on the mound. Alex Kampouris, reserve infielder, was in uniform for the first time.

CLAY BRYANT SIGNS

Chicago, Feb. 20 (AP).—Clay Bryant, Zanesville, Ohio, ailing right hand pitcher with the Chicago Cubs, signed his 1941 contract today, reducing the list of unsigned players to 12. He advised his pitching arm was in good condition.

General Manager Jim Gallagher, of the Cubs, announced he had "reached an understanding" with Lou Stringer, high-priced second baseman obtained from Los Angeles, adding that he believed Stringer's contract would be signed before the club reaches its Catalina Island training camp. The Cubs leave here Sunday, and Gallagher said he would confer with Stringer in Los Angeles Wednesday.

BEES HEAD FOR TEXAS

Boston, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—The vanguard of the Boston Bees, headed by Road Secretary "Duffy" Lewis and Manager Jack Onslow, of the Hartford Farm Club, left tonight for their San Antonio, Tex., training camp.

The players in the party were all batterymen. Pitchers George Barnicle, Alva William Javery and Arthur Johnson and Catcher Stanley Andrews. Other players will join the group en route and at the camp.

Before the party left the Bees announced the signing of two rookie pitchers and Outfielder Melvin Preibisch, who was brought up from Hartford. The pitchers were Joseph Rucildo, also from Hartford, and Wilbur McElroy, who was sidelined last year with an arm injury.

"FAT MEN" DEPART

Haas said the trio, outfielders Taft Wright and Julius Solters and Pitcher Edgar Smith, were in top shape.

PIRATES LEAVE TODAY

Pittsburgh, Feb. 20 (AP).—The brig of the Pittsburgh Pirates shoves off tomorrow morning for the San Bernardino, Calif., trainnig camp with 17 aboard, including ten players.

The skippers, "Admiral" William Benswanger and "Captain" Frankie Frisch already are on their way and are due in camp tomorrow or next day. All other players will join the National League team's special en route or go direct from their homes to be ready for opening practice on February 24.

The first exhibition game will be played March 7 against Portland at San Bernardino.

CHIOZZA LOOKS GOOD

Miami, Fla., Feb. 20 (AP).—Manager Bill Terry got a pleasant surprise from the first full batting and fielding practice of the New York Giants today.

It was from Lou Chiozza, the infielder who broke a leg during the 1939 season. He was stationed at third base today and looked good there.

Roosevelt, Western In Court Title Opener

The first of two night's battling for the 1941 basketball championship of Washington's public high schools will occur tonight at Tech gym, starting at 7:30—and for the first time in years the outcome isn't a foregone conclusion, or even a near-certainty, before hostilities begin.

Roosevelt, the 1940 winner, after going undefeated all season, starts this year's crucial tournament in a meeting with Western. The night-cap tonight brings together Eastern and Tech at approximately 8:45. Tomorrow night's action calls for a consolation clash at 7:30 and the title game between tonight's winners later.

If there is a favorite to cop this year's title it is Roosevelt, largely because it is the defending champion and boasts an infinitesimally better record than the other three contenders. Yet supporters of each team are able to quote numerous reasons, and good ones, why their club is the best going into the meet.

Last year Roosevelt was almost conceded the title before tourney play began, the Rough Riders having smashed every other team during the season. And in 1938 and 1939 Eastern was a near-cinch to win with perfect marks for the season. Western's last championship came in 1937 with an upset over Eastern, and Tech's last crown was obtained in 1930.

Next to Roosevelt, which lost only to Western this year, Eastern probably ranks best. It was soundly trampled by the Riders, but took more or less easy victories over all other league foes. Besides its triumph over Roosevelt, Western managed to down only Wilson and Anacostia, while Tech's presence in the tourney was made possible by decisions over Western and the three lower-case fives.

From the standpoint of individual stars, Roosevelt also rates an edge, having both Hymie Perlo and Frank Ciango in its lineup. They are not the only stars, however, left over from the 1940 championship squad. Eastern's Moe Schulman rates with the best in scholastic circles here, and Tech's big gun is Jackie Walsh, the one-hand artist.

Western boasts five of the most evenly matched players in the series, every one a dependable performer, yet to date it has clicked only in its stunning defeat of the Riders. Fans may have cause to remember Hal Mitchell, Jimmy Karas, Don Cross, Irving Schenker and Jake Hilleary.

Doerr Is Holdout, Red Sox Report

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 20 (AP).—The admission that Second Baseman Bobby Doerr, one of the two unsigned Boston Red Sox, was an "out-and-out holdout" was made by General Manager Eddie Collins today as he entrained for Boston.

"Doerr has put such a high value on his services that we are unable to meet his figures," Collins said.

Collins added that Doerr, now recuperating in Los Angeles from an appendectomy, has rejected two recent offers.

Bates Coach Quits

Lewiston, Me., Feb. 20 (AP).—Wendell Mansfield resigned as head coach of football at Bates College to take a similar post at Springfield, Mass., College, Bates athletic officials announced tonight.

DraftHeadSays BigHankDidn't Ask Deferment

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Feb. 20.—Ben O. Shepherd, chairman of local draft board No. 23, said tonight in commenting on a Detroit Free Press story that Hank Greenberg was asking "occupational deferment" from the draft: "That part of it is not true unless he (Greenberg) has done so in the last couple of days."

"I don't think he is asking for deferment on any grounds," Shepherd added.

The draft board chairman, however, emphasized that he had not been in close touch with board offices in the last few days.

Shepherd, while pointing out that there were "a lot of reasons" why any man might be deferred, appeared unwilling to go into detailed discussion of Greenberg's case.

Of Greenberg's returned questionnaire, however, Shepherd said: "I've seen it. There's nothing in it about any application for deferment because of occupational reasons unless it's been done in the last two or three days."

Green Hornet Wins as Dusek Is Disqualified

In as wild a wrestling match as has ever been staged at Turner's Arena, 2,200 fans saw the Green Hornet win through the disqualification of Ernie Dusek last night and the crowd, through collection and admissions, produced $206.60 for the Children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund, being sponsored by WJSV and The Washington Post.

The end of the feature battle came after 43 minutes packed with thrills and chills. Dusek threw the Hornet out of the ring for the fourth time and pounced on him. Referee Berger, who had warned the wrestler three times, ruled the winner. Dusek attacked both his opponent and the referee after the match was officially over and police found it necessary to escort the trio to the dressing room.

On Even Terms

The Hornet's victory brought him to even terms with Dusek, who had won a decision the a week before, although backers of the masked invader contended that their man's leg was caught in the ropes.

Last night, the Hornet succeeded in throwing Dusek out of the ring once and escaped a powerful leg spread used by his rival midway of the battle.

Buffalo Drills Today for Bout

Buffalo will drill around 2 p. m., with Furr taking over at 1 p. m.

Buffalo's manager, Frankie Palmero, who has sent a lot of good fighters to the arena post in the last few years, is expected in town with the colored scrapper, and will visit the District Boxing Commission to put on record that his boy wants a title bout with Fritzie Zivic, the champion.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez has completed his supporting card. In the eight-round semiwindup Ossie Stewart, Pittsburgh middleweight, a colored fighter, will meet Battling Monroe, of Buffalo.

In a six-round match Buddy Thomas will take on Buddy Holmes. They fought a few months ago with Thomas taking a close decision. Both are local boys. In four-rounders Carol (Kid) Alexandria, Washington Golden Gloves product, will meet Wayman Stewart, of Washington, and Johnny Thomas will take on Buddy Moore.

Menendez said that Furr definitely is on the spot Monday. If he doesn't win he will be relegated to the preliminary ranks, and "that's sumpin'," Phil said yesterday, "will never come about."

The Buffalo-Furr match appears to be a natural, for Buffalo has won his last ten straight and is the toast of the colored patrons.

Haight Goes Local

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss:

Well, it looks as if I'm going to have to go back on a diet, whether I want to or not. In fact, Boss, you don't know it but you are liable to be eating light soon yourself. I read in the papers that Mrs. Roosevelt has warned that there may be need for food rationing sometime in the future. It might come sooner than she expects if something isn't done about a certain women's bridge club that I have heard about.

HAIGHT

It seems these women were tired of sitting around the house listening to "Frenesi" on the radio and they decided to have a little bridge session each Wednesday afternoon. It was agreed that they would take turns in entertaining. "Now we want to start playing cards early, so I suggest that we have only one thing for lunch, either sandwiches, a salad or a dessert and, of course, coffee," suggested Mrs. B. Other members of the group pressed their lips together and nodded approval.

Then Mrs. C. spoke up with, "I believe we should make these games as inexpensive as possible. Let's limit the prizes to things, say from the Five and Ten—just little whatnots. What do you girls say?"

They all agreed with Mrs. C. just as they had with Mrs. B. "And now," said Mrs. McK., "We will draw to see at whose house we will play next week."

Well, Boss, Mrs. M. got No. 1 position on the bridge parade and on Wednesday the members reported and Mrs. M. had a platter of American cheese and another of cooked ham on the buffet along with a loaf of sliced rye bread. Coffee was a get-it-at-the-kitchen-door proposition. Mrs. M. scowled slightly when Mrs. P. set her cup on the radio to smooth down her dress when Mrs. C. remarked she must be wearing a new foundation. But, all in all, things went along smoothly. Mrs. K. won the prize and the hostess presented her with a 10-cent package of powder puffs and Mrs. K. gave her a hug and said, "Just what I needed, dear."

The following Wednesday it was Mrs. McK.'s turn to have the girls around. She had places set on the bridge tables with a platter of crustless sandwiches for each foursome. On each plate was a stuffed tomato.

Well Boss, Mrs. M., who had entertained the week before, frowned when she saw that stuffed tomato. Mrs. McK. pretended not to see her and said, "I know we agreed to have only one thing for lunch, but I came across a new recipe for stuffed tomatoes and I thought you girls would like to try it." Mrs. M. didn't say anything, but later she raised Mrs. McK.'s trump bid to six when she had only one stopper in her hand. Mrs. R. finished with the best score and Mrs. McK. presented her with a pair of silk stockings. Fortunately, Mrs. M. didn't say what she thought about Mrs. K. hiking the prize.

Came the next Wednesday and Mrs. B. did the honors. She had her dining room table set. "I thought it might be a good idea to have lunch in here, sort of

Favored Market Wise Takes Hialeah's Lake Worth Purse

Arcaro Rides Broker's Tip Son Across

Blue Lily Loses 5-Length Lead in Top Race of Mediocre Thursday Program

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 20.—Grade "C" 3-year-olds met in the Lake Worth Purse, the nearest thing to a feature offering on a run-of-the-mine program here this afternoon. As expected by a big majority of the crowd, Samuel Tufano's Market Wise, a recent winner repeated at the expense of six rivals. Paying $5.10 for $2, the son of Broker's Tip (a surprise Derby winner of some years back), easily reported on top with a length and a half to spare in 1:24 2-5. Eddie Arcaro was astride the victor.

Blue Lily, speedy but stopping filly owned by Croan & Brooks, could not hold a five lengths lead and finished second, a length in advance of Maemere Farm's Maepeace. The latter was 1st most of the way and closed a gap under Conn McCreary, who rode two winners earlier on the card.

Of the seven starters, four had been regarded highly enough by their stables to be nominated for Saturday's Flamingo Stakes. They were Maepeace, Bell Tower, Yankee Party and Hardy Bud.

Blue Lily, as is her wont, quickly dashed far out in the clear, putting Hardy Bud away in the first half mile. Market Wise took up the chase when the not so Hardy Bud faltered. Blue Lily entered the home lane still several lengths in front, but Market Wise drew alongside the pacemaker as they reached the furlong pole. Arcaro did not have to ask Market Wise for his best thereafter.

BLOSSOM LANE, quickest to get going, drew clear under strong pressure in the early stages, but faltered through the stretch and just lasted. ELECTRIC ducked to the inside after the start, closed gamely to punishment and would have won in another stride. ON PAROLE, slow to find her stride, finished fastest of all on the outside. NOTES, well up from the start, was unable to get up.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate for all but Weisenheimer. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:36. Off 2:36½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR GIBSON, $7.10, $4.40, $3.10; RANGE DUST, $7.50, $4.40; JELWELL, $3.20.

SIR GIBSON lacked speed and dropped back in the first half mile, swung to the extreme outside entering the stretch, gained rapidly, and wore the leaders down to win going away. RANGE DUST, a keen contender all the way, held on gamely in the final drive to outlast JELWELL. The latter, nearest in pursuit of the leader in the early stages, bore out entering the stretch, but came again to wear YOU ALONE down in the final strides. YOU ALONE displayed high speed, but weakened through the stretch.

Daily Double, BLOSSOM LANE and SIR GIBSON, Paid $74

AIR BRIGADE, much the best, was pocketed on the inside to the stretch turn, swung around the leader, took command when ready and won in hand. BECOMLY displayed good speed, but was no match for the winner. PEEP SHOW gained slowly on the outside and wore REACT down. The latter had no excuses.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:41. Off 3:42. Winner, Tower Stable's b. c. PETTACAIRN took command at once, drew out while being steadied in the early running and then opened up a big lead through the stretch to win in hand. REMOTE CONTROL moved into contention strongly on the stretch turn, but could not reach the winner. HERE AGAIN gradually bettered his position and shook off the others in the final eighth. MISS BEANS made up ground while slipping through on the inside.

BLUE LILY opened up a long lead in the first half mile, but began to falter after going 6 furlongs. MAEPEACE broke tardily and gained steadily while circling the field to easily dispose of the others. HARDY BUD displayed good speed, but stopped as if short.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. The Sunny Isles. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:42. Off 4:42. Winner, W. F. COUNTERPOISE followed the leader closely from the start, closed gamely when placed to a drive and got up in the last 50 yards. YES OR NO held the field safe for speed and rated in front, continued with good courage when challenged. OVERSIGHT, stealing through on the inside after entering the backstretch, responded to strong pressure, but could not reach the leaders. CLOSE TO made up a lot of ground.

WEST WICHITA, in tight quarters and outrun the early stages, came with a rush through the stretch to outlast KURDISTAN. The latter, also far back the first 6 furlongs, made up ground steadily when called upon.

Bethesda Routs Montgomery, 33-20

Blair's Early Lead Futile, 1,500 Watch

Cremins Stars Both On Offense, Defense; Winners Lead, 27-14 At End of Half

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School turned back Montgomery-Blair, 33 ot 20, to win the mythical Montgomery County basketball championship in Ritchie Coliseum last night as a howling crowd of 1,500 looked on. Blair lost previous game to Bethesda, 35 to 21.

Bob Cremins topped the winners with 13 points, four field goals and seven free throws. Bob Kenne trailed with seven points.

Blair grabbed a 4-0 lead in the early minutes of the first period, but the Barons tied it up, 4-4, at the end of the quarter.

Cremins entered the game at the opening of the second period, and sank a field goal, to put his mates in the lead to stay. Bethesda held a 19-to-9 lead at the half. At the end of the third period Bethesda was ahead, 27 to 14.

Cremins not only was tops in scoring, but almost completely dominated the floor play, intercepting passes and causing the Blairmen anguish at every turn. He was fouled six times, and converted five of the free tosses.

Wimpy Reynolds, Blair star, was held to four points, while Kelley and Carter managed to mark up six points each for the losers.

In a preliminary, Bethesda Jayvees defeated Blair's Juniors, 37-11.

Brewers Add Pete Berenson, George Slott

In major deals closed late yesterday the Washington Brewers announced the outright purchase of Petey Berenson, veteran guard, from the Brooklyn Celtics and a trade whereby Howard Bollerman, their big center, goes to Baltimore in exchange for George Slott, one of the outstanding scorers of the American Basketball League.

Coach Mack Posnack last night was contacting Berenson and Slott in order to talk salary terms, but said he anticipated no difficulty in coming to agreement.

Both Slott and Berenson are expected to join the Brewers immediately and will be available Sunday night when the Brewers meet the world champion Philadelphia Sphas in an important American League game at Riverside Stadium.

Baltimore, Posnack added, attempted to land Moe Dubilier, but the proposition was rejected. Baltimore's bid for Bollerman was unexpected inasmuch as the Clippers previously had purchased Mike Bloom in an outright deal from the Brewers.

It is believed that the Clippers were willing to sacrifice one of the American League's best scoring men, Slott, in order to gain another big man to work along with Bloom on the pivot.

The acquistion of the sharpshooting Slott, third ranking American League scorer in first half competition, and the fiery Berenson should definitely stamp the Brewers as a threat to the Sphas Sunday night and an outstanding contender for the league's second half title, Posnack declared yesterday.

The Brewers defeated the Sphas in their last meeting here and in so doing set the stage for four consecutive defeats suffered by Philadelphia in second half competition.

Red Rolfe Signs Yankee Contract

Concord, N. H., Feb. 20 (AP).—Red Rolfe, New York Yankee third baseman, indicated today he was perfectly satisfied with his 1941 contract and that he would leave tomorrow for the Yankees' training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla.

Rolfe, who slumped in batting from .329 in 1939 to .250 last year, said there would be no wage squabble to interfere with his comeback.

comfy with everyone at the table, don't you think? When we have finished eating we can get right on with our bridge," explained Mrs. B.

For food Mrs. B. had chicken salad, hot biscuits, stuffed celery, pickles and olives, apple pie and coffee and the prize was an electric toaster.

The next week at Mrs. C.'s her maid did the serving and the menu was soup, lamb chops, French fried potatoes, fresh peas, pineapple and cheese salad, and chocolate sundae. Her prize was a set of dishes.

At last week's session Mrs. P. began with cocktails and hors-d'oeuvres, carried the girls through roast turkey with all the trimmings and served Benedictine after the meal. Her prize was a diamond wrist watch.

Well, Bess, next week they are going to Mrs. O.'s house. There is a rumor that she is going to have Paul Whiteman's Orchestra to play for lunch and that her prize will be a yacht.

The week after that Mrs. H. is going to be called out of town or Mr. H. is going to leave town, if you know what I mean.

Always your ace,
Washington Haight.

Eagles Tangle With Skeeters Here Tonight

The Washington Eagles are to go after the Eastern Hockey League's lead again at 8:30 tonight when they entertain an old enemy, the pugnacious Jersey Skeeters of River Vale, N. J., at Riverside Stadium.

The Eagles are trailing the pace-setting Baltimore Orioles by a single point, but will pull ahead in the race if they win tonight.

A capacity house of 4,500 is anticipated as the ever popular or unpopular Skeeters again stampede on the Riverside ice.

In previous appearances here the rough, tough Skeeters have flailed away with menacing sticks and ready fists in the heat of action and have mixed enthusiastically with Washington players on the slightest provocation.

Hughie Bell, Riber Vale's belligerent, high-scoring center, again will be on hand to administer assorted jolts and bruises as will big Bus Portland, towering defensman.

Jack McKinnon, River Vale's silver-haired but aggressive coach who has feuded with the Eagles and Coach Redvers Mackenzie all season, again will be in the driver's seat for River Vale.

Walter Scherer, Washington' new defenseman from Sydney, Nova Scotia, of the Colliery League, was expected to accompany Coach Redvers Mackenzie here from New York late last night and will make his debut at Riverside tonight. He will team up with Jimmy McCurry on defense.

Norm Burns, Washington's brilliant center who formerly pastimed with Atlantic City and River Vale, will continue his bid for a new Eastern League record in goals scored tonight. Burns, who failed to connect against Atlantic City last Tuesday night, needs only one goal to tie the record of 53 set by Atlantic City's Herb Foster a few years ago and tied by Baltimore's Norm Calladine last season.

Len Burrage, iron man defenseman of the Eagles, may miss his first game since joining the club tonight as the result of a broken toe on his right foot injured in Atlantic City.

Burrage yesterday found his injury so painful that he was unable to get his skate on his right foot and doubt was expressed as to whether he would be able to see action against the Jersey Skeeters.

Mound Staff Main Problem

the workout this morning, Harris confessed that he was worried about his pitching problem. "We'll have to carry nine pitchers, and even if I spread 'em thin, I can only count seven who I know anything about. Dutch Leonard, Ken [illegible] and Sid Hudson will be the top three, of course and I know Danny MacFayden can pitch at least once a week. After that, I'm in the laps of the gods.

"Temporarily I'm including Anderson as one of the men we'll carry and Alex Carrasquel as another. That makes six pitchers. Add Walter Masterson to the list, and it's seven. Where the other two are coming from, I wish somebody would kindly tell me. I only wish I were a young pitcher, because there are plenty pitching jobs open on this club."

Well aware is Harris that Anderson is the only member of the rookie crop who has had experience in anything more than a Class B league. He's a bit intrigued by Hardin Cathey, who won 19 games, in the Florida-Georgia League, but he hasn't yet seen that young man throw a ball. Harris thinks that big James (Dopey) Dean from Charlotte might be a big league pitcher if he weren't so scatter-brained.

Down here in Orlando, the natives think if the Nats do come up with "another Hudson" he will be one Joe Beck, who pitched for Orlando last year in the same league out of which Hudson came. Beck is a right-hander who hails originally from Baltimore, but Harris is not willing to believe anybody is "another Hudson" until he starts winning games in the big leagues with something like wonderful consistency.

Record Entry Opens A.A.U. Ring Tourney

A new attendance mark for first night novice competition is predicted for Turner's Arena tonight when the District Amateur Athletic Union opens its 1941 tournament with a series of 20 bouts at 8 o'clock.

Forty bright-eyed kids of all weights and from all sections of the city and nearby Virginia and Maryland will be involved in some of the merriest mixing yet featured in local tournament competition.

Long, short, fat and thin boys will be swinging from the heels from bell to bell and short-order knockouts, toe-to-toe slugfests and some genuinely clever stepping will be blended into an interesting evening.

The Apollo A. C., Red Shields, Prince Georges County Police Club, National Training School, Police No. 5 and St. Mary's Club along with unattached entries will be represented by up-and-coming youngsters who will be battling grimly for fistic reputations.

The first of several brother combinations entered in the tournament will be introduced by the Apollo A. C. when Don Hubscher boxes Dave Baker, of Prince Georges County Police, at 126 pounds and Roy Hubscher faces Al Sauer, Merrick Club, in the welterweight class.

Because a record crop of 130 entries—novices and seniors—has been enrolled in this tournament, it was announced yesterday that a sixth night will be added to the schedule.

The pairings:

112 POUNDS—Ray Brown (Police No. 5) vs. Cotony Corbin (unattached).

126 POUNDS—Don Hubscher (Apollo A. C.) vs. Dave Baker (Prince Georges County Police Club); Bill Cross (Red Shield) vs. Earnest DiFrancisco (Merrick Club); Olan Ford (Prince Georges Police Club) vs. Ray Cleveland (Merrick Club); Jack Duchesneau (Police No. 5) vs. Jib Hubbard (unattached); Dick Hunt (Prince Georges Police Club) vs. John Curling (St. Mary's); Ray McAlwee (Apollo A. C.) vs. Marvin Clark (National Training School); Anthony Brace (Merrick Club) vs. Joe Wright (Red Shield).

160 POUNDS—Wallace Turner (National Training School) vs. Herschell Todd (Prince Georges Police Club); Dave Barker (National Training School) vs. Ashley Lons (Apollo A. C.).

Bowlers Clash Sunday, to Aid Boys Club Fund

Two outstanding local duckpin teams will battle Sunday night at Convention Hall with the proceeds going to help swell the Police Boys Club fund. The Takoma Shamrocks of Happy Newman will meet a special team captained by Julie Singer, Convention Hall assistant manager. The Convention Hall team will be chosen from Julie and Dave Singer, Art Crown, Elwin Shank, Abe and Myer Weinberg and Abe Povich. The Shamrocks will number Happy Newman, Buck McDonald, Rex Stewart, Elmer Wesley, Andy Gleeson and Dutch Sherbahn. Present plans call for a five-game match which will be preceded by a special junior match. Complete details will be given later.

The Sixth Annual Margaret Lynn Tournament is scheduled for Saturday at Arcadia with the first shift of five games to start at 11:30 a. m. The entrance fee is $2, which includes the cost of the games. The tournament is open only to men who have averages of 108 and under and women whose averages are 105 and under, both figures to be scratch. Last year the tournament drew 236 entries with present indications that this total will be bettered. Harney Sets Pace

The D. C. The Police Boys No. 1 took team honors with 623 and 1,778. The last-place Central Duplicating team won all three from Highway Planning.

C. U. Prepares For Ring Bouts With Columbus

Catholic University's Fighting Cardinals and the Explorers of Columbus University, arch boxing rivals, will hold final workouts today in preparation for tomorrow night's second ring meeting between the two schools, scheduled for the former's Brookland gymnasium.

Columbus University ringmen will work tonight at the Jewish Community Center under the watchful eye of Coach Jim McNamara while the Redbirds will hold their drills this afternoon at C. U. under the able direction of Coach Eddie LaFond.

With the long 13-game winning streak snapped by Southwestern Louisiana Institute last week, followers close to Columbus University are confident Coach McNamara has the team to even the score with the Cards and hand them their second lacing in a row.

Of chief interest to followers close to boh schools will be the scrap listed for the 175-pound division which will bring together two popular ring favorites, Coach McNamara, of Columbus, has experienced, hard-hitting Reds Doherty in fine fighting trim, ready for the best fight of his college career when he meets C. U.'s favorite, the highly touted Leo Houck jr.

The son of Penn State's famous boxing coach, Houck opened the season for the Cardinals, winning by an impressive knockout over Lock Haven and then took the measure of the United States Coast Guard's entry the following week. His first setback was suffered two weeks ago against Maryland. An attack of the flu kept him out of action last week against Southwestern Louisiana Institute.

Meanwhile, Doherty has compiled an impressive knockout record for the Explorers. In two meets this season the tall, rangy light-heavyweight has scored quick knockout victories, one with a single punch, the other in the second round.

A heavy advance sale of tickets has been announced by officials of both schools, indicating one of the largest college boxing crowds in history will be on hand. Athletic Director Arthur J. Bergman, of Catholic University, has ordered the setting up of additional ringside seats to handle an expected overflow crowd.

Points Scarce As Mt. Rainier Girls Win, 5-4

Girl basketers of Mount Rainier and Montgomery Blair High Schools set some sort of new record for defensive play yesterday at the latter's gym as the Mounts eked out a 5-4 decision to keep their undefeated record for the season intact.

For more than three periods the teams battled on exactly even terms at a terrific 2-2 pace, and then a field goal by Betty Ott decided things. In the first period little Betty rammed home two free throws to match the two-pointer of Shirley Noonan, of Blair. From then until the last period no more scoring was done.

Finally Winny Martin found the hoop with a foul toss early in the final stanza, but the effort was voided by Lois Barnes' field goal. Miss Ott's crucial counter came shortly afterward, giving her high scoring honors of the game with 4 points.

Uniform Laws For Insurance Urged by Pink

Standardization of insurance laws among the States is advocated by Louis H. Pink, New York State superintendent of insurance, who addressed a meeting Wednesday of the Insurance Club of Washington in the Lee Sheraton Hotel.

"State regulation," he said, " . . . must not be narrow or selfish and must realize that insurance is national and international. The States must work together and substantial uniformity in important matters should obtain."

He added that "those States which insist on narrow and selfish laws for the protection of local groups or classes are not really gaining advantage for themselves or their citizens; they are endangering the entire structure of State supervision and control."

Mr. Pink also advocated revamping of the casualty insurance structure. His department, he said, has received complaints that there are too many companies, too many agents and too many brokers.

"It is undoubtedly true," he said, "that the entire insurance structure is too loosely organized; that there has been too great a tendency for fire companies to create casualty affiliates and vice versa, and for fleets to develop around a strong company. There are too many agents and too many brokers and the compensation is not properly apportioned according to the importance and value of the work.

"Too much money is spent on commissions yet the brokers and agents who render real service are not overpaid. Some revamping of the structure to eliminate waste must be effected and the producing forces must have the courage to meet the issue and clean their own house or in the end someone will be forced to do it for them."

Officers of the Insurance Club of Washington, which was organized 19 years ago, are Howard Eales, president; Albert J. Phillips, vice president; J. H. Pumphrey, treasurer, and Preston W. Grant, secretary.

Scrap Consumption Sets Record in March

By the Associated Press

January domestic consumption of iron and steel scrap reached the record total of 4,278,000 gross tons, or about 45,000 tons above the previous peak in October, 1940, the Institute of Scrap & Steel said yesterday. This compared with 3,950,000 tons in December and 3,581,000 a year ago.

Approximately half the scrap used in January was supplied by dealers, who acquired it from manufacturing plants, railroads, demolition of buildings, peddler collections and various wrecking operations. The other half, "home" scrap, was produced by steel mills and foundries in their manufacturing operations.

Pacific Houses to Drop Extra Stock Charge

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Elimination of the "over-riding" charges levied against Pacific Coast buyers and sellers of securities on the New York Stock Exchange was predicted today after disclosure that the firm of Merrill Lynch, E. A. Pearce & Cassatt planned to resign from the Pacific Coast association of New York Stock Exchange firms.

The special charges, amounting in most cases to $5 more than the regular commissions, have been invoked for more than 20 years, having been imposed when telegraph charges between the two coasts were much higher.

U. G. I. Offer Would Save Bulk of Giant Gas Empire

By the Associated Press

The United Gas Improvement Co. asserted yesterday its readiness to dispose of some outlying units in its $800,000,000 empire, but indicated an intention to challenge the limits to which the Securities Commission might go in enforcing the so-called "death sentence" of the Holding Company Act.

The commission has proposed that the system be reduced to include about $350,000,000 of electric properties in an area roughly 30 by 80 miles centering in Philadelphia, along with some nonutility interests. This would cut off about $275,000,000 of utility properties.

William Clarke Mason, U. G. I. attorney, offered this general outline of what the company believed was required by the act:

It must dispose of Arizona Power Co. in Arizona, Concord Gas Co. and Manchester Gas Co. in New Hampshire, the Wyandotte County Gas Co. in Kansas and the Nashville Gas & Heating Co. in Tennessee and also some nonutility properties, specifically the "ice properties" in the Southwest.

Mason expressed the company's willingness to take those steps, and explained that it had been trying for years to sell those utilities.

He declared that the company believed that its interests in the Connecticut Light & Power Co.—that is, 61 per cent of the voting stock—should be regarded solely as an investment, and that in any event it was untouched by the Federal law because of a Connecticut statute which forbids outside control of a utility in the State.

He said that he did not believe that the Philadelphia Gas Works Co., which operates under lease an estimated $80,000,000 of gas properties owned by the City of Philadelphia, was affected by the proceeding because of the holding company act exemption for governmental units. He contended that the gas works company, which is wholly owned by U. G. I., was merely an agent for the city.

He indicated that his stand with reference to Public Service Co. of New Jersey, in which U. G. I. has a $56,000,000 investment, was similar to that on the Connecticut properties. Public Service has asked the SEC to declare it not to be a subsidiary of U. G. I.

Mason asked for at least ten days in which to prepare to argue three major points, with the expectation that the whole proceeding against U. G. I. might be expedited by rulings on certain questions.

The commission took Mason's request for additional time under advisement.

Remington Arms Sales, Net Jump

By the Associated Press

The 1940 financial report of Remington Arms Co. yesterday showed net income of $1,945,563, equal after preferred dividend requirements to 23 cents a share on common stock. This compared with $1,392,646, or 15 cents a share in 1939.

Net sales for the year were $22,983,554, about 34 per cent greater than in 1939. Sales of military products amounted to about 20 per cent of the total, compared with less than 4 per cent in the previous year.

This was after provision for payment of Federal income and excess profits taxes which in 1940 amounted to $691,168, compared with $249,531 in 1939.

Detroit Edison Co.

Detroit Edison Co. and subsidiaries reported net income for the 12 months ended January 31 of $10,846,172, or $8.52 a capital share, compared with $9,772,355, or $7.65 a share, in the previous 12 months.

Lehigh Portland Cement Co., in its preliminary report for 1940, showed net profit of $2,030,857, or $2.41 a common share, compared with $2,227,221, or $2.71 a share, in 1939. It was stated that no deduction was made for excess profits tax in the belief these earnings are exempt from this tax.

Cutler-Hammer, Inc.

Cutler-Hammer, Inc., manufacturers of electrical equipment, reported 1940 net income of $1,280,894, after inventory fluctuation, Federal and State income and excess profits taxes, equal to $1.94 a share, compared with $814,700, or $1.23 a share, in 1939.

Depreciation Allowances

The amount to be recovered by depreciation is the cost of the property, if acquired by purchase after February 28, 1913. If acquired by purchase prior to March 1, 1913, the basis is the cost of the property, less depreciation sustained prior to March 1, 1913, or the fair market value on March 1, 1913, whichever is greater.

The proper allowance for depreciation is that amount which should be set aside for the taxable year in accordance with a reasonably consistent plan (not neeessarily a uniform rate) whereby the aggregate amount so set aside, plus the salvage value, will at the end of the useful life of the property equal the cost or other basis of the property.

The depreciation rate of a building is not based upon the number of years it will stand before being condemned and razed but on the number of years it will remain habitable or serviceable for the purpose for which constructed.

If the taxpayer builds a new building, the period over which depreciation may be claimed begins at the time the building is completed and capable of being used. Buildings under construction are not subject to a depreciation allowance.

If it is clearly shown that because of economic or other conditions, property must be abandoned at a date prior to the end of its normal useful life, so that depreciation deductions alone are insufficient to return the cost or other basis, a reasonable deduction for obsolescence may be allowed in addition to depreciation. No deduction for obsolescence is permitted because, in the opinion of the taxpayer, the property may become obsolete at some future date.

Listed Stocks Yield 5.7% During Year

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 20.—Holders of common stocks listed in the New York Stock Exchange received an average return of 5.7 per cent on the market price of thes securities during 1940, statisticians of the Exchange Magazine reported today.

The magazine, published by the exchange, said that last year more listed companies than ever before in history distributed cash dividends, and the 5.7 per cent average yield, covering both issues that did and did not pay, established an eight-year record high.

The exchange lists 829 common stocks. Of these, 577 paid a total of $2,098,952,388 in dividends. The year-long average market value of all 829 stocks was $36,664,095,250.

The exchange statisticians found more than 240 common stocks have paid dividends in every year since 1930. And at least 485 have paid in each of the last five years. In the 11 years of 1930 to 1940, inclusive, all listed common stocks have yielded an average of 4.9 per cent in dividends. The top performer last year, from the standpoint of dividends, as compared with market value, was the garment stock group, which paid an average of 8 per cent.

Other high-paying stock groups were: Amusement, 7.8 per cent; foreign companies, 7.6 per cent; financial, 7.5 per cent; shipbuilding and oeprating, 7.4 per cent; automobile, 7.3 per cent, and United States companies operating abroad, 6.8 per cent.

The last-named group, it was explained, consists mainly of firms operating in the Western Hemisphere.

Of 29 groups into which the magazine segregated issues, only one was a unanimous dividend payer.

That was business and office equipment, whose nine stocks all paid, with an average of 5.2 per cent yield.

B. & O. to Purchase $7,500,000 Worth Of Freight Cars

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Directors of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad authorized the purchase of 2,400 freight cars at an estimated cost of approximately $7,500,000.

The board also approved the acquisition, under conditional sale agreements, of four Diesel passenger locomotives of 4,000-horsepower each at a cost of around $1,400,000.

To finance in part the purchase of the new equipment the directors arranged for an issue of equipment trusts of about $6,000,000. The new cars will consist of box, hoppers and gondolas.

The directors also voted to apply $12,909,832 out of the 1940 net income of $16,895,097 pro rata to the payment of secured contingent interest on several of the road's bond issues under the plan for modification of interest charges and maturities adopted two years ago.

Industrial, Rail Stocks Head Sharp Rise On Reports of Planned Tax Modifications

New York, Feb. 20.—The stock market shifted from reverse to first speed forward today and retrieved 1 to around 3 points of recent losses for leading industrials and rails in the best general upswing in nearly four months.

The list acted better at the start and, while there was no buying rush at any time, the steady rallying trend was maintained throughout the session. Although scattered issues finished under their tops, many favorites closed at or near best levels.

The principal fly in the recovery ointment was the continued sluggishness of dealings. Transfers for the five hours totalled 451,630 shares compared with 465,430 yesterday when the direction was downward. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks, however, held a net gain of .8 of a point at 40.7. It was the largest climb in this composite for any day since November 7.

Helping the right-about, brokers said, were reports from Washington Congress was considering some alterations of the tax laws as a means of easing the burden of excess profits levies for corporations. In addition, a little more notice was taken of the optimistic business picture and the opinions of defense authorities that the labor situation was well in hand.

At the same time restraining factors persisted in the fears of a war outbreak in the Far East and apprehension over the United States actually getting into the conflict either in the Atlantic or Pacific.

Constructive items included a more than seasonal jump in freight loadings for the week ended February 15 to the highest mark for any like period since 1930, mounting activities in the building construction field and another increase in bank clearings.

Prominent share gainers were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, General Motors, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Chesapeake & Ohio, Anaconda, Western Union, Coca-Cola, Westinghouse, Du Pont, American Can, United States Rubber, Sears Roebuck, J. I. Case, International Harvester, United Aircraft, Eastman Kodak, Fajardo Sugar, Loft, American Sugar and South Porto Rico Sugar.

Montgomery Ward "A" came back 4 points in the Curb. Lesser improvement was shown for Jones & Laughlin, Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero, American Cyanamid "B," Todd Shipyards and Phoenix Securities. The turnover here approximated 75,000 shares versus 105,000 Wednesday.

Railway loans paced price betterment in the bond market today, with gains among selected carrier issues ranging from 1 to 3 points or more.

Out in front of the pack were Baltimore & Ohio Railway obligations as the market digested news the road was applying nearly $13,000,000 of its 1940 earnings to payment of interest on bonds that have been placed on a contingent basis. The 95s, stamped, "C" closed at 46½, up 3¼; the 2000s, stamped, "D" at 40⅜, up 2⅞; the '96s "F" at 40⅜, up 2⅞; and convertible '60s, stamped, at 16¾, up 1⅞.

United States Government issues closed with gains ranging to 16-32ds of a point.

In the foreign sector, French 7½s of '41, stamped, were 2 higher on sale of two bonds. Gaining part of a point were German 5½s and 7s.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 20 (AP).—Chalking up gains of a cent or more in some cases, wheat prices today extended the recovery that has been under way the past three sessions to about 3 cents from the five-months lows established Monday.

The upturn was based largely on strength of securities, reports of crop damage in the Southwest and scattered mill demand. Buying of previous short sellers to stop losses on the price rise added to the market's support.

Wheat closed at the best level of the day, ½@1⅞ cents higher than yesterday; May, 81¼@81½; July, 76@75⅞. Corn was ⅛@½ lower; May, 61½; July, 60¾; oats unchanged to ⅛ up; soybeans, ¾@1¼ higher; rye, ¼@½ up, and lard, 3@5 higher.

Some traders expressed belief mill demand may have been accelerated as a result of the market's reversal of its recent downward trend, but there was no confirmation of any large-scale business. Washington reports indicating Congressional authorization of extension of the "ever normal granary" program will be sought together with drafting of plans for the wheat quota referendum May 31 silenced recent reports about the possibility of a change in the Government agricultural setup.

Temperatures fell in the Southwest but snow was reported in many sections and the forecast indicated more moisture may be received.

Cost Higher On Taxable U. S. Issue

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 20.—The cost of borrowing was slightly higher today on new security offerings by the Federal intermediate credit banks—securities without the tax exempt feature of former issues.

Charles S. Dunn, fiscal agent, sold $25,000,000 of Federal intermediate credit banks ¾ of 1 per cent consolidated debentures, due in six and ten months, at prices representing slight premiums for both maturities.

The debentures, while exempt from State, municipal and local taxation, are subject to Federal taxation as provided in the Public Debt Act of 1941 signed Wednesday by President Roosevelt.

Except for two issues of defense notes which came to market in December, 1940, and January this year, today's offerings were the first securities to be issued by an arm of the Government which are taxable.

Direct comparison with the last issue of tax-exempt credit bank debentures is not possible because the maturities of the issues offered today are different from the last issue in January, although the coupon of

Listen! with Glynn

The annual theatrical endeavor of WJSV'S sports commentator, Arch McDonald—his appearance in the name role when the Cross Roads Theater Group presented George Kelly's play, "The Show-Off"—was a financial as well as an artistic success, it seems. The show netted proceeds of more than $800 which are to go into a fund for the renovation of Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria—the place where, undoubtedly, George Washington slept many times.

In fact, the presentation of "The Show-Off" was such a success that the Cross Roads Theater Group has decided to give it again, twice, at the Arlington Theater, in Arlington, next Wednesday and Thursday, February 26 and 27.

Miss Peggy Phelps, late of Kansas City and a recent graduate of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri, has joined the staff of WJSV.

Miss Phelps' appearance on the WJSV staff brings its personnel up to 116 busy little workers—well, more or less busy. And that's a number which General Manager A. D. Willard, jr., believes establishes something of a record for size among the radio stations of the country. Until he hears to the contrary he is going along believing it is the country's largest.

"Homes on Parade," a new half-hour program of music and commentary devoted to advice, information and service to home buyers in the Washington vicinity, is to make its debut over WJSV at 1:30 Sunday afternoon.

The Post Radio Time Table

7:30, WINX—Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox speaks on "National Security—Men or Money?"

10:15, WOL—Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, makes a Washington's Birthday eve speech.

10:45, WOL—Corcoran Cadets, local Veterans of the Spanish-American War, broadcast a portion of their annual banquet.

11, WOL—Steve Mamakos and Tony Zale battle for the middleweight championship in Chicago.

Fleming Urges Work Week Be Staggered

By the Associated Press

Bangor, Me., Feb. 20.—Brig. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, wage-hour administrator, declared today that agreements for the payment of overtime for Saturday and Sunday work—simply because it is Saturday or Sunday—should be waived for the present to cut down "weekend blackouts."

The administrator referred to overtime payments, which are not required by law but are arranged for privately to cover the days at the end of the week. The wage-hour law merely requires the payment of time and a half for overtime beyond 40 hours a week.

In a speech prepared for delivery here at a meeting of service clubs, the administrator said:

"Extra legal arrangements whereby Saturday work must be paid for as overtime simply because it is Saturday, can hardly be justified now.

"Overtime beyond 40 hours, whether it happens to fall on Saturday or any other day of the week, should be paid for in accordance with the law, but if the thirty-second to the fortieth hours of the work week fall on Saturday, I do not believe these eight hours should be counted as overtime.

"The Saturday overtime penalty simply prolongs the weekend blackout and discourages the use of additional shifts."

The building trades unions have long required payment of double time for Saturday and Sunday work, but recently proposed to abandon the double-time requirement and apply only time and one-half for weekend work.

Gen. Fleming said the weekend blackout in all industry should be eliminated by the employment of more men on 40-hour week schedules and use of multiple shifts to keep the operation going.

Nazis Greet Cabled Criticism Collect With 'Ha! Ha!' They Say

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 20.—Berlin propaganda officials got such a "kick" out of collect cabled criticism from Americans, a German wireless announcer said tonight, that they sent the office boy out for beer.

And not all the messages the Nazi announcer acknowledged were complimentary.

"My, it was fun to read what Americans had to say," exclaimed the announcer in a short-wave broadcast picked up by C. B..S.

"In fact, we got such a kick out of lauging over the cables received that we all put our money together and had Fritz, the office boy, bring us another round of foaming Munich hofbrau beer from the corner tavern."

Nevertheless, the announcer said that the offer to accept collect cables would end at midnight (E. S. T.) February 22, but that it was hoped the offer could be renewed later "as soon as we have answered those which come in under the closing offer."

At from $2.19 to $3.23 a message, the cables—many of them of an insulting character—crackled to Berlin at the rate of about 5,000 a day for the last few days over facilities of the Radio Corporation of America.

"Of course we took the bad with the good," said the announcer of the "Let's Get Acquainted" program which the Nazis direct to America via shortwave.

"Some of the cablers did not seem to be our most ardent fans and admirers, just as we had expected. The boys around the New York clothing district, as well as up in The Bronx, cabled us a delightful assortment of colloquial messages, which were more fun than a traveling circus."

The messages were described as consisting of "a rather amazing mixture of good American slang, fairly bad German and excellent Yiddish."

It was estimated in New York the collect radio messages cost the Germans around $11,000 a day. Many were rejected because of a law against transmission of obscene or profane matter.
